Wellman's Corners

The annual meeting of the Women's Institute of this place was held in the Orange Hall here on June 25th. In the afternoon Miss MacIntyre explained the cutting and cooking of a whole beef so that you would think that even the neck must be delicious. Miss Rife followed with a clever address.

At the evening session Mr. Robert Totton was chosen chairman, and a good program was given. Miss Mac-Intyre spoke on "Science in the home," and Miss Rife gave an able address on
"The relation between school and home," but owing to the lateness of the hour there was no discussion. During the exercises Misses Totton and Rahnig sang a duet, Miss Iva Reid and Miss Rife each a solo, and Misses Ladel Anderson and Iva Reid a duet, all of which were well rendered. A vote of thanks was tendered to the ladies from a distance and to others who assisted, and the meeting closed with singing the national anthem. The next meeting of the society is to be held at the residence of Mrs. W. W. Draup on the 18th of July. The ladies also gave a vote of thanks to the Orangemen for the use of their Hall.

Mr. Oswald Finnegan and wife, of Westbrook, arrived last week at his uncle's, Mr. James Maybee's, and at present are the guests of Mr. and Mrs.
Butler Rupert.

Word comes from Hanley, Sask., of the marriage of Mr. Samuel Burgess, a former resident of this place, who has been in the west for a few years.

A number from here attended the surprise party at the residence of Rev.
Mr. Balfour on Friday evening. They report a large gathering from the other parts of the circuit, and say they had a splendid time.

Mr. Balfour preached his farewell sermon here last Sunday evening, and his successor, Rev. Mr. Clarke, is expected to occupy the pulpit next Sunday morning.

The people here are expecting to have a great treat at the strawberry and ice cream social at Mr. Fred Snarr's on the 10th. The young folks are saying "Everybody is going, and I wouldn't miss it for anything."

A number from here celebrated Dominion Day by taking in the picnic at Anderson's island.

Mr. Roland Reed, who was quite ill last week, is much better.

Mrs. Burrell Fanning is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Miller, of Bath, are visiting relatives here.

Misses Alice and Jennie Baker, of Warkworth, are guests of Mrs. Roland Reed.

Spring Brook.

At midnight on Saturday the cry of "fire" was heard, and Mr. Nathan Mason's bakeshop was discovered to be on fire. The flames spread so rapidly that it was impossible to enter the building, and nothing was saved. Mr.
Mason was sleeping at his mother's, his wife and child being in Belleville, so no one was in the house or able to get in to save anything. The fire spread to Mr.
Chas. McGee's implement shop, where Mr. Roblin had his new farming implements stored. The machinery was saved, but Mr. Roblin lost some valuable lumber with the building. The men worked heroically to save the adjoining buildings. At one time they thought the hotel would go, as one end burned for some time near the roof before they could cut holes to pour in water. If the hotel shed roof had been shining instead of tin the fire would have made a clean sweep, taking in R.
W. Thompson's residence in its wake, but by tearing off boards, and with the tin roof the fire was finally checked.

The hotel and Mr. McGee's house were nearly emptied of their contents, as at one time they thought neither place could be saved. Heavy quilts nailed on the house and kept wet prevented the house from taking fire, but the heat was so intense that plants inside the window were wilted. The telephone booth burned for some time, and will have to be fixed. Some beautiful rees are badly damaged, some beyond redemption. Mr. Roblin had his foot badly injured by the falling of a drag, a tooth entering the top of his foot, but he kept working until the machinery was all removed to a place of safety.
Mr. Mason's bread wagon was the only thing he saved, it being out in a shed

The Doctor Away from Home When Most Needed

People are often very much disappointed to find that their family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like cramp colic and cholera morbus require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape much pain and suffering and all risk. Buy it now, it may save life. For sale by J. S. Morton.

and removed before the fire reached it.
Mr. McGee's loss will be about $300.
Mr. Mason's loss is not known, but is partly covered by insurance.

Rev. A. L. Brown preached his farewell sermon on Sabbath to a large congregation. The text chosen from Job 6:8. Apparently the feelings of two young ladies were so over-wrought they had to leave the church during the singing of a hymn.

Mrs. D. Nerrie is ill. Dr. Alger is in attendance.

Anson News

Misses Lena and Leafa Johnson are home for the holidays.

Our teacher, Miss Ella Faulkner, left on Saturday for her home in Foxboro.
Before returning she intends visiting friends in Quebec.

Mr. Geo. B. Hagerman has given his house a new coat of paint, which has greatly added to its appearance.

Mrs. G. A. Eggleston has returned from a visit to Rochester, greatly improved in health.

Mr. Pleasant Sunday School celebrated the 1st by having a picnic at Anderson's island. They were invited by the Carmel School, and all report a good time.

Miss Ethel Curtis recently returned from St. Thomas, where she has been attending Alma College.

Messrs. H. W. Hanna and Edgar
Reid are building new barns.

Miss Ella Hubble, of West Huntingdon, is spending the holidays at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas.
Hubble.

The people of Rawdon circuit surprised their pastor and his wife on the eve of their departure for Havelock.
Their many friends regret that they are leaving.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith of Peterboro visited at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Smith, for a few days.

Foxboro Notes

Mrs. Andrew Benedict is seriously ill. Very little hope is entertained of her recovery.

Miss Susie Parliament, of Mountain View, is the guest of Miss Clara Youker.

Mrs. M. Gillen, of Belleville, who has been the guest of Mrs. Stephen Badgley for the past week, has returned to her home.

Miss Ethel Gowsell, of Rainy River, is spending the holidays with her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McCaughn, of Brighton, spent Sunday and Monday renewing old acquaintances.

Mrs. Eliza Wickett, of Belleville, is visiting friends in our midst.

Mr. Jas. Pirrie and Master Willie, of Port Hope, are in attendance at the sick bed of his sister, Mrs. A. Benedict.

Mrs. A. Loucks fell recently, break-

A very sad drowning accident occurred on Monday afternoon. A young lad from near Corbyville, with his brother, were fishing, and decided to wade from the main land to what is known as Snider's island, just above the railroad bridge. The elder lad stepped into a hole, and in trying to help him the younger lad also got in, and sank, never to rise. When found he was grasping tightly something in the bottom of the river. Great sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents.

Madoc Junction Items.

Mrs. E. G. Clarke and little son, of Peterboro, are spending a week with her mother, Mrs. Geo. Clarke.

Several from here attended the garden party at West Huntingdon on Friday evening.

Our teacher, Miss Weir, has gone to her home in Belleville for the holidays.

Falls, are spending a few weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bennett.
Miss Nettie Collins of Crookston, and Miss Annie Clarke of Stirling, spent a few days with Mrs. J. M. Clarke.

Mrs. J. R. Clarke spent Sunday in Stirling with her daughter, Mrs. A. H.
Sealey.

Mr. Herman Bennett of Peterboro spent a couple of days at his home here.
Mrs. Wm. French and son are visiting her aunt, Mrs. Smith, in Campbellford.

Several from here spent the 1st of July in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander are visiting friends in Tweed.

Mrs. Hiram Ashley had the misfortune to fall on Saturday last and fracture her knee.

OR, A SAD LIFE STORY

"Poor boy! poor boy!" she says, over softly twice, moving her head up and down with a little compassionate movement.

At the pity expressed by her gesture, an unjust and unjustifiable hard anger takes harsh possession of him.

"It was a pity you let it go so far," he says, "but I must allow me to say that much; but I suppose, in point of fact, the ball once set rolling, it was past your power to stop it."

She listens to his philippic, with her head meekly bent.

"I did not try," she answers, in a half-whisper; then, after a pause, raising her down-drooping eyes, lit with a blue fire of excitement, almost inspiration, to him, "I said to myself, 'If I have any luck, I shall die before the smash comes.' I feel like a fool from day to day. I had not the heart to stop it; I knew it would stop of itself before long; I had never hardly—hardly ever—correcting herself, as it seems, with a modifying afterthought—"in my life before known what happiness meant; and oh! oh! oh!"—with a groan of deepening intensity at each repeated interjection—"what a big word it is!"

Never—hardly ever—known what happiness meant! Why, surely, she was happy at the Moat! and before his mind's eye there rises an image of her in her riotous rosy gaiety; but even as it does, there flashes upon him a comprehension of her speech.

It is not the careless merriment of childhood to which she is alluding; it is to the happiness, par excellence, of life. If this is the case, why did she correct herself and modify her negative with a "hardly"? A jealous feeling of some one else—somebody beside Byn; a jealousy none the less keen for being vague—not knowing on what object it can lay hold—sharpens his tone as he repeats aloud, and with an accent of interrogation, her qualifying adverb:

"Hardly ever, that implies—"

But she breaks in hurriedly, as if dreading, and at the same time doubting her own power of baffling, cross-examination upon that subject on whose borders they are continually hovering.

"Talking of happiness makes one think of unhappiness, does not it? We both know something about that, do not we?"

She pauses, and she sees—she is alluding to his own sorrow, and that her eye is sounding his to see whether he would wish her to approach it more nearly. His eye, in answer, must give but a dubious beam, since he himself is quite unsure of what she wishes on the subject; and she goes on with the waste and yet unsteadiness of one who is treading on swampy ground, that gives beneath his feet.

"We saw it in the papers; I could not believe it at first. It was the last thing I ever expected to happen. I thought of writing to you, but I did not."

She looks at him rather wistfully, and although but two minutes ago she had been confessing to him her passion for another man, he sees that she is anxious he should tell her that her sympathy would have been precious to him. He feels the same sensation as before of mixed anger and fascination at the duality of her nature. What business has she to care what he would have liked to hear from her or he would have liked to hear from her?

"It seemed such a pity that it was she, and not I!"

Again her eye interrogates him, as if asking for acquiescence in this suggestion, but he cannot give it. With a shock of surprise—may horror—at himself, he finds that he is unable to echo the wish that Elizabeth had died and Amelia lived.

"I said so to mammy at the time. Ah, here is mammy!"

And, indeed, as she speaks the door opens, and Mrs. Le Marchant enters in her walking dress. At the sight of Jim, a look, which certainly does not betoken pleasure, though good breeding prevents her representing the opposite emotion, crosses her handsome worn face.

It brought Mr. Burgoyne in here," says Elizabeth, "because we could not talk comfortably out on the terrace; they listen to everything we say; they have such long ears—the Widow Wadman and Miss Strutt!"

"I do not know what State secrets you and Mr. Burgoyne are about to discuss," replied the mother, with a smile that, though courteous, but ill disguises the underlying anxiety. "Yes, dear child, I shall be very much obliged if you will take my bonnet upstairs for me"—this in answer to little tender overtures from Elizabeth, overtures that remind Jim of 12 bis, Piazza d'Azeglio. "I do not know whether you have yet found it so" (to Jim); "but this is a slack place."

No sooner has the door closed upon her daughter than her tone changes. "What have you been talking about to her?" she inquires rapidly; "not, I hope about him?"

"I could not help it," she asked me."

Mrs. Le Marchant strikes her hands together, and gives utterance to that short and shapeless monosyllable which has a prescriptive right to express vexation.

"Th! th!" A moment later, "I am sure you will understand that I do not mean to imply any ill-will to you; but it is unlucky that we should have happened to meet you there; it has brought it all back to her, and she was just beginning to pluck up her spirits a little."

"Did she—did she take it so to heart?" inquires Jim, in a tone of almost as avowed concern as Elizabeth had employed but a quarter of an hour before in putting nearly the same question with regard to Byn; "

"Did she take it to heart?" repeats Mrs. Le Marchant, with the irritation of one to whom a perfectly senseless and superfluous inquiry is put. "Why, of course she did! I thought at one time that she would have gone out of her mind!"

No one can feel less merry than Jim; and yet his lips at this juncture cannot resist the impulse to frame themselves into a gloomy smile.

"And thought that he would have gone out of his mind," he rejoins.

As he speaks, it flashes upon his memory that one of the hypotheses that have formerly occurred to him to account for the mystery that hangs over Elizabeth's past was that she had been mad; and though he had long abandoned the idea, her losing her wits now recurs to him with a shock as a possibility. Might not that cheerful, mobile, emotional mind lose its balance under the blow either of a sudden calamity or of a long wearing sorrow? It has escaped—evidently but barely the first. Will it escape the second, too?

His heart goes out in a great yearning to her at the thought of what a touching little lunatic she would make; but, with an oblivion of his own personal feelings, which is generous, if not very lasting, he says compassionately:

"It seems a pity—a great pity!"

"A pity!" repeats the mother, with a sort of wrath, down which he detects a broad stripe of agony running; "I should think it was a pity! Pity is a weak word! The whole thing is pitiable! her whole history! If you only knew—"

She breaks off.

He sits waiting to see whether that impulse towards confidence in her will go any further; but it does not, she has evidently gone beyond her intention, and is passionately vexed with herself for having done so.

"They were so well suited to each other," continues Jim slowly, but still generously. Possibly his generosity becomes more easy as he sees how hopeless is the plea upon which he employs it. "Is it—I do not wish to intrude upon your confidence, but in the interest of my friend you will allow me to say that much—is it quite out of the question?"

"Quite! quite!" replies the mother, in painful excitement; "what, poor soul, is not out of the question for her that has any good or happiness in it? and that—that more than anything! If you have any mercy in you, do not put it into her head that it is not."

"If it is not in her head already, I could not put it there," replies Jim gravely; "but I will not—I promise you I will not."

As he speaks, a slight smile touches the corners of his serious mouth as he reflects how entirely easy it is to comply with a request not to urge Byn's suit upon its object, and how cheaply a character for magnanimity may sometimes be bought.

"That is very kind of you!" replies the poor woman gratefully; "and I am sure when you say a thing I can depend upon you for it; and though, of course, it yet you need not see much of her, though it is not in the least out of sight out of mind with her"—sighing—"yet she is very much influenced by the objects around her; and when you are gone—I am sure you do not mean to make a long stay; this is not a place where there is much for a man to do for a man like you—"

She breaks off, and her imploring eye invites him to reassure her by naming a speedy day for his own departure. But magnanimity may have called made upon it that exceeds its power to answer, and Jim's silence sufficiently proves that he is not going to allow himself to be seduced into a promise to go.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The next morning proves the truth of Miss Strutt's words that "we are not so green here in Algiers for nothing." The weather changes some time after dark. A mighty wind arises. Jim's slumbers are broken by the fact that somebody's outside shutters bang, long, low, and noisy all night. The great sign at the top of the hotel swings and creaks and groans. In the morning, as far as trees—eucalyptus, ilex, stone-pine—are all covering and stooping before the wind's lash. The fan palm before Mrs. Le Marchant's window, with its fans all pinched and bent, is staggering before the gale. One cannot conceive what this unlucky tropical product can be doing in this gallery, and it requires a strong effort of reason and will to resist the conviction that the oranges and lemons are tied upon the shivering trees instead of growing naturally there.

"And this is 'Africa's burning strand'!" says Jim to himself, over his breakfast in the sale a manager, through whose shut windows the mad rain forces itself; and the blast, coming to his wet sister's aid, bursts them open now and again.

The day seems enormously long. He gets through the morning tolerably well with letter-writing, and after the twelve o'clock dejeuner he faces the gale in a determined walk down to the town. Selah's has felt the furious scourge of mere tremendous rain. The side-path is whitened with big hailstones; red torrents fear with ferocious speed and violence down that steep incline. The great eucalyptus-leaves, and the plentiful undergrowth, are dripping and rejoicing.

Through the blinding white deluge he gets forlorn peeps of the villas that had shone yesterday with the white splendor one associates with the city of the saints of God; and instead of, as yesterday, "faced with heaven's own tint," the Mediterranean is whitening the bay's crests, and the snow is sprinkling the crests. A few Arabs are sitting on the ground under the Pont d'Isly, packed up into whitish woollen parcels, knees to nose, and arms and hands all withdrawn into the protection of the sheltering burnous. But no one else, who can help it, is abroad.

It seems to Jim as if his disagreeable tussle with the elements had lasted a long time, and yet, on his return to the hotel, he finds that it is only half-past two. He thinks at first that the clocks must have stopped, but finds, on examination, that they are all ticking, and all unanimous. His drenched condition is at least a resource, necessitating an entire and fundamental change of raiment; but even this expedient, though dragged to its utmost possible limit, does not carry him further than three. How is he to dispose of the seven or eight hours that must elapse before he can seek refuge in bed? He has exhausted his correspondence, which is never a large one, and he has seldom in his life been so short of books.

He makes his way through the hall, which is crammed with young people playing battledore, and noisily counting; with elder persons, dreadfully short of a job, looking on and applauding; to a salon, in hopes of there finding a Taine novel, or even a superannuated Pall Mall World. But half a dozen other weather-bound sufferers have been before him, and the tables are swept clean of all literature save a three-months-old Court Journal.

Miss Strutt and the pert votary of Whitley are sitting shawled, and with their heads close together. By their titlers, and the fragments he catches of their talk, they seem to be concocting a practical joke of some kind. The widow Wadman, shawled too, and her valetudinarian in a comforter, are slopping over a wood fire, which refuses to burn, the scotch being wringing wet. Jim rather indelicately approaches them, and offers his assistance in piling the damp logs; but he is so evidently depressed that he retires discomfited. On the other hand, the invitation in Miss Strutt's and her coadjutor's eye is so apparent that he beats a hasty retreat out of the room, in dread lest he should be drawn into their mysterious pleasantry.

He never is quite clear afterwards how he gets over the temptation to intervene before dinner—whether sleep comes to him, or whether he is after all reduced to perusing in the Court Journal the narrative of which direction the Queen and Princess Henry of Battenburg took their walk in, in October. But at length the welcome bell rings, drowning even, for two minutes, the banging of the wind, and a whole hotel, unwittingly put upon its feet, rushes in to greet him. People who have hitherto scarcely exchanged words, have eyed each other with hardly veiled distrust, now show a feverish desire to enter into conversation, to detain one another after dinner on the steps of the sale a manager.

As the evening advances, Jim sees an intention among the younger portion of the company to launch out into noisy, romping games, to institute a Dumb Crambo. He feels it far from impossible that he himself may fall so low as to be sitting at the table, and he goes on to him, but before he succumbs he makes one effort on his own behalf. He embraces a desperate resolution. He has seen the Le Marchant's eating their dinner near, and yet helplessly far from him. Elizabeth had given him one furtive smile, and her mother a hurried nod, but he has not seen the truth, all the encouragement he has to go upon—that he can find to keep his courage up as he knocks at their door, telling himself that his excuse—that of asking them to lend him a book—is a quite sufficient and legitimate one. He knocks, and Elizabeth's voice at once answers:

"Herein!"

It is clear that she takes him for the German waiter, Fritz. She remains in this belief even after he has opened the door, since she does not at first look up. She is also in the great room, the room in which she had yesterday received him, but in the first and less adorned of the little series—one that he had on his former visit, cursorily surveyed to be chiefly used as an anteroom to the sitting room, and before her are spread writing-materials, over which she is stooping. An odious and ridiculous thought darts, with a prick, across his mind.

Is she sitting here, all alone, in order to write to Byn; "

"I came," he begins; and at the unexpected voice she looks up with a start.

"Oh, it is you!" she says in a low key, glancing rather apprehensively at the closed door, which separates them from the inner room, in a manner which tells him that her parents are within.

"I came," his voice almost unconsciously sinking to the level hers has indicated to him—"to ask you to lend me a book."

"A book!" she repeats dubiously, with another and still more nervous glance at the shut door; "I am afraid that they are all in there."

"Oh, it is of no consequence!" rejoins Burgoyne hastily, willingly quoting the words of the immortal Mr. Tools; "it does not matter in the least."

ENGLISH LAND HUNGER

CARL CARRINGTON SHOWS HOW IT IS BEING MET.

Young Men Cannot Marry Because They Cannot Get a Decent Home.

The root of all real social advancement was to get the people back from the towns to the country and to keep the people at present on the land from going to the towns. Thus spoke Earl Carrington, President of the Board of Agriculture, at an open-air demonstration at Buntingford, England. In one village of Cambridgeshire, he said, he knew of forty-two young men who would be glad to get married, but could not because they could not get a decent home to take a woman into, or proper food for their little children. That difficulty could be overcome if they could get a small piece of land at a fair rent. He hoped the small holdings and allotments bill would cause

A PEACEFUL REVOLUTION

in the country.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman had entrusted him with 62,000 acres of Crown lands, and when he took over the task there were only forty-four small holders on all the land. During the very brief period in which he had been Commissioner of these Crown lands there had been spontaneous applications for small holdings from eleven out of the fourteen different counties in which the lands were situated.

From South Lincolnshire he had received eighty-seven written applications for 2,800 acres of land. The majority of these applications had only allotments or small holdings at present, but they owned 497 head of cattle and stock, in addition to cash which amounted altogether to £3,340. They stated that they could invest £10 per acre, and could produce bank books to show the accuracy of their statement.

"I trust," added Lord Carrington, "before the end of this year to have satisfied fifty per cent. of the present demand in this locality without depriving a single farm tenant of his land or his liberty."

From Yorkshire (the President of the Board of Agriculture continued), he had received from residents

IN ONE PARISH ALONE,

fifteen applications for 500 acres. He was informed that in this particular parish there were 3,600 acres, of which 2,000 were farmed by four farmers, three of whom were non-residents, having farms in other parishes. In this case, also, the majority of the applicants had cash in addition to experience.

Lord Carrington gave other instances of the "land hunger" and how it is being met. In Cambridgeshire a farm of 17 acres had been unlet for two years because a tenant could not be found. Now it has been let to eighty-two tenants for allotments and small holdings. There was still an unsatisfied demand, and he could easily let 500 acres more if he had the land. In Yorkshire he had let to the local authority 4,500 acres for further development as small holdings and allotments.

SHEEP NOTES.

Sheep will pay upon land that will not afford sufficient grazing for the lambs in clean quarters and clean troughs. Sheep are profitable stock only when a profitable kind is kept and in a profitable manner.

Sheep while clearing the land of foul growth fit it for better growth by fertilizing it.

Regular feeding with poor feed is preferable to give feed given in a slipshod way.

The windings, both liquid and solid, of the sheep are more easily and evenly scattered over the ground.

Sheep have this advantage of involving less planning, less machinery, less labor and less expense when intelligently followed.

Sheep keeping should be largely a matter of dollars and cents, and the aim should be to receive the largest profits.

Sheep will work up the litter given them much finer than will cows, thus making their manure more easily handled.

The lots with sheep is less and of a much cleaner and pleasant kind than with hogs or cattle or even horses.

The profits of sheep husbandry come rather from steady conditions of the flock than from the price at which wool is sold in the markets.

COMPLETE DEFENCE.

"We propose to show, gentlemen of the jury," said counsel for the defence, "that it is impossible for the defendant to have committed this crime."

"In the first place, we will prove that the defendant was nowhere near the scene of the crime at the time the crime was committed."

"Next, we will offer the indisputable testimony of persons who saw defendant on the spot, and who did not see defendant commit the crime."

"We will show that no poison was found in the body of the deceased."

"Not only that, but we will prove that it was put there by the prosecution in its case."

"We will furthermore show that the deceased committed suicide."

"And last, but not least, we will prove, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the deceased is not dead."

"In view of all which corroborative facts, gentlemen of the jury, we respectfully submit for an acquittal."

THE WHITE STAR LINER "ADRIATIC"

Description of the Finest Steamship in the World.

The finest steamer that has ever crossed the Atlantic recently arrived in New York. Needless to say we refer to the new White Star liner Adriatic, that splendid mammoth which has just been completed by the great Belfast shipbuilding firm of Harland and Wolff. Biggest of all British twin-screw steamers, fitted with every possible contrivance for enhancing the comfort and safety of those on board, superbly decorated throughout her passenger accommodation, the Adriatic may be said to attain that reputedly unattainable degree—perfection.

She is not the first ship of her name which has sailed under the White Star flag. Thirty-five years ago, when the late Mr. T. H. Ismay was building up the world-wide reputation which his company has ever since enjoyed, there was launched at Belfast, the premier Adriatic. That vessel, no doubt, was regarded at the time as a wonderful creation, but if placed alongside her successor of to-day she would cut but a sorry figure. Indeed, the contrast between the two boats affords so striking an illustration of the developments which have taken place in the steamship world that we will venture on a few figures. The tonnage of the first Adriatic was 3,887 gross; that of the second is 25,000 gross. The dimensions of the older vessel were—Length 449 feet 6 inches; breadth 40 feet 9 inches; and depth 30 feet. Those of the new one are—Length 725 feet 9 inches; breadth 75 feet 6 inches; depth 50 feet. The total number of passengers which the first Adriatic could carry was 869, whereas accommodation for 3,000 is provided.

ABOARD THE PRESENT LINER.

In designing the latest addition to their fleet the White Star management have followed their well-known policy of thoroughness. The most minute attention has been paid to every detail which can make for additional comfort, while a number of new features of high importance have been introduced. For example, there are Turkish baths on board the Adriatic, luxuries which now make their appearance aboard for the first time.

They comprise the usual hot, temperate, and cooling rooms, shampooing rooms, plunge bath, and massage couches. They will certainly not suffer from lack of patronage. It is difficult, indeed, to imagine anything that could more materially assist towards relieving the monotony of a sea voyage.

For more strenuous natures, for those who prefer a life of action to one of the otium cum dignitate order, there is a lavishly-fitted gymnasium. From the dining saloon on the lower deck an electric lift runs up to the boat deck, calling at the promenade decks en route. A "dark room" for amateur photographers has not been overlooked; whilst the usual barber's shop, with all the latest improvements, is duly in evidence.

One of the great features of the Adriatic's passenger accommodation throughout is its roominess. The great breadth of the ship, coupled with the exceptional height between the various decks, has rendered it possible to provide staterooms of a size far in advance of any to which the ocean voyager has hitherto been accustomed. In the case of the Adriatic they are lofty, well-lighted, and perfectly ventilated; and there is, moreover, the additional attraction that no less than seventy-six of them are a condition which every steamship traveller will appreciate to the full. We know of no other vessel which has anything like so large a number. When we come to deal with the decorative scheme of the new White Star liner, we are confronted by a serious difficulty, in order to give any really adequate impression of the richness and elegance of the apartments on board this grand vessel, we should require the assistance of colored illustrations. Nothing in the way of pen-pictures or "mou" in black-and-white photographs can convey any true idea of the sumptuous manner in which the task of ornamenting the passenger quarters on board the Adriatic has been carried out.

We will, however, do our best to sketch out the salient features. The first-class dining saloon, situated on the upper deck and extending across the full width of the ship, is painted in a pearly-white. Overhead there is a vast canopy, the leaded glass therein being alternate panes of white and pale yellow.

Immediately beneath the bottom of the dome is a frieze of paintings depicting scenes in Switzerland, Italy, the Rhineland, and the Yellowstone Park. Instead of the old-fashioned long tables, the up-to-date restaurant system of small tables has been adopted, an innovation which should tend greatly towards less "starchiness" and greater conviviality at meal-times.

For recreative purposes a handsome piano, encased in oak inlaid with fine woods, has been placed in this saloon, but the musical arrangements do not end here, for the Adriatic will carry her own orchestra.

From the dining saloon we come, in the natural sequence of events, to the smoke room, an ideal apartment for votaries of the weed. Its walls are clothed with figured leather, and inlaid with pictures of events famous in the annals of

BRITISH NAVAL HISTORY.

The windows are of stained glass, and the seats and tables of mahogany, the whole effect creating being one of mellow richness.

Not far away, and on the same deck as the smoke room, is an apartment known on board as "The Lounge." This title, we consider, is far too prosaic. Picture a large and airy room, panelled in oak, furnished in exquisite taste, with the light filtering through "storied" windows, richly dignified. People it with graceful figures, clad in the latest "creations" from Paris; scatter here and there a few specimens of the mere man genius engaged in ardent flirtation with the owners of the graceful figures aforesaid, and you will have a scene which seems to call for something more romantic in the way of nomenclature than that chronicled above. If we might venture on a suggestion, we should say that "The Turtle Dovecote" would be more in keeping.

A third luxurious apartment on the boat deck is the reading and writing room, wherein the studiously-inclined passenger may beguile the time with a book or cling his consciousness up to date. Daintily decorated, panelled with paintings after the styles of Bartolozzi, Boucher, and Cipriani, and furnished in a fashion which is at once elegant and comfortable, this delightful retreat, we should imagine, would be the very spot wherein a poetically-minded traveller might invoke his Muse to great advantage. Special attention, by the way, has been paid to the lighting arrangements, movable electric lamps being provided for the benefit of those who like to seek out quiet corners for themselves.

The second-class accommodation on board the Adriatic is situated immediately abaft the first-class quarters. It includes a handsome dining saloon, with seating accommodation for 700 persons, a smoke room and a ladies' room. The decorative scheme throughout these quarters might well be said to be no many years ago, would have been regarded as exceptionally fine in the first-class division of an ocean liner. The ladies' room, for example, is ceilinged with Linerista, floored with parquet, panelled with light satinwood, and

FURNISHED IN MAHOGANY: the smoke room is framed in oak with a walnut dado and leather upholstery; while the saloon is decorated in white and gold. Moreover, those little extra conveniences which were once regarded as the special prerogative of the first-class passengers are here found making their appearance in the second-class quarters, such, for instance, as a barber's shop.

The third-class accommodation aboard the Adriatic is situated, part of it abaft the second-class and part forward. It is spacious, airy, and thoroughly comfortable in every way.

And now, having dealt with individual details in the arrangement of this mighty vessel, let us regard her for a moment as a whole. Colossal in her proportions, yet graceful in appearance, strong enough to defy the elements in their most terrible moods, yet filled with the most delicate and intricate machinery, she represents the very highest product of brains, money, and long experience. Her passengers, unless they look over the side, need hardly know that they are aboard. The Marconi apparatus keeps them in continuous touch with the rest of the world, and they can, with a very slight stretch of imagination, persuade themselves that they are living in some Utopian city of the future, where all is bright, cheerful and refined.

STANDARD BANK STATEMENT.

Shows Increase in Total Assets for the Year of $2,881,529.

The statement presented to the thirty-second annual meeting of the shareholders of the Standard Bank of Canada was a most satisfactory one. During the past year the capital has been increased by $356,112, making it $1,540,430. The reserve fund now stands at $1,610,430, an increase for the year of $356,112, this being the premium on new stock issue. The balance carried forward on the profit and loss account was $103,529, an increase for the year of $73,738. The deposits have increased $1,536,812 during the year and disbursements also show an increase of $1,935,525. Total assets, which now stand at $20,626,610.87 are greater than last year by $2,881,529. Quick assets, cash, Dominion notes, legal tender, now amount to $6,119,739. The percentage earned on capital was 1.78 per cent, of which 12 per cent was paid to shareholders; $10,000 was written off bank premises, and the balance carried forward to the profit and loss account. Mr. W. F. Cowan and Mr. Frederick Wylde were re-elected president and vice-president respectively.

WASPS DIE IN HOT WATER.

A Pointer on How to Kill the Pest, as Told by a Farmer.

"Most people think of hornets and yellow jackets as strictly country products, but as a fact, the big vegetable gardens in the south-western part of the city are very well supplied with both," says a farmer.

"Of course, at this season of the year they give very little trouble, but in the autumn, when fall ploughing is in progress, it is a very common thing to turn up a nest of ground wasps and then there is generally a runaway in two directions, for, the wasps are ill-tempered when disturbed, attack both the farmer and his horse; the latter takes one direction and the farmer makes tracks in another.

"It is a very easy matter to exterminate the wasps before beginning to plow, so when a gardener notices there is a nest of them anywhere on his land, he prepares for them before he plows. He takes a common earthenware jug, about half-full of very hot water, sets it down close to the mouth of the wasp's nest, puts on a pair of gloves, covers his head and neck with a handkerchief under his hat, gives the nest a poke with a long pole, and runs. The angry wasps come by hundreds, and seeing nothing unusual but the jug, they attack it with might and main, diving down through the narrow neck, apparently under the impression that their enemy is hidden inside. The hot water kills them, but those that are not immediately drowned keep up a tremendous buzzing, which seems to exasperate still further all the wasps within hearing, and it looks as though they can't get into the jug fast enough.

"I have several times taken over a thousand drowned wasps out of the jug after a raid, for so long as a wasp is left, he makes for the mouth of the jug, and the whole nest can be exterminated in this way. It is a queer illustration of stupidity on the part of an otherwise intelligent insect, but the trick never fails to work."

UNUSUAL FINANCIAL STRENGTH.

The annual report of the Merchants Bank of Canada was made public at the forty-third yearly meeting, held at the head offices of the Bank in Montreal on Wednesday the 19th of June.

The unusual position of strength and the splendid progress of this banking institution affords a lesson in careful management, which some of the newer banks might well follow. This results naturally, of course, from the Merchants Bank being fortunate enough to have on its Board of Directors and among its Officers many names of prominence in Canadian financial circles.

Those who have funds of their own or trust funds to deposit would do well to look carefully into the personnel of a bank's directorate, and weigh their reputations when deciding where to place their money. The character of the Board and Officers of a bank has, of course, everything to do with its progress and safety for the depositor.

As a result of traditionally careful management the combined reserve fund and paid-up capital stock of the Merchants Bank in this year reached the splendid total of $10,000,000. The business of the bank for the year ending May 31st, 1907, shows an increase in net profits to the extent of over $200,000. They have reached this year the enormous amount of almost one million dollars, or $989,660.06, which was disposed of in dividends to the extent of $480,000, and $400,000 was added to the reserve fund. The bank has gained in the year over $3,000,000 in deposits.

A careful inspection of these figures only serves to emphasize the real progress made by the Merchants Bank. M. E. F. Hebdon has now had two years to show his ability, and no one will quarrel with the results as they appear.

TIMES HAD CHANGED.

"Did you and pa start with plenty of money?" asked the daughter.

"We lived upon very little else but love, dear," was the mother's gentle answer.

"But I suppose pa soon got lots of money?"

"No, dear, it was a great struggle at first."

"Then how did you manage? Pa had a little in the bank?"

"Not a farthing."

"Oh, my George is in just the same position, and we have ever done so. If that penniless adventurer ever dares to enter this house again, I will tell him what I think of him! Go to your room at once!"

Mr. Poodle knew well the value of an initial laugh which it is so necessary to introduce into the beginning of a speech, to put the audience in a good temper, and especially so when a discussion of some weighty and intricate subject is to follow.

"Astronomy tells us," he began, "according to our learned friend who has just sat down after his most interesting remarks on that fascinating science, that an express train, travelling at the rate of one hundred miles an hour, would take several million years to reach a certain star."

He paused and beamingly looked round on the assembled company.

"That was the statement," said one of the audience.

"I was just thinking," went on Mr. Poodle, "what a predicament a man would be in if he missed the last train and had to walk!"

EASILY REMEDIED.

A workman, on coming home one evening, was asked by his wife to look at the clock. She complained that it had been silent all day, and she could not tell the reason.

Her husband took it down and examined it carefully. Then he took off the hands and face, and looked at the works with the aid of a magnifying glass.

Next he blew into it with a bellows, oiled the wheels, and put it back again. But still it would not strike. Tired and puzzled, he went off to bed.

Next morning at breakfast his wife said to him:

"George, I think I can tell what is wrong with the clock."

"Well, what is it?" he sharply asked.

"It wants winding up," said his partner.

A SERIOUS SNEEZE.

Young Woman's Backbone Put Out of Joint by Sneezes.

Miss Maude Warrington, No. 1348 Figueroa street, Los Angeles, California, sneezed her backbone out of joint the other day. She disarticulated the lumbar vertebrae by the violence of her sneezes, and heard the joints pop out of position.

It was just a simple, every-day sort of sneeze that did the damage, a sneeze that should have been mildly enjoyable, but it kept Miss Warrington in a state of excessive pain for three days, and has made her very much afraid of indulging again in what has proved such an expensive injury.

As the titillation of the sneeze reached its emphatic degree, Miss Warrington was convulsed. For a moment the effort and as she jerked-jerked, she heard a sharp snap about her person, and the next instant was overwhelmed with pain and realized that something serious had happened to her spinal column.

She became prostrated at once and could hardly summon help. Aid was sent for to the California Hospital, and a physician, after a hasty examination, saw the trouble, and by a painful but not serious process replaced the rebellious vertebrae.

Medical men generally say that this is the first instance of a sneeze producing such a serious result. Dislocations of the vertebrae are not at all common in medical practice, occurring only occasionally from violent causes.

Miss Warrington, who is a very pretty young woman, is now entirely recovered, but her suffering until the dislocation was corrected was agonizing, as it affected her entire nervous system and especially the acutely susceptible sciatic nerve. The pain was described as being almost as intense in every portion of her body as it was at the seat of the injury, and her endurance would have been exhausted if proper aid had not been provided when it was.

The Standard Bank OF CANADA

The Thirty-second Annual Meeting of the Bank was held at the Head Office on Wednesday, the 19th instant, at 12 o'clock noon.

The chair was taken by the President, Mr. W. F. Cowan, and Mr. George P. Schreiner, Manager, acted as Secretary to the meeting. The following Report was presented:

The Directors, in presenting to the Shareholders the thirty-second Annual Report of the Bank, have pleasure in calling attention to the satisfactory results for the year ending 31st May, 1907.

After making the usual provision for Bad and Doubtful Debts, Rebate of Interest on unmatured Bills under discount, etc., the profits amount to $515,612.20 being 17.82 per cent. on the average paid-up capital of the Bank for the year. To this has been added $356,112, the premium on new stock issued at 200, which, together with the balance of Profit and Loss Account of $31,791.72 brought forward, makes up the sum of $639,551.92.

This amount has been appropriated as follows:

Quarterly Dividend No. 63, paid Sept. 1st, 1906, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum	$ 36,347 33
Quarterly Dividend No. 64, paid 1st Dec., 1906, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum	40,525 54
Quarterly Dividend No. 65, paid 1st March, 1907, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum	44,948 00
Quarterly Dividend No. 66, payable 1st June, 1907, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum	46,059 69
Reduction of Bank Premises, etc.	10,000 00
Transferred to Reserve Account from premium on new stock	356,142 00
Balance carried forward to Profit and Loss Account	103,529 43
	$639,551 92

During the year a second allotment of $312,500 to Shareholders of record was made at 100 per cent. premium out of the increased authorized capital.

General By-laws will be submitted for the sanction of the Shareholders, including one changing the date of the closing of the financial year from the 31st day of May to the 31st day of January; also a By-law authorizing the Directors to establish an Officers' Pension Fund and to contribute annually from the funds of the Bank in assisting this Fund.

Branches or Sub-branches of the Bank have been established during the year at Belleville, Bond Head, Cambray, Cobalt, Cobourg, Grafton, Lindsay, Ottawa, Priceville, Stoney Point, Toronto (corner Charles and Yonge Streets), and Woodville, making a total of forty-seven Branches, all in the Province of Ontario.

The Head Office and Branches of the Bank have been carefully inspected during the year, and the duties of the staff have been efficiently discharged.

THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1907.

Canada's Natal Day

The Dominion of Canada on Monday last was forty years old. It was on July 1, 1867, that the fathers of Confederation, under the leadership of Sir John Macdonald, brought into one grand national union the two provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, now known as Ontario and Quebec, together with New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Of the thirty or forty men who took part in the deliberations that brought about this momentous result, only two are now living, namely, the Hon. Sir Charles Tupper, B.C., and the Hon. A. A. Macdonald, senator, born on Feb. 14, 1828.

The example thus set was speedily followed by other provinces, and in 1871 "Canada" meant a vast Dominion, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific. At the time of Confederation the whole of the great region in the west was the preserve of the Hudson's Bay Company, but a bargain was completed in 1869 by which Canada paid to the Hudson's Bay Company $1,500,000 and took over the Canadian west, one of the conditions being that the company should have one-twentieth of all the land in the country as it was surveyed.

As soon as this territory was acquired the demand began for a railway across the continent, and indeed British Columbia came into the Confederation on the express understanding that such a line would soon be built. The difficulties of building such a railway, 3,000 miles in length, were enormous. There was the wild region of rocks and forests north of the Great Lakes to be traversed, then that "great lone land," the prairie, of whose real value very few had formed an adequate estimate, and lastly the stupendous Rockies, which, with their solid bulwarks, rushing rivers, and mighty ravines, seemed to present an impassable barrier to such a thing as a railway. But almost anything can be accomplished if the people are willing to pay the price. In this instance the price was more than $200,000,000, which represented $50 per head for every man, woman and child in Canada. An undertaking so serious demanded magnificent courage to carry it through, but once begun there was no turning back, and in 1885 the joining together of the east and the west by a link of steel became an accomplished fact, the last spike of the railway being driven on Nov. 7 of that year. The first through train for Vancouver left Montreal on June 13 of the following year, and it was a remarkable coincidence that on that very day the town of Vancouver was totally destroyed by fire, 50 lives being lost and only four houses left standing. From that day Canada was an unbroken Dominion, and though there were to be years of stress and struggle, still she entered on a heritage greater than she knew.

At the time of Confederation there were 2,278 miles of railway in operation, which had increased in 1895 to 10,773. Ten years after it was 15,977, and it is now estimated that there are something like 25,000 miles of railway in operation in the Dominion, with the prospects of enormous extensions in the near future, for to the Canadian Pacific two other transcontinental railways will soon be added, namely, the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern, besides many other lines of lesser magnitude in all parts of the Dominion, so that by the end of the present year careful estimates warrant the belief that there will be 28,000 miles of railway in Canada.

The progress of Canada during these forty years has been steadily onward. For many years the advancement was slow, but during the past ten years she has made rapid strides, and in wealth and population is increasing rapidly, and attracting attention from nearly all over the world.

Address and Presentation

On Tuesday afternoon, June 25th, a number of the people of S. S. No. 1, Rawdon, met at the school and presented their teacher, Miss Estella Cragg, with the following address, accompanied by a handsome ladies' companion and a souvenir pin:

DEAR MISS Cragg.—The last lessons of the first term of school have been given this afternoon, and we, your pupils, are deeply grateful that they are the last of the many useful and judicious teachings you have so nobly bestowed upon us during the past two years and a half. Your abilities as a teacher have been evinced by the progress we have been enabled to make and your example, as well as your teaching, cannot fail to leave an impression upon us morally as well as educationally. Though very firm when necessary you have exercised much love and patience, and in return have won our admiration and esteem.

While we regret your loss we congratulate you on the step you are taking, and unite in wishing you all possible success. In going, may your sphere of usefulness, your location, be much more extended and many talents which your Master has entrusted to your keeping be wisely spent in his service, that you may at last hear the words, "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

We ask you to accept this lady's companion and souvenir pin as a memento of our love and good will, hoping it may be a reminder to you of our love and appreciation, casting all remembrance of our short comings, which at times must have grieved you, into the "sea of forgetfulness."

Signed on behalf of your pupils,
BESSIE McGEHEE,
FLORENCE McGEHEE,
Bridget Road, June 25th, 1907.

Miss Cragg thanked the pupils and people of the community for their many kindnesses and encouragement given to her, and assured them that her work among them would always be held in pleasant remembrance by her.

Our Home

Its Privileges, and Our Duties to Parents and Teachers

By MISS KATIE MINCHIN, STIRLING HIGH SCHOOL.

In Ontario children have splendid privileges for receiving an education to furnish them with the necessary knowledge to earn their living. The child in the country at the age of five enters the Public School, and there the foundation of its career in education is started. The child remains in the Public School usually seven or eight years, and many successful business men have had no higher education than that which they received there. In the Public Schools of Ontario children obtain such a knowledge as will be useful to them in after life, and if the parents wish them to receive a higher education they can send them to a High School, Collegiate Institute, College, or University, which are schools of a higher order. All the Public Schools in Ontario are free, while the High Schools are either free or almost so.

Though in Ontario there are great privileges for receiving an intellectual education, there is not such a privilege for learning politeness and courtesy and respect to parents and teachers as we see in the old countries. One reason for this is—when Canada was its youth it was chiefly settled by the lower class from the old countries, who were not cultured or refined themselves. Canada, at the time of these early immigrants, was a forest, and it took a great deal of pains and perseverance on the part of these settlers to clear its broad acres and make Canada what it is at the present time, a grand and fruitful country. We can see from this that the early settlers had little or no time for teaching their children respect to parents and teachers, paying more attention to the making of a home.

Most children naturally follow in their parents' footsteps, doing and saying what their parents do and say. At a very early age the child begins to copy its parents, and what the children receive at this early age will seldom leave them when they become older.

The duty of parents is to train a child to respect its parents and teachers in school and out of school. To make this training bear fruit it must start when the child is very young, and what the child has learned in those years will cling to it as long as it lives. Solomon says in Proverbs 22:6: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Parents who are careless about their children's training cannot expect them to be as respectful as children who have received proper training. Many parents think that they are doing their duty when they feed and clothe their children, but according to both reason and Scripture it is the duty of parents to train their children, and when children do not respect their parents and teachers they are not likely to respect ministers or the higher claims of religion.

Every person's duty is to respect and honor their parents, teachers, ministers of the Gospel, and those in authority over them. Persons who are polite to those about them are thought a great deal more of by everybody, and children cannot be polite unless they have received the proper training.

The Decalogue, which was written on two tables of stone, contains on the first table four commandments which state "Thou shalt love God, the first one being 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me,'" while in the second table are the remaining six commandments, which state our duty to man, beginning with "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." Therefore it must be the most important duty for us with respect to man, and it is the only command in which a promise is given.

In many ways children are disrespectful to their parents and teachers, and sometimes they are disobedient and deceitful, and many times address them as they should not. If our parents or teachers ask us to perform an errand or task for them it is our duty to do it and not try to avoid doing it, which would be disobedience. Paul says in Colossians 3:20: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is just pleasing unto the Lord." Then, in the way we address our parents and teachers; if we do it properly we receive credit. In many cases we hear children speak of their father as "the old man," and of their mother as "the old lady." This is not honoring nor respecting their parents.

The great need of our country at the present time in the training of children is first, to train them in honesty and truthfulness; second, to train them to respect their parents, teachers, ministers of the Gospel, and those in authority over them; third, to train them in politeness, courtesy and refinement. After, or along with this, let them proceed with their intellectual studies.

Letter of Condolence

To Mr. Hiram Dufoe, Harold.

DEAR SIR KNIGHT AND BRO.—It was unanimously resolved at the last regular meeting of St. Thomas East R. B. P. No. 28, that we, the officers and members of said Preceptory, extend to you our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in the irreparable loss you have sustained by the death of a kind and loving wife, one who was honored and respected by all who knew her.

But bound as we are in a great Christian brotherhood your sorrow is our sorrow and your loss is our loss. Our prayer is that God, who saw fit to call your dear wife to his eternal home, may comfort and console you in this your darkest hour of sorrow. Words can poorly express the sympathy we wish to convey to you; they are inadequate to the occasion. Therefore we would point you to Him who is the Grand Master of the universe, and while we deeply regret her demise she is only gone on before, where she is free from all sufferings and care, there to await the home-coming of a devoted husband, who is left behind. Truly we may say in the language of the poet,

Friend after friend departs,
Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts,
That finds not here an end.

Signed on behalf of the Preceptory, 208,
WILLIAM MARTIN, Reg.

Flattering, but a Knock.

"Even with flattery," said Mark Twain at a dinner, "you can't please some men. I remember when I was a reporter in Virginia City there was a doctor I liked—I had camped once on Lake Tahoe with him—and in an obituary I decided to give him a card. I wrote, 'Dr. Sawyer was called in, and under his prompt and skillful treatment the patient died Monday.' But Dr. Sawyer, somehow, wasn't pleased."

An Insinuation.

Mrs. Ginger—How dare you talk to me in that way? I never saw such impudence. And you call yourself a lady's maid, do you? The Maid—I was a lady's maid before I worked for you, m'am.

Much Worn.

"These trousers are very much worn this season," said the tailor, displaying his goods.
"So are the ones I have on," replied the poet sadly.

I never knew a rogue who was not unhappy.—Junius.

In the Waist.

She was examining her new waist by the aid of the big mirror. "Dear me," she exclaimed pettishly, "I can't see anything pretty in this!"
"Well, I can," chuckled the young man who was sitting on the sofa.
"Really? And what do you see pretty in it?"
"Why, you."

And then she blushed and said she thought the waist was just too lovely for anything.

Progress.

Progress in the sense of acquisition is something, but progress in the sense of being is a great deal more. To grow higher, deeper, wider as the years go on, to conquer difficulties and to acquire more and more power, to feel all one's faculties unfolding and truth descending into the soul—this makes life worth living.

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my book on either Dyspepsia, the Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are many, symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weakness of these nerves and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy ever claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for blotting, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me to-day for sample and free book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by J. S. Morton.

LEGAL ADVICE.

A Story Showing How Foolish It is to Try to Get It For Nothing.

A young lawyer moved into a town where there was only one lawyer before—an old judge.

A close friend of the old judge thought there was a good chance to get some legal advice from the young man gratis, so he dropped into his office, told him how glad he was that he had come into town, because the old judge was getting superannuated, and contrived in the course of his talk to get the legal information he wanted, and then bidding him good morning he was about to leave when the young man asked for his fee. "What for?" said the old man. "For legal advice," replied the young lawyer.

"How much is it?" "Five dollars." The farmer declared he would never pay it if he didn't see the young lawyer. So the farmer trotted down to see the old judge, whom he found hoeing in his garden, and said, "Judge, I went this morning just simply to make a neighborly call on that young scamp of a lawyer who has just come into town and he charged me $5." "Served you right," said the judge. "You'd no right to go to him." "Well, have I got to pay it?" "Certainly you have." "Well, then, if I must, I must. Good morning." "Hold on," said the judge. "Aren't you going to pay me?" "Pay you, what for?" "Why, for legal advice, of course." "What do you charge?" "Ten dollars." The result of which was the old fellow had to pay $5 to the young lawyer and $10 to the old one.

Moral.—Don't try to get legal advice for nothing.—Exchange.

THE POSTAGE STAMP.

Order in Which It Was Adopted by Different Countries.

The first postage stamp seems to have been used in Paris in 1633, but the service in which the stamp was used was only local and soon failed. On May 6, 1840, the first regular postage stamps were issued in England. Various local forwarders of letters and postmasters in this country issued stamps as early as 1841. The first to do so was A. M. Grier's City Dispatch Post, which was sold to the government in August, 1842. Blood & Co. of Philadelphia sold stamps in 1841, and the postmasters of Baltimore, New Haven and New York of 1845 also sold stamps.

In 1847 the government took up the business, but Brazil in 1843 was ahead of the United States in taking up the stamp end of the postal business. The other principal countries followed in this order: France, Belgium and Bavaria in 1849; Hanover, British Guiana, Prussia, Spain and Switzerland in 1850; Italy, Denmark, Baden, Wurttemberg, Saxony and the provinces of Canada in 1851; Chile and the princes of Turin and Taxis (who had the postal monopoly in Germany) in 1852; Portugal in 1853; India and Norway in 1854; Uruguay and Mexico in 1856; Russia and Newfoundland in 1857; Sweden in 1858; the Australian colonies early in the fifties; Greece in 1861; Turkey in 1863; Ecuador in 1865; Egypt in 1866; Bolivia in 1867; Paraguay in 1870. The international postal union was formed in October, 1874, and went into operation on July 1, 1875.

How the Pendulum Was Found.

Like many of the commonest mechanical instruments in daily use, the invention of the pendulum is due entirely to chance. Galilee, when under twenty years of age, was standing one day in the metropolitan church of Pisa while some painters were at work on the ceiling of the church. A suspended lamp which was hanging before the altar was disturbed in some manner, and the scientist was struck with the almost perfect regularity with which it swung back and forth. The idea of measuring time by such an instrument found instant generation in his brain, and he completed the system in use to this day.

A Soft Answer.

A canny Scot was being shown over a man-of-war for the first time in his life and, being interested in all he saw, plied his guide with all sorts of questions. The marine seemed particularly to interest him, and, going up to one, he pointed to the "grenade" in the marine's cap and asked what it was. The marine looked at him in surprise. "Don't you know what that is?" he asked. "Why, that's a turnip, of course." "Ach, mon," replied the Scot impatiently, "I was no axin' about yer head."

LOCAL MATTERS.

The volunteers returned home on Friday. They were well browned from their exposure to the sun while in camp.
Mr. Meiklejohn's block is being pushed rapidly to completion. The roof is now on and a good part of the floors laid.
WANTED—Girl for general housework. Apply to Mrs. J. McC. Potts, Stirling.

The decoration service in connection with Stirling Lodge No. 239, I. O. O. F., will be held on Sunday next, July 7th, at 8 o'clock.
Rev. J. A. McKenzie will occupy the pulpit in St. Andrew's church on Sabbath next. The Misses Lowe and Tulloch will assist the choir.

The lawn social at St. Andrew's church, West Huntingdon, on Friday evening was a most successful one, the net proceeds amounting to about $116.
At the Stirling Cheese Board on Tuesday 830 boxes of cheese were offered. All were sold to Mr. Bird at 11 1/2/100. The Board will meet next Tuesday at 4 o'clock.

MRS. MARTIN has reduced the price of summer millinery. Selling trimmed Hats and Shapes at cost.
The prize list for Stirling exhibition has been issued. There are some additions to the list, as well as other items of which intending exhibitors would do well to take notice.

The 12th of July will soon be here and the local lodge is making every preparation for a great celebration here and expect an immense gathering of the members of the order and their friends.
Mr. C. H. Winter has sold his property at the south of the village to Mrs. DeLong, of Ottawa. The place is now occupied by her daughter, Mrs. S. D. Ward. Mr. Winter and family have moved into the house formerly occupied by Mr. G. E. Kennedy, on Church street.

The county road men have been doing a good job on Front street from Mr. Morden Bird's corner westward as far as Mr. B. Bush's. They have graded the road and laid on a coat of broken stone, which will make a good road of what was before about the worst in the town. West of Mr. Bush's the road has not been graded but is being coated with stone.

FOUND—On Sunday, June 10th, on the Marmora gravel road, a sum of money. The owner can have the same by proving property and calling at this office.
The garden party given by the ladies of St. John's church last evening on the grounds of Col. Halliwell, was a grand success in every particular. The lawn was very handsomely decorated and the different booths were fitted up in a most attractive manner. There was a large attendance, and the proceeds, we understand, amounted to $120. The Frankford band furnished good music.

After the Preparatory service in St. Andrew's church on Thursday evening a pleasant surprise was given the pastor, Rev. F. A. Robinson, B.A., as he was about to leave on July 1st to spend his vacation in England and the continent, by the congregation presenting him with an address, commending his zeal for their welfare and his work for the Master's cause. The address, which was accompanied by a sum of money, wished him a pleasant voyage and a safe return. On Friday evening following, at the close of the lawn social at West Huntingdon, the congregation there also made him a presentation of a sum of money.

Next Visit of
ALEX. RAY, Opt. D., Eyesight Specialist, of Belleville to Campbellford, will be, on Monday evening, July 8th and Tuesday, July 9th, until 3 p.m., at the Windsor Hotel. All forms of headache arising from eye-strain as well as all varieties of impaired vision have been wonderfully helped by his special lenses. Consultation free.

At an early hour on Thursday morning the main building of the Belleville gas works was destroyed by fire. The gas holder and retorts were saved by energetic work on the part of the firemen. The fire is thought to have been the work of an incendiary.

Surprise Party and Presentation
On Friday evening, June 28th, a large number of friends from Rawdon circuit drove to their parsonage in Stirling to spend an evening with their pastor, Rev. D. Balfour, and family, on the eve of their departure for Havelock circuit. The earlier part of the evening was spent in renewing and cementing the friendships existing amongst this people. After serving a bountiful repast, which had been prepared by the ladies, Mr. and Mrs. Balfour were asked to take seats on the veranda, when Mr. Jas. Scott read the following address, and Mr. Geo. A. Johnston, Recording Steward, presented Mrs. Balfour with a beautiful set of dishes and Mr. Balfour with a purse containing a substantial sum of money.
REV. D. BALFOUR.
DEAR PASTOR—We, the members and friends of the Methodist Church on Rawdon circuit, feel it our duty to express to you our warmest thanks for the four years have met with failure. Thereby, locally, though reluctantly, submit to the decree of conference, which appoints you to a new field of labor, and now in parting with you we wish to signify, by some degree, the affectionate regard and high esteem which we cherish toward yourself and family.
In labors you have been abundant, and in this you have been the cause of your estimable wife, which has been greatly appreciated by all, for truly your work was her work and your people were her people. As a pastor you have been kind and attentive. In our social relations pleasure and profit have come to us; while your timely and tender sympathy in seasons of bereavement has secured a bond of endearment which cannot at once be severed. Your earnest, practical advocacy and support of the cause of temperance have tended to secure us with courage and hope in this battle for the betterment of society. And above all, the Gospel message from your lips has won its way to many a heart, and gladdened many a home. Hence we find it hard to utter the parting word. But be assured that as you go from among us our best wishes accompany you; also our earnest prayers that you may both be long spared to labor for the kingdom and cause of the Redeemer.
And now we beg that you kindly accept this set of dishes and purse of money as a slight index of the love and esteem in which you are held by your many friends on Rawdon circuit. Our frail gift may soon tarnish, and must eventually perish, but the memory of the memory of the past three brief, but blessed, years of your sojourn among us will still be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars upon the brow of evening.
Signed on behalf of the circuit,
JAMES SCOTT.
Rawdon Parsonage, June 28, 1907.

Mr. Balfour, on behalf of Mrs. Balfour and himself, made a suitable reply, stating that the three years spent on Rawdon circuit had been among the happiest and most successful of his ministry. He also expressed his hope and confidence that under the wise and able leadership of his successor the work of God would continue to advance.

Vick—Westcott

A very pretty, quiet wedding took place at noon on Wednesday June 26th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Westcott, Highgate, Sask., when their daughter, Lillian Gertrude, was united in marriage to Mr. A. O. Vick, of Eli, Man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Elton, of Earl Grey, Sask. The couple were unattended. The bride was handsomely gowned in white silk. After the ceremony the party sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner, to which all did ample justice. The table was beautifully decorated with wild flowers, which formed a picture well befitting the merriment of the occasion. The happy couple left for eastern Manitoba, where Mr. Vick owns a large farm at Eli. The bride's travelling suit was of blue ladies' cloth. Mr. and Mrs. Vick have the sincere good wishes of their many friends for a long and prosperous wedded life.

A Successful Stirling Boy

In an issue of "The Wheat Belt Review," published at Edmonton, Alberta, we find the following notice of Mr. Harold A. Clute, eldest son of Mr. T. G. Clute, of this village, who is located at Vegreville, where he is a member of the firm of Clute & Walker. The Review says:
"This firm was organized in April, 1906, and conducted business at first in the old building but just before the Christmas holidays of last year it moved into its new quarters on Main street. It handles housefurnishings, furniture, undertaking supplies, carpets, rugs, wall paper, Doherty organs, Girard-Heintzman pianos, Singer sewing machines and school desks. It almost has a monopoly upon the various commodities in which it deals and is one of the most successful of the business houses of the town.
The senior member of the firm but the junior in point of years, Harold A. Clute, is a high school graduate, in 1901, and went to Vancouver. He remained there but a short while before returning to Manitoba and Saskatchewan to look for a business location. He was engaged in the furniture business in several places while learning the country but it was not until he came to Vegreville that he decided he had found a permanent home. He also was collector for the Imperial Elevator Company, of Winnipeg, and had an opportunity to visit the manufacturing centers of the different places. He says that there is more money in Vegreville than in any other place in the west he has visited.
He believes implicitly in the future of the country and backs his faith by carrying a stock valued at $10,000. The firm of which he is a member supplies all the surrounding smaller towns with their stock and does almost all the wholesaling business as a retailer."

Best Medicine in the World for Colic and Diarrhoea

"I find Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to be the best remedy in the world for colic and diarrhoea. I am subject to colic and diarrhoea. Last spring it seemed as though I would die, and I think I would if I had not taken Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I haven't been troubled with it since. I had a very severe attack and took half a bottle of the twenty-five cent size of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. At this morning I feel like a new man." For sale by J. S. Morton.

Stirling School Board
Minutes of the regular meeting of the Stirling Board of Education held on July 2nd.
Members present, C. W. Thompson, Chairman; W. S. Martin, J. S. Morton, Dr. Bissonnette, Dr. Alger, F. T. Ward, Jas. Boldrick, C. F. Walt, and Dr. Faulkner.
Minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.
The accounts of C. W. Thompson, H. S. $8, Dr. Faulkner, H. S. $8.35, and Jas. Ralph, P.S. $7, were presented and ordered to be paid.
The auditor's report was received and read.
Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Dr. Alger, that the same be received and adopted with recommendations. Carried.
The Public School Inspector's report was being dealt with, when representatives from the Council presented themselves at the meeting.
Moved by Mr. Martin, seconded by Dr. Bissonnette, that the Inspector's report be laid aside for the present in order that the representatives of the Council might be heard. Carried.
The representatives, Messrs. Meiklejohn and Coulter, reported that a full Council was not present, and in the absence of the Reeve they had deferred the matter of Public School hearing until Friday night next, at which time they would report.
Moved by Dr. Bissonnette, seconded by Mr. Martin, that they resume the consideration of the Inspector's report, and have it read and considered clause by clause. Carried.
Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Mr. Martin, that clause 1 be received and adopted. Carried.
Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Mr. Martin that clause 2 be not considered, but be referred to at the next regular meeting. Carried.
Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Dr. Alger, that clause 3 be received and adopted with recommendations. Carried.
Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Mr. Martin, that clause 4 be received and referred to the Property committee until such time as the heating apparatus be supplied. Carried.
Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Dr. Alger, that one map of Australia be procured by Property committee.
Moved in amendment by Dr. Bissonnette, seconded by Mr. Martin, that the Property committee secure a map of Australia as well as one of the United States, with measures as recommended by Inspector's report.
The original motion carried.
Moved by Dr. Bissonnette, seconded by Mr. Martin, that the Principal of the Public School be heard from as to promotions.

The committee appointed to see the teachers of both Public and High Schools as to their intention of returning after holidays, reported.
The Principal of High School will return, but would expect an advance in salary of $50. Miss Baker expects to return. Miss Hamilton does not expect to return unless her salary is raised to $700. The Public School teachers are all expected to return.
Moved by Dr. Faulkner, seconded by Mr. Ward, that the Sec'y write Miss Hamilton and ask concerning her return, and that this Board adjourn until Monday night. Carried.

G. G. THRASHER, Sec.-Treas.

CURRENT TOPICS.

Truly life is full of peril. Not merely the peril that comes with steam and electricity, and gasoline motors, perils by land and perils of water, but the dangers that confront us even when we think we are following the most hygienic laws of nature. Exactly where we stand we know not, for just as we have learned from Mr. Gladstone and Dr. Fletcher that each mouthful of food should be chewed patiently from 20 to 30 times, according to the substance thereof, along comes Dr. Wiley and warns us against the danger of too much chewing. Rather should we bolt our food, after the manner of the intelligent dog, for notably in the case of meat much chewing is the forerunner of serious indigestion. And when we have meekly accepted this doctrine up rises a physician, fresh and ruddy from his sixteen days' fast, and tells us not to eat at all, but drink copiously of sparkling water, for eating is a vile habit, productive of many diseases of the digestive organs.

Still bewildered, we are constrained to resort to a cold bath, which is much admired of certain medical gentlemen. Or, the brink of the tub a Los Angeles expert hails us and assures us that nobody ever did enjoy a cold bath, and that, moreover, it is dangerous as it is unpleasant. We heat the water and again we are checked by an English scientist, who warns us to forbear from soap if we must bathe, because, as the Lancet admits, soap is the cause of "the frequent inability of the Anglo-Saxon to resist disease." Even the fact that if we die we die clean cannot entirely reconcile us to the thought of a premature demise. And so, unfed, unwashed, we go about our daily business or seek in germ infested sheets the sweet oblivion of all that makes life one perpetual menace. Assuming that we have slept three hours and a half, Mr. Edison wakes us up and assures us that in excess of slumber we are despoiling our natural resources and swiftly invigorating general debility. We arise, possibly reluctantly, and await the next expert opinion as to the development of a long and merry life.

Now, in the absence of testimony from Methuselah and old Parr, we must accept every suggestion that is offered or reject them all with "a plague c' both your houses," or try to live up to the teachings of the grandmothers. These were not numerous, but they were explicit and mandatory. They involved the general principle, "Eat slowly; chew your food," without any special enumeration of jaw movements. They maintained the doctrine, "Early to bed and early to rise," without defining the exact hours. They insisted upon the old fashioned Saturday night soak, with soap and plenty of it. And the subjects of this treatment lived to a fine old age or died young, according as Providence decreed, and with no haunting fear that sleep, or meat, or soap was shortening their days. Artemus Ward said, "We air governed 2 much," and Artemus passed away before the medical experts and the scientific gentry assumed entire charge of our living and dying, even when quarreling one with the other. What he would say in the present emergency would require probably all the ingenuity of his exuberant spelling.

HALVED PHILEAS FOGG'S TIME.

Englishman Travels Round the World in 40 Days in Spite of Mishap.

Lieut.-Col. Burnley Campbell writes to the London Times that he landed at Dover on June 10 after completing a circle of the world in forty days and nineteen and a half hours. If he had caught the St. Petersburg express at Berlin on June 12 he would have reduced the time by several hours. After asking whether this is a record for speed around the world, he writes the following particulars of his trip.

He left Liverpool on May 3 at 7:20 p.m. by the Canadian Pacific Railroad steamer. He arrived at Quebec on May 10 at 3 p.m. and left by the Canadian Pacific Railroad's oversea transcontinental mail train at 5 p.m. He reached Vancouver on May 19 at 5 a.m., and left at 12:30 p.m. on the Canadian Pacific mail steamer.

He arrived at Yokohama on May 20 at 5 a.m., and departed on May 27 at 7 p.m. He reached Asagura on May 28 at 9:30 a.m. and left at 11 p.m. by a Japanese steamer which reached Vladivostok on May 30 at 2:15 p.m.

He took a transiberian train at 7 p.m., and arrived at Harbin on May 31 at 7:25 p.m. He left at 8:30 p.m. and reached Irkutsk on June 4 at 6:30 p.m. He arrived at Moscow on June 10 at 2:38 p.m. and left at 6 p.m. He arrived at Warsaw on June 11 at 9:30 p.m., and left at 11:30 p.m.

He reached Berlin on June 12 at 11:35 a.m. and departed five minutes later. He arrived at Cologne the same day at 9:08 p.m. and left at 11:15 p.m. He arrived at Ostend on June 13 at 7:30 a.m., and left at 11 a.m., arriving at Dover at 2:50 p.m. of the same day.

Lieut.-Col. Campbell was singularly fortunate in making connections, but on May 30 the steamer on which he was travelling ran aground on an isolated rocky island during a dense fog in the sea off Japan. The tide fortunately lifted the ship off and enabled him to make railroad connection at Vladivostok. It had his mind that this time would not have been another four days.

ON THE PEACOCK THRONE.

FAT LITTLE MAN WHO IS THE "SHADOW OF GOD ON EARTH."

Speaks No European Language and Is In No Sense an Educated Man.

A new Shah-in-Shah (King of Kings) is seated on the wonderful peacock throne of Persia. He is a fat little man, hardly matching his imposing titles, one of which is, "The Shadow of God on Earth." He is now about 33.

It is a point in his favor that he is fond of hunting and that when he is out of the city he frequently goes to the mountains. In the gardens of his palace he could be seen practicing marksmanship on small birds or shooting at apples and pears on the palace roof with his courtiers.

In the matter of wives he has been extremely abstemious, considering the standard set by his ancestors and the matrimonial prodigality sanctioned by his faith. When it was at Tabriz, says a writer in the Ladies' Realm, he had only half a dozen.

But wives are a costly luxury, and perhaps the fact that he was in a chronic state of impotency may have accounted for his having been so scantily supplied. He was often in sore straits to raise money. His favorite method was to promise titles, to be conferred when he ascended the throne, for so much cash down.

He has never been outside of Persia. He speaks no European language and of education in the European sense he has had none. It is unfortunate for him that his lot was cast so long in an inferior province and that he was so much under the influence of the priesthood.

The priests are the bane of Persia, but those of Azerbaijan are the worst of the lot. They are fanatical followers of Islam, narrow minded and bigoted and opposed to everything in the nature of modern reforms which of necessity would

DIMINISH THEIR POWERS.

The inspiring monotheism of Zoroaster, the ancient religion of Persia, survives now in its purity only among those Persian emigrants, the Parsis, who largely control the finances of Bombay.

The new Shah is the eldest son of his father, but there is no law in Persia which vests the succession in the eldest son. The Shah may nominate whom he pleases among his children to succeed him. The second son of the late Shah is apparently a much able man than his elder brother. He is really a clever young fellow, well educated and probably would be an able sovereign.

But the fact that he has a slave mother, while Mohammed Ali Mirza's was a Princess of the Kadjar tribe constituted an obstacle to his elevation, though by no means an insurmountable one. Odd as it may seem, the proof that he has given that he is a man of vigor and ability would count against him rather than in his favor.

Heirs to the throne in Persia have a disagreeable way of seeking to obtain possession of the crown before it descends to them in the natural course of events by starting a revolt, or in some other way getting rid of their fathers. The more capable and ambitious the heir the more apt he is to anticipate the demise of his sire.

If the truth were known it would probably be found, too, that Russian influence, which was predominant at the time, had not a little to do with the selection of Mohammed Ali Mirza as the Shah's successor. It is Russian policy to stimulate the rotting process in Persia—to accelerate national decay and disintegration in order that a plausible pretext may be provided for stepping in and taking possession of the land, or at least a big slice of it. And this sort of game can be better played when there is a puppet on the throne than when there is a strong man seated on it.

At Tabriz, which is in the north of Persia and near to the Russian frontier, Russian influence had free play with the new Shah, and the Cossacks have afforded him many object lessons of

MIGHT AND POWER.

But the defeat of the Colossus of the North by Japan has greatly impaired her prestige in Persia. Her impoverishment and her war with Russia have damaged the Oriental is always on the side of the victor, and as Russia no longer pays her influence in Persia is waning.

If the new Shah possesses the characteristics of a capable ruler he has hitherto most carefully concealed them. But whose will is the puppet or develops unexpected ability will really make a very little difference in the destiny of Persia.

Though nominally an autocrat, the Shah can ordinarily accomplish very little. Even if he did combine intellect, will and energy he would rouse such a swarm of enemies that he would probably be assassinated before he could effect many reforms.

The priests, or mullahs, exercise vastly greater power than the Throne does. The administration of justice in their hands, but it has degenerated into a mere matter of bribery. The head of the church wields far greater power than the Shah does, and as he lives on Turkish territory the Shah cannot get hold of him.

A good deal has been said of the reforms to be accomplished by the Persian Duma, but there is small chance that much good can come of so long as it is in the hands of the mullahs.

In spite of the fact that missionaries have great freedom in Persia there is scant prospect of the spread of Christianity. The missionaries are tolerated only on condition that they let the Muslims alone and confine their proselytizing to the Armenians and Nestorians, who don't count for much.

THE CAREER OF THE LATE SHAH

showed how for his supposed despotic power fell short of being the real thing. He hated his father's Grand Vizier, who was in office when he succeeded to the throne, but he dared not depose him immediately. After tolerating him for some time he ventured to ask for his resignia, which signified that he was dismissed. The dismissal of a Grand Vizier in Persia is usually accompanied by an invitation to take a drink. The drink contains poison. This the deposed Prime Minister is expected to swallow and gracefully retire to another world, where he can no longer cause any embarrassment to his royal master.

But the Grand Vizier had no desire to exchange the solid joys of earth for the shadowy delights of Paradise. Protected by the Russian Legation and aided by its Cossacks he fled to Kum, several miles from Teheran, where he possessed an estate, and there he remained for two years, practically defying the Shah. Caving largely to his influence the Grand Vizier who succeeded him could accomplish nothing, and the Shah had to endure the humiliation of recalling him.

The personal favorite of the Shah was Hakim-el Mouk, who had been his physician and whom he made Minister of the Interior. Imagining that the Shah regarded him as a rival, succeeded in getting him killed from Teheran.

One day Hakim-el Mouk received the golden cup, a vessel which the Shah is accustomed to send to those of his friends or enemies whom he desires to get off his earth. Imagining that the Shah came from the Shah, Hakim obediently swallowed the fatal draught.

The Shah had not sent it and he was furious over the loss of his friend. The evidence indicated pretty clearly that it was the Grand Vizier who had thus usurped the royal prerogative, but again he was able to make good his escape and this time, having in the interval well feathered his own nest, he fled to Europe, where he can calmly disregard golden cups and need not fear assassins' daggers. This happened three years ago, and he still lives in Europe.

THE PRESENT GRAND VIZIER was in the Cabinet of the late Shah and has shown such ability in trimming his sails that he will probably be able to hold his office under the new Shah, as will most of the members of the Cabinet.

There are some able men among them, notably the Minister of Finance, who was educated at Oxford and speaks English fluently. But he is a Persian, and when a Persian takes office, whatever his training, his first consideration is usually his own purse.

That is generally a Shah's failing; too, as has been well exemplified in the late Shah's reign. He used up a big share of a Russian loan on his own household expenses and to defray the cost of his European tours.

His extravagance has sadly depleted the great hoards of jewels and other treasures which were stored in the palace when he became the King of Kings. The new Shah will have no such means of raising the wind. The peacock throne, which is literally studded with precious stones and is estimated to be worth several millions of pounds, would suffice to keep him going for many years, but even a Shah would not dare to loot this most prized of the royal heirlooms of Persia.

THE LATE SIR JOSEPH FAYRE.

Great Physician Who Had a Most Interesting Life.

Sir Joseph Fayre, who went through some of the worst horrors of the Indian Mutiny, and who lived to hear an echo of that tragic period in this its anniversary year, died recently at his residence, Belfield, Falmouth, England.

Born in 1824, Sir Joseph's long life was filled with interest and adventure. He accompanied the King, then Prince of Wales, on his Indian tour, and he met many of the great men of the time. But the most remarkable experience of his life was that of the terrible siege of Lucknow.

Fayre entered the navy as assistant surgeon, and in this capacity went through the siege of Palermo, and was present also at the siege of Rome by the French in 1848. He went to India in the service of the East India Company. After being attached to the military expedition of 1858 he was promoted to the coveted post of resident surgeon at Lucknow, where one of his duties was to attend medically the court of the last King of Oude.

During the siege of Lucknow Fayre's house was an asylum for many families besides his own. His labors for the sick were heroic. Once a shell burst in the house and his wife was lying ill, but she was unhurt.

In his Recollections of My Life, written some years ago, Sir Joseph shows at once the horror and the mystery of the mutiny. "We were uncertain," he writes, "of all natives, even those of our own house, the soldiers were everywhere constantly receiving proofs of native devotion and loyalty; men risked all, even their lives, to serve us, but fell at last into the whirlpool of mutiny and sedition, moved by some influence they could not resist to throw in their lot with the rebels."

Fifteen people died in his house during the siege, but many more were saved by Sir Joseph's skill and devotion. Sir Henry Lawrence was one of those who died. Outram, who was shot through the arm, and Napier, who was wounded in the leg, were two of Sir Joseph's patients. Outram, he relates, refused to eat anything but the common rations.

Years afterwards Sir Joseph was able to show this famous house, half fort, half hospital, to the Prince of Wales. Sir Joseph's health was greatly injured by the siege, but he became the leading doctor in the presidency. In 1873, after he had settled in London, he was selected by Queen Victoria to accompany the Prince of Wales in India, and was instructed "to write direct" to Her Majesty as to the Prince's well-being.

Wordsworth, Huxley, Hartley, Coleridge and Tennyson were among the men whom Sir Joseph knew intimately.

An old woman was being questioned by a lawyer as to how a testator had looked when he made a remark to her about some relatives. "Now, how can I remember? He's been dead two years," she answered. "Is your memory so poor that you can't remember two years back?" he persisted. The old woman was silent, and the lawyer asked: "Did he look anything like me?" "Seems to me he did have the same sort of old sort of look," replied the witness. The lawyer had no further questions to ask her.

WORLD IN THE MAKING NEW MACHINERY CURE

MATTER FOR MORE OR LESS ASTRONOMICAL SPECULATION.

Curious Stars Which Illustrate the Methods of the Celestial Workshop.

Of recent years the observations of our own stars have revealed the existence of a small number of curiously shaped stars. These strange planets are not round like the earth, sun and moon, but more closely resemble a pear or an egg in form. Ten such stars are now known to exist, five in the northern and five in the southern hemisphere.

This discovery is a source of much interest to those who are unacquainted with the difficulties that attend the search for such stars. But to those who do know and understand the difficulties the discoveries already made would seem to indicate that there are many more of these pear-shaped stars in the universe than astronomers have yet been able to observe.

The ten stars already discovered, though grouped together under the general title of pear-shaped, represent all degrees of oblateness. Among the most marked of these strange planets are one which is elongated as a torpedo or a modern war-shaped balloon, while others are ovals.

NEARLY SPHERICAL IN FORM.

Although these strangely-shaped lights of the sky are called stars, they are in reality systems, or, more accurately speaking, twin stars. In the case of two of the ten already discovered the component stars are so near one another that they touch, and at the point of contact they merge into each other.

It is very difficult, therefore, to say precisely what is the shape of these figure-eight stars. Such a system must be in a state of the most unstable equilibrium; and sooner or later the centrifugal force will prove too great for the slender, overhanging nexus that binds these Siamese twins of the sky together. When the connecting link will be broken, and two new worlds will be born. Then this takes place there will be for both stars a period of stupendous unrest. From centre to circumference the vast bodies will oscillate in great swelling pulsations, until finally the more powerful of the two gains complete control of the other. Then the lesser of the two will become the satellite of the greater, and will revolve around it, as the moon circles about the earth.

SIAMESE TWIN FASHION.

There are even those who point to the very spot where one satellite broke away from its mother earth. They insist that over the vast spaces of the globe where the Pacific Ocean now reigns in long silver watermasses, the moon gathered to itself a separate existence. Nay, they even tell us that beneath the surface of this spacious stretch of sea, fully three thousand fathoms deep, may still be found the scars which mark the place where a world was born. But the truth of this cannot be verified until the seas run dry.

When was this wonderful birthday? In the beginning of time, it is the only answer that anyone has attempted to give. But if a more positive answer is required, it may be stated that the South African astronomer, Alexander Roberts, has assured, yet with some hesitation, and with no small uncertainty, that at the very least one hundred million years measure the moon's age as a separate world. It was once so near the earth, even after its individual life began, that it modeled its mountains and seas; but as the years came and departed it drifted farther and farther away, till at last a heave of the ocean, a rising and falling of tides, is all the greeting the earth has to give to its eldest born.

A PEAR-SHAPED STAR

Is a world in the formative period; a round globe is the finished product of many evolutions. The substance of these strangely-shaped stars is as diaphanous as a summer cloud; in the space of a few hours their huge bulk, sometimes as much as three hundred miles in diameter, expands and contracts, expanding a range of over a million miles. Storm and strain are the spirits that brood over their vast, tumultuous, shoreless wastes; there is the ceaseless clash of storms, and the surge of sorely tossed, Titanic waves. Majestic in the spaciousness, impressive in the stupendous movements, their importance to human attractiveness and interest lies in their potentiality. They are the worlds of ages separated from the present day by uncomfortable centuries of time. Our own little planet may then be, like the moon, a burnt-out cinder, a dead world, a desolate land of fierce extremes of heat and cold.

In Iceland men kiss when they meet, but a man rarely kisses a woman. "Do you find it more economical to do your own cooking?" "Oh, yes. My husband doesn't eat half so much as he used to!"

Client—"I want you to lend me an ear for a moment." Banker (without looking up)—"Yes, but only at 6 per cent, and with two sureties."

"Sir," the sad-faced man said to the lawyer, "I am smoking a long black cigar and reading a newspaper." "Would you allow your boy to smoke cigarettes when he grows up?" "I've never given the question a moment's thought," replied the other. "What! Never! I should upon the effect upon the constitution, to say nothing of the mind of your son, to allow him to smoke the deadly things?" "Never a thought, no, sir." "And will you allow him to drink?" "I have never thought about it." "Oh, can such things be? Are you letting your child grow up in the midst of temptation without speaking a fatherly word to him?" "Look here, sir! You mean well, I suppose, but let me tell you that I've been a confirmed smoker for the last twenty years." The sad-faced man vanished.

MANY DISABLED WORKERS ARE BEING HELPED.

A New York German Hospital is Doing Wonders for the Poorer Classes.

The German Hospital on Park ave., at Seventy-sixth street, New York, the other day opened its new department of mechanical therapy for the treatment of persons suffering from stiff joints, rheumatism, contracted muscles and the like. The department is designed especially for the poorer classes, those who have to earn their living by the work of their hands, and who, naturally, are most handicapped by physical affliction.

MACHINES, TALL AND SHORT

The doctors in attendance were enthusiastic over the field offered them, and started right in to weed out the different ailments. At last it became necessary to send word upstairs to admit no more. The room which is occupied by the machines is in the basement of the dispensary building—a large, clean, white-walled chamber, and on the sides are the machines. Some of the machines are tall and short and squat. Some of them have wheels to be turned, and others have treadles. They are built of metal throughout and are a mass of weights balanced on rods, with cog wheels and supports. A machine in motion looks like nothing so much as the works of a large clock.

FOR EVERY MUSCLE AND JOINT.

Every one of the ten machines in the hospital is a bit different from the others. There are appliances for the exercise of the fingers, hand, wrist, back and shoulder muscles, knee and ankle joints—in fact, it is not an exaggeration to say that every muscle and joint in the body can be reached by one or another of these machines.

More people appeared the first day for treatment than had been expected. Indeed, it was long after the regular dispensary hours before the last had been sent away. Altogether there were about thirty, all of the kind that really needed help. There were washerwomen, housemaids, barbers, laborers and waiters. It was considered wonderful that so many had heard of the new department already.

A NEVER-ENDING STAIR.

In one corner of the room a girl with housemaid's knee was treading up and down a never-ending stair. The first day she did not move her foot very high from the ground, but next day she did much better. A carpenter who has much climbing of ladders to do was sitting waiting for her to finish. He also had a different knee. A woman of the ghetto, small and ungainly, but with a large family dependent on her exertions, was working an arm back and forth, raising and lowering a mass of weights. The sear, resulting from an operation had contracted the muscles so that she was hardly able to lift her arm out of a certain position. A barber was similarly afflicted. He had gone from bad to worse, and now, while he was capable of lifting any weight, he could not hold his arm up. Consequently he has had to give up his business, and it allowed to go unattended might become a pauper in a few months.

COULD ENDURE THE PAIN.

The patients were all a willing lot and few showed traces of hysterical fear of pain. That is the only thing the doctors have to face in the treatment, for if a patient is really pained by the energy allowed to a machine it can be reduced to such a minimum that anyone with a little strength of will can stand it. But they were undeniably amazed at the quiet method of treatment and the fact that the patient was inclined to take it as a joke.

"Yes," he said, "Dis don't hurt me. I don't see val you call dis peesness. I peen so used to der pain, I don't mind a liddle ding like dis." Whereupon the doctor, who gave him a machine that put out somewhat harder, while the cures effected by the treatment are not as startlingly quick as some reports have alleged them to be, they do enable people to recover in far shorter spaces of time than they would ordinarily, and trivial accidents, such as a sprained wrist can be fixed up in a few days.

THUMB-BELL OR FINGER-HAT.

It Takes 20 Men and Costly Machinery to Turn Out a Thumb.

What is a thumb-bell? Don't you know? It is a thumb. The name of this little instrument is said to have been derived from "thumb" and "bell," being worn on the thumb, as sailors still wear it. The Germans call it "finger-hat."

Thumbbells were first made in Holland in 1605 by John Lofting. Loftings thumbbells were made of either iron or brass.

Gold, silver, iron, ivory, steel, and steel are used in making thumbbells. It takes twenty men, besides a great amount of costly machinery, to make a thumbbell. In the ordinary manufacture, thin plates of metal are introduced into a die, and then punched into shape.

The Queen of Siam owns a thumbbell which was a present from her Royal husband. It is made in the shape of a lotus band of the finest gold, and is studded with diamonds, which are so arranged that they form her name and date of her marriage.

Opportunists are like bees, in that you have to know just how to take hold of them.

The difference between a politician and a statesman is that a politician gets what he wants.

When a man announces that he understands women, he is fixing to have one make a fool of him.

A FLOATING ISLAND

EVERY ONE knows of that great animal, the alligator, that lives in Florida. Part of the time its home is in water, part of the time on dry land. In warm weather it plays in the river or bayou, or rolls about on the sand and mud, swimming itself on the banks of the stream; but when winter comes it buries its great body in the mud and settles down for a long sleep. It has no love for cold weather, and no notion of making itself uncomfortable, when it can just as well take a good, long cold-weather nap. Not such a bad plan, is it?

Sometimes it happens that the seeds of grass and weeds are blown into the wet soil, and quickly spring up, green and fresh, on the back of the alligator. As a rule, these tender plants are shaken off or washed off when the great creature wakes up and rolls into the water; but now and then the mud clings, the young plants stick fast, and when, when the half-awakened monster floats down stream, it looks like a moving island. A poor little plover once floated on the back of the alligator, and a sleeping alligator. Some boys who were out fishing saw the bird floating about, thinking there must be a covey of the pretty creatures and a settlement of nests. They dropped their tackle and rowed out to it. When their boat came bumping up against the sleeping animal, the boys did not know what to do. They rolled from side to side. Oh, how they found out how hungry it was, and how dry, and with one wild snort, plunged down to the bottom of the bayou and washed off island, grass and nest. So the little plover had to seek another home. E. A. MATTHEWS.

WHAT BIRDS SAY

Those who know much about birds tell us that the birds' notes are quite distinct and sound like the following words. What do they say to you?

Robin—"Quick! Quick! Do you think what you do, do you think what you do, do you think?"

Bluebird—"Purty! Purty! I-oh-pur-ity. Pearl! Pearl! Think of it, think of it!"

Bobolink—"Bob-o-leo, Bob-o-link, Bob-o-link."

Crow—"Caw-w!"

Cedar bird—"Caw! Caw!"

Bobwhite (quail)—"Bob-bob-white! More-more-wet!"

Goldfinch (yellow bird)—"Ker-chee-chee, whee, whee."

Humming bird—Mousetike squeak. Quicker will you? Will you really, really, really?

Song sparrow—"Oit, oit, oit, chip, chip, chip, chee-chee-wiss, wiss, wiss!"

Thrush—"Drop it, drop it, cover it up, cover it up, pull it up!"

Bluejay—"Jay, jay, jay, whee-dee, whee-dee!"

Scarlet tanager—"Chip-chip! Pshaw! Wait-wait-wait for me, wait!"

Blackbird—"Kong-quer-ree" or "Bob-a-leo, a-bob-a-leo!"

EGGS THAT JUMP

YOUR friends will be mystified completely if you do this trick very carefully.

Take a number of eggs; remove the yolks and whites, so that only the shells remain.

To each of these shells paste one end of a string, so that the string will attach to one of your fingers.

In doing the trick, be sure that your audience are far enough away to be unable to see the hidden threads.

Now say that you will be able to make the eggs leap into the air by magnetizing them with your fingers.

THE SECRET OF THE TRICK

Of course, as you move a finger upward and downward, the shell attached to the other end of the string or silk will move up and down. You can gain a pretty effect by making them dance in time to music.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

No soul can grow without solitude. Often a hot old town tends to be a cold old church.

Every occasion for pessimism is a call to improvement.

They who grow in grace surely will grow more gracious.

If you cannot stand ridicule you never will earn applause.

It is no use preaching about happiness with vinegar in your voice.

Folks who always are looking for faults always find them right.

The law religion in some men the more theology they can hold.

You are not likely to make straight truth by twisting scripture texts.

There's more affection in hunt truth than in the caresses of affection.

When men hear their mouths wider, they always find their hearts wider.

When a church really has a worthy work she will not wait for workers.

Heaven heeds not the prayer for strength that has no objective in service.

The finest pictures on memories' walls are those seen through the mist of tears.

You may know a man's power when you know the things that provoke him.

You cannot establish your citizenship in heaven by deducing your taxes here.

The man who actually has free salvation always is anxious to pay something for its extension.

It never has been explained why the Sunday daze looks wetter than a Monday downpour.

Which a paradise this world would be if every man was as good as he would have the rest of us be?

Some Christians, faithfully obey the injunction to deduce your taxes here, but are always watching for faults in their neighbors.

When a man is guided wholly by his past he runs around in a circle like a hen trying to find out where to go by following its tail.

HINTS ON POTATO GROWING

Special Investigation by the Provincial Department of Agriculture

The Ontario Department of Agriculture is making an investigation into the potato industry of the Province by Mr. H. B. Smith, B.S.A. After visiting the most important potato-growing sections of Ontario, he is preparing a special report for publication. Pending the free report, which will probably show a more serious state of affairs than is generally supposed, the following recommendations are put out with a view to impressing upon farmers the necessity of immediate action. The treatment of potatoes to prevent the rot is a matter of extreme importance.

"Ontario produced fewer potatoes in 1906 than she ever produced in any single year in all the time the Provincial Department of Agriculture have been collecting information concerning the acreages annually devoted to farming crops. Within the past few years the area planted to potatoes in this province has decreased by 50,000 acres; the product by approximately 6,000,000 bushels. Present indications are that the crop of 1907 will be lighter than last year's with the high prices that have ruled for some time strongly maintained. Farmers, on the right kind of soil, who have planted a good acreage to this crop this spring, will, if they are able to successfully bring their crop to maturity, reap larger returns from potatoes than they could likely derive from any line of farming in which they might engage, and it is to point out briefly one or two little things that in these days must be attended to, if potato growing is to be successfully accomplished, that this article has been prepared.

Inability to cope with the rot has been the great cause of failure in potato growing in Ontario, yet five dollars or even less, will cover the entire cost for material and labor required to treat one acre of potatoes with Bordeaux Mixture, and this mixture properly made and consistently and intelligently applied is a certain preventive of rot. From experiments officially conducted at Guelph, at Ottawa, and at practically every experiment station in the United States, and from the practical experience of growers everywhere, Bordeaux Mixture has proven the only effective remedy for potato rot. At Ottawa during the past three years, the average increase in yield from spraying with this mixture was 9.5 bushels per acre.

Bordeaux Mixture for potato spraying is made from the following formula: Copper sulphate (blue stone or blue vitriol) 6 pounds, unslaked lime 5 pounds, water 40 to 50 gallons.

As it is inconvenient to weigh the lime and copper at the time of mixing and quite impracticable to keep a supply of ready mixed Bordeaux on hand, stock solutions of the copper and lime are usually prepared ready for mixing as required. To prepare material sufficient to treat one acre of potatoes four times, proceed as follows: Place 72 pounds of blue stone in a bag or basket and suspend it near the surface in 30 gallons of water in a barrel. It will dissolve in a few hours, and every gallon afterwards dipped from this barrel will contain exactly 2 pounds of blue stone. For the lime stock mixture take 60 pounds of fresh unslaked lime and 30 gallons of water. Shake the lime by the use of as little of the water as possible, and when all is broken down, bring the solution to standard strength by adding what remains of the 30 gallons of water. Every gallon of lime mixture now contains exactly 2 pounds of lime. These mixtures, if kept under cover and evaporation prevented, will retain their strength all summer.

In making the Bordeaux it is important to remember that these strong "stock" mixtures must never be brought together. Pour 3 gallons of the blue stone solution into a 40-gallon barrel (an ordinary barrel holds between 40 and 50 gallons), half fill the barrel with water, add 2½ gallons of the lime solution, fill up with water, stir thoroughly and the mixture is ready for use.

For applying, a spray pump will be found economical of labor and materials, and the gain in product from one year's spraying of one acre of potatoes will usually pay the entire cost of such an appliance, but if none is at hand, Bordeaux may be applied after the same manner as Paris Green would be applied in solution for bugs. The object is to keep the crop covered with the mixture during the season in which blight is liable to occur, and while modern spraying machinery does this a little better than anything else, there are scores of farmers in Ontario who are obtaining quite satisfactory results from applying the Bordeaux by whatever means are at their disposal. In preparing the mixture where any kind of power sprayers are to be used, always strain the lime solution when mixing with the blue stone. The lime sometimes settles lumpy and clogs the nozzles. If required, Paris Green may be applied with the Bordeaux, adding half a pound of Paris Green to each barrel of the mixture.

Spraying should begin about July 15th and the vines kept covered till September. Four applications as required, will usually accomplish this. Some have got fairly satisfactory results from one good spraying just at the time the disease begins to spread, and as we gain in spraying experience, the number of applications may perhaps be decreased, but ordinarily, it is best to use the mixture at least four times.

Bordeaux is the only effective remedy yet devised for the control of potato blight. It is easy to make and easy to apply, and where properly made and thoroughly applied is certain to be effective. The only precautions to observe in making are to use pure fresh materials and mix these in correct proportions and in the proper way, and in applying to keep the mixture on the vines during the season that blight is likely to appear.

THE TROUBLES OF RUSSIA

War Department Headquarters of Revolutionaries.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: The police on Tuesday night searched a department of the War Ministry and found it to be the headquarters of one of the revolutionary groups. Much illegal literature was seized. The building was cordoned by police during the search, but only one arrest was made.

ATTACK ON GUARD HOUSE.
A dispatch from Krasnoyarsk, Siberia, says: The attack on the guard house and detention prison here, which began June 21, was resumed on Tuesday night by revolutionaries, who occupied the surrounding houses. They opened a heavy fire on the guards and the latter replied with volleys. During a fusillade lasting over an hour, a cab driver was killed. The prison of Krasnoyarsk is one of the hating places for political prisoners on their way to more distant places of Siberian exile.

SIXTY OFFICERS ARRESTED.
A dispatch to a London news agency from Odessa says it is authoritatively reported that sixty officers of the southern military district, several of them connected with the Odessa garrison, have been arrested.

BOMB OUTRAGE.
A dispatch from Tiflis says: A wagon containing $125,000, escorted by Cossacks, had reached Erivan Square, on Wednesday, when a bomb was thrown and an explosion followed. Two employees of the Imperial Bank were killed and others injured. The money bags disappeared.

TERRORIST ATTEMPT FOILED.
A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: An attempt was made on Tuesday night by terrorists to force an entrance into the magazine of the proving grounds near St. Petersburg, containing a large amount of explosives. A sentry was fired at and wounded by the men engaged in the attempt, but the shots caused a patrol to hurry to the spot, and the terrorists fled.

TORPEDO BOAT DAMAGED.
During the manoeuvres on Wednesday the torpedo boat Ubedimsky struck a mine, which exploded. The damage done was slight, owing to the deterioration of the mine.

FAMILY BURNED TO DEATH.
Mother and Four Little Ones Perish at Annapolis.
A dispatch from Ottawa says: A horrible fatality occurred at Annapolis on Thursday morning. Mrs. W. P. Armstrong and her four young children were burned to death. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong and family live above their laundry in the town. At an early hour on Thursday morning Mr. Armstrong was awakened by smoke pouring into the room from the fire below. He rushed downstairs to locate the fire, found the whole place in flames. Before he could get back to rescue his wife and children an explosion of gas in the laundry cut off their exit from the second story, and Mrs. Armstrong and the children perished. Armstrong himself escaped from the building with difficulty. The cause of the fire is not known, but it started in the engine room at the rear of the scene and had seven streams of water on the fire in a short time. The laundry was completely destroyed, all the walls falling in.

BABY FOUND MOTHER DEAD.
Lying on Floor, With Lace Twisted Around Throat.
A dispatch from Toronto says: Lying face downward on the floor, with a faded piece of lace knotted six times and twisted tightly about her throat, Margaret, the young wife of Michael Hawes, a carpenter, living at 108 Richmond Street West, was found dead from strangulation by her little four-year-old son Norman about 5 o'clock on Thursday night. His cries attracted Mrs. Louisa Miller, who rooms in the same house, and who informed the authorities. Mrs. Hawes had been in ill-health for some time, suffering particularly from rheumatism, which was aggravated by living in the two rooms which the little family had in the cellar of the rooming house on Adelaide Street. She left two children, a boy aged four years and a girl of three years.

Reports received in Toronto state that heavy rains have drowned out the fires around Thessalon.

NEW YORK WHEAT MARKET.
New York, July 2.—Wheat—Spot firm; No. 2 red, 97½¢ in elevator and 1,000½¢ at dock; No. 1 northern Duluth, 1,030½¢ f.o.b. aboat; No. 2 hard winter, 1,020½¢ f.o.b. aboat.

CATTLE MARKET.
Toronto, July 2.—Export trade continued quiet. Very few cattle were offered, and the demand was only middling. Quotations were easier, choice steers from $5.60 to $5.75. Medium grades are from $5.60 to $5.75. Medium grades are from $5.60 to $5.75.

BUFFALO MARKET.
Buffalo, July 2.—Flour—Quiet. Wheat—Spring strong; No. 1 hard, $1.03; winter, $1.02; No. 2 white, $1.02; Corn—Firm; No. 2 yellow, 57½¢; No. 2 white, 57½¢. Oats—Unsettled; weak; No. 2 white, 48½¢; No. 2 mixed, 45½¢. Barley—Quiet; Western offered 78 to 85¢. Rye—Scarce and strong; No. 1, 91¢ asked; c.i.f.

THOUSAND DOLLARS STOLEN IN WINNIPEG BUILDING.
A dispatch from Winnipeg says: Pickpockets are busy here, and numerous thefts are reported. J. J. Miller, an Iowa speculator, was relieved of a thousand dollars in the elevator in the Bank of Hamilton building on Wednesday afternoon just after he had cashed a draft.

STEAMER BURNED.
Explosion of Lamp Started Fire in Engine-room.
A dispatch from Saint Louis, Marie says: The steamer Batchewana, of the Ganley Tag Line, was totally destroyed on Wednesday night in one of the first marine disasters of the season at Copper Mine Point, fifty miles west of the "Soo" on the Canadian side. At ten o'clock fire was discovered in the engine-room, due to a gas leak from the explosion of a lamp. The flames made rapid progress, compelling the engineers to make a hurried exit, leaving the engines in operation. The vessel was immediately turned to the shore one mile away and beached. The crew of fifteen men, under Capt. James Ganley, all escaped, all safely. They reached the "Soo" on Thursday morning on the tug Shamrock none the worse for the incident. The Batchewana carried a cargo of iron ore from the Helen Mine for the Algoma Iron Works at the "Soo." The boat was partly insured, but the Ganley Line will lose heavily on the disaster.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.
Henry Lockyer Committed for Trial at Stratford.
A dispatch from Stratford says: Henry Lockyer, who in a fight here some weeks ago struck the blow which killed a North Hills man, was charged with the murder of the man on Friday. Medical and other evidence, which was presented at the trial, was heard before the coroner's inquest, was heard, and the coroner's jury found the prisoner for trial on the charge of murder. Counsel for the defence tried to have the charge changed to manslaughter, but the court held that the jury might if they wished make a change in the charge. The trial will likely take place at the Fall Assizes in September. Bail was refused.

GRAPES ARE PLENTIFUL.
The Prospects in Niagara Fruit Belt are Good.
A dispatch from Thorold, Ont., says: Nothing so far has been published about the grape crop in the Niagara fruit belt, and it will be interesting to learn that the prospects for grapes this year were never better. A grape-grower said on Monday that this has been an exceptionally favorable spring for grapes, and the vines are looking exceptionally well now. "I may say that the grape industry in much better shape around here now than it was two or three years ago. Then it was beginning to look a very serious matter for the grapes by reason of the fungus diseases which threatened their destruction. Efficient spraying has, similarly to the case of the peach trees, saved the grape vines of the fruit belt, and now the only thing we have to fear is the weather. The grape rot is largely due to the weather, it coming from too much dampness."

INCREASE IN CUSTOMS.
June Shows an Increase of Over a Million Dollars.
A dispatch from Ottawa says: The customs revenue of the Dominion for the month of June shows an increase of $1,229,032 over June, 1906. The total revenue for the month was $3,231,444. For the three months of the current fiscal year the revenue was $15,123,092, an increase of $2,964,391 over the corresponding period of last year.

PICKPOCKET'S HAIL.
Thousand Dollars Stolen in Winnipeg Building.
A dispatch from Winnipeg says: Pickpockets are busy here, and numerous thefts are reported. J. J. Miller, an Iowa speculator, was relieved of a thousand dollars in the elevator in the Bank of Hamilton building on Wednesday afternoon just after he had cashed a draft.

FIVE MEN KILLED.
C. P. R. Express Dashes Into a Chinese Special.
A dispatch from Winnipeg says: No. 57, regular west-bound C. P. R. express, and a Chinese special going east, collided at Butler, 27½ miles east of here, shortly after 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The accident resulted in the death of five Chinamen on board the special and the serious injury of N. E. O'Connor, of St. John, N. B., a guard on the special, and a number of Chinamen. The cause of the wreck was a misunderstanding order. The injured have been taken to Fort William.

GRATUITY TO LORD CROMER.
British Government to Present Him With £250,000.
A dispatch from London says: It is stated that the Government will award Lord Cromer, who lately resigned his post of British and Consul-General in Egypt, the sum of £250,000 in recognition of his services in that country.

PRINCE FUSHIMI DONATED £50 TO TORONTO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.
Sir John Hall, a former Premier of New Zealand, is dead.

FOREIGNERS SWEAR ALLEGIANCE
A Marked Increase Shown in Naturalization Statistics.

MIGRATION OF THIRTY TO FORTY THOUSAND.
And since three years' residence is required it will be seen that almost the whole foreign immigration of 1903 has become naturalized by law.

TOTAL NATURALIZATIONS OF IMMIGRANTS FROM UNITED STATES 3,888.
which, compared with the immigration figures of 1904, show that nearly all the American male settlers in the West are taking the oath of allegiance to the British Crown.

TOTAL IMMIGRATION FOR THE MONTH OF APRIL WAS 44,651, AS COMPARED WITH 35,313 FOR APRIL OF LAST YEAR, AN INCREASE OF 23 PER CENT.
For the ten months, July 1 to April 30, the immigration was 437,781, compared with 424,031 for the corresponding months of the fiscal year, an increase of 4,087 or 33 per cent.

WENT DOWN EMBANKMENT.
No. 2 C.P.R. Express Wrecked Near Medicine Hat.
A dispatch from Calgary says: Shortly before 6 o'clock on Sunday night, No. 2 express, east-bound, was wrecked at Brook Station, 96 miles west of Medicine Hat, and Express Messenger William McKinley of Orangeville, Ontario, was killed through the explosion of the acetylene gas tank. His leg was blown off and he died a few hours later. Eight passenger cars were burned, as there were no means available to quench the fire, and no way of cutting the train, as the engine was on the wrong side of the fire. A broken wheel on the second baggage car is said to have caused the derailment, as this was the first car to leave the track, dragging with it two colonist cars, a first-class coach and diner, in the plunge down the embankment. Another coach left the rails and ploughed along the ties, ripping them into matchwood. Baggage car McDonalds has thrown overboard in the baggage car and burned, but was able to crawl outside. None of the passengers suffered severe injury.

THE PERILS OF LABOR
No Less Than 91 Fatalities Reported During May.

A dispatch from Ottawa says: Reports to the Labor Department show that the number of trade disputes during May was 49, an increase of twelve over the corresponding month of 1906. The loss in working days was approximately 88,325 as compared with 45,675 in May of last year. The increase is largely due to the strike of coal miners in the west, and of longshoremen in Montreal. There were about 411 firms with 11,697 employees affected by the various disputes.

There was a marked upward tendency in wages in nearly all lines of industry during the month. The number of new agreements with respect to wages reported to the department was considerably in excess of that during the corresponding period in any previous year since 1903. Nearly all the new agreements were on the basis of higher wage schedules. In the majority of cases the increases were obtained as a result of amicable negotiations and without friction between employers and employees.

During May there were 287 work people injured in industrial accidents. Of these 91 were fatal and 196 resulted in serious injuries. Railway accidents were responsible for twenty fatalities and thirty by them were injured.

IT IS SIR MORTIMER.
Lieut.-Governor Among Recipients of King's Birthday Honors.
A dispatch from London says: The King's birthday honors include the following:— Baronetcy—Col. Ivor Herbert, ex-Major-General, Canada.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause.
Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and to prove it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers.
It effects a charming, pleasant, delightful. Gently, though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a cure. For Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unusual blood pressure.

Brush your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain your? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.

We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

THE WELD THAT HELD

THE OSAGE MONSTER.

How a Steamboat Whistle Affected Missouri Pioneers.

STORY OF A HISTORIC HUNT.

Armed For the Fray, the Frightened
but Determined Old Settlers Sought the Ferocious Beast With the Fearful, Screeching Voice.

The first steamboat that ever turned her prow against the muddy Osage waters was the Flora Jones in the spring of 1844. There was no commercial club in those days to stimulate river traffic, no telegraph or telephone to bord to the hardy pioneers the approach of the boat—only the unearthly shrill screed of a banshee-like whistle, enough to blanch the cheek of the simple minded folk who had lived far from the world's progress.

The little boat went up as far as Harmony, Mo., in Bates county. History records the fact that when the Flora Jones puffed her way along the St. Clair county shores and the wail of her siren was tossed back and forth by the limestone bluffs many of the old settlers were not only frightened figuratively out of their boots, but literally out of their homes. Matthew Arbuckle, a pioneer, tradition tells us, was plowing in his field about a mile from the river when the wail of that whistle struck his ear. He unhitched his horse from the plow, managed to get on its back and, wild with terror, struck for the hills. In one hour he was at Papinville, fifteen miles distant, the horse white with foam, the rider white with terror. He had barely strength to tell of "an awful animal" from which he had made his escape. He had not seen the fearful beast, he confessed, but he had heard its voice, by which he knew it to be a monster of terrific proportions.

Arbuckle's neighbors were brave and,
though much disturbed by his account, determined upon a campaign of extermination. They had defended their homes against Indians, and they reasoned that no wild animal, however ferocious, could withstand their rifles.
They gathered at Uncle John Whitley's. He had been service under Jackson at New Orleans. His home was up the tortuous stream from Ar-buckle's farm.

The next morning a crowd of hardy pioneers, with guns and dogs, were ready at Uncle John's. The gallant band numbered among its members Uncle John Whitely, James Breckenridge, Benjamin Morris, William Bacon, Hamilton Morris, Benjamin Burch, William Roark, Frank Roark, Benjamin Snyder, Snowden Morris and Matthew Arbuckle.

They were agreed that there should be undertaken a quest for the mysterious monster threatening their homes and families.

Just before the signal to start was given Mattie, a daughter of Whitely's, went down to the river, 300 yards distant, for water. In her absence the Flora Jones, which had tied up for the night at a bend in the river below, again sounded the terror inspiring whistle.

"Charge, men!" roared Whitely, seizing his gun. "Matt went to the river for water, and I reckon she's dead afraid." The crowd rushed to the river, determined to rescue the girl if she was yet alive. But Matt, it is hardly need-sary to state, was met on the way.
She was headed homeward, her hair streaming behind and her face blanched with fear.

With their weapons ready for instant action the determined hunters continued riverward. The crew of the Flora
to sound it at frequent intervals, and its reverberations rang from bluff to bluff unceasingly. Each fresh blast added to the uneasiness of the band of settlers. Frequent councils were held.
The failure of the dogs to take the scent nuplused them.

The hunters scoured the Osage thickets all day. Breckenridge lost faith in hounds and declared that he would go to St. Louis for Newfoundland.
Meanwhile the Flora Jones had proceeded up the river to Harmony, and her whistle was no longer heard. As night came on a storm broke, and the hunters took refuge in a cave.

With the return of dawn there began again the hideous wail of the mysterious monster. The Flora Jones was making an early start on her return trip down the river. Nearer and nearer sounded the whistle, until the hunters, who had tumbled hastily from their cave, could distinguish a puffing and blowing, supposed to be the snorts of the advancing foe.

The moment of decisive action seemed at hand. The hunters rushed to the river bank. Each selected a tree to stand behind and looked to the priming of his gun.

An instant later the Flora Jones rounded a bend and loomed into view.
Upon her deck was a gay crowd of passengers watching the early sunrise flooding the water with rosy light.
Uncle John Whitely, Jimmy Breckenridge and their band of heroes were so astonished to answer the friendly hails as the boat swept down to the next bend, her whistle mocking their past fears.

Little was said as the hunters track-ed homeward. Unconsciously each sought out his home. And so ended the historic hunt for the monster of the Osage valley.

There is no open door to the temple of success. Every one makes his own door, which closes behind him to all others.—Marden.

PLANTING TROUT.

One Point on Which the Old Man
Wanted More Light.

It was the policy of the officers of a certain railroad line in all their advertising matter to place great stress on the excellence of the trout fishing to be reached by their lines, and in order to provide the trout it was necessary from time to time to plant the advertised streams with fry.

On one occasion an old gardener named Connelly, who had charge of the station grounds, was sent out with the cans of fry, procured from the state hatchery, and a railroad map marked to show exactly where to plant the tiny fish.

Connelly returned that night, however,
with part of the fry still unplanted.
He needed further instructions from the general passenger agent, who had marked the map.

"Say, mister," said Connelly, scratching his perplexed head with one hand and pointing to the can with the other,
"shall I plant thim fish wid the tails up or down?"

"Why," shouted the irascible agent,
"you thundering blockhead!"
"Aisy, aisy!" murmured Connelly.
"O'm no such blockhead as ye'd think.
The shot on the map where ye told me to plant thim trout is all biled down to mud. If thim small fish is to go in that stream at all, at all, 'tis wan by wan they'll have to go in, like banes. All I'm askin' is, is it, is it heads up ye'll have thim, or tails?"

NEW YORK'S EAST SIDE.

Where Cents Are Common and Big Bills Are Eyed With Suspicion.

"When you think of the millions in New York and the money spent on Fifth avenue and Broadway," said the woman, "it is pitiful to see the dearth of it on the east side. It is noticeable most of all in the change they give you—always pennies. Go to the grocery, and you come back with your pocketbook filled with pennies. Forunately, they are not cart wheel pennies such as they have in England or you would have to call a messenger boy to carry them home for you."

"I went into a little place near First avenue the other day to have my face massaged. The masseur was an accomplished Austrian. He did the work beautifully, but when I handed him a dollar—it was 50 cents I owed him—he handed me back 20 cents of the change in pennies. I don't know why, but it seemed a pitiful thing to me that he shouldn't have had that much silver in change in the house."

"They stare at you aghast, these east side people, if you ask them to change a five dollar bill. They are afraid it may be counterfeit. And as for a ten-they won't change a ten at all on First avenue."

He Was Overdue.

The master of a large southern plantation would fire off a small cannon every evening at 6 o'clock as a signal to the people living on his land. One evening at the time for the usual boom the master was away. Two of his negroes, John and Jim, had long desired to fire the cannon, but had never had a chance to do so. They decided to make the trial on this afternoon, but thought that it would be best for them to have the cannon make no sound. It was decided that Jim should hold a water bucket over the mouth of the cannon while John applied the fuse.
The place was touched off, there was a great boom, and John looked up to find that his friend was gone.

When the master returned John was very busy in the field. "John," said he,
"where is Jim?"

"He went down to the spring after a bucket of water, sah."

"When is he coming back?"

"Well, sah, if he come back like he went, he's sure due heah now."

Wouldn't Tip, So He Grew a Beard.

I knew a man who was a conscientious objector to tipping barbers and could not shave himself. He told me once that, according to careful calculation, he had been forced to travel considerably more than 100 miles during one year in order to find new barber shops where his unbending attitude on the tip question was unknown and to spend rather more than $5 in bus and cab fares in doing so. Finally, having exhausted the whole of inner London and most of the suburbs, he had to give up the struggle and grow a beard.
—London Truth.

What Strawberries Really Are.

The pulpy portion of the strawberry is not really a fruit nor even a berry, but is a cluster of dry seeds slightly imbedded in a mass of pulp. The little seeds are the true fruit. It is surprising that the pulp enlarges; that it does not remain small and dry. By some wise provision of nature the pollen not only directly gives life to each seed on which it falls, but also stimulates the surrounding portion of the receptacle (originally small and hard) to grow into the soft, juicy and lustrous form.

More Speed Mania.

Miss Polly—Just to think, Aunt Matilda, Jason Hardapple ain't been calling on Sue Wiggs but two years and last night he actually proposed. Aunt Matilda—Do tell! I declare this here speed mania has reached Bacon Ridge at last.

Obedient Instructions.

Man of the House—Verena, I told you to call me at 7 o'clock sharp this morning. Domestic—I called you as sharp as I could, sorr, but I couldn't wake ye.

Nature is a mutable cloud which is always and never the same.—Emerson

A CLEVER BURGLAR.

How He Fooled a Man Who Thought He Couldn't Be Robbed.

"B. P. Hutchinson used to say no burglar ever could get into his house without waking him," said a central station detective the other day, according to the Chicago Record-Herald, "but it remained for Chief Simon O'Donnell to put one over the famous trader."

"You know, Mr. Hutchinson was famous in Chicago's commercial life years ago and was known popularly as 'Old Hutch.' He prided himself on the fact that burglars never had got into his house and often boasted of the fact to his intimates. One day while he was at lunch with Chief O'Donnell and a number of other friends the company fell to discussing a crime that had been committed the night before.

"I'd like to see anybody get into my house," Mr. Hutchinson said. "Why, I hear every tick of the clock all night."
"I'll bet you a dinner for this crowd," said the chief, "that I can produce a man who will enter your house and you will not know of his visit till morning."

"Mr. Hutchinson accepted the wager, and it was agreed that he was to let the chief have a hatchkey, so that the burglar could get in without being disturbed by some patrolman. Mr. Hutchinson also agreed to leave some article of value in the parlor where it could be found readily. The chief said the robbery would be committed within the following week.

"Three days later Mr. Hutchinson awoke in the morning and discovered that both sheets of his bed, which had been in place when he retired, were gone. So was a little antique clock he had left on the mantel. He hurriedly dressed and hastened after breakfast to the chief's office. O'Donnell saw him coming and, as he entered the office, greeted him with:

"Mr. Hutchinson, I have two sheets and a clock that belong to you. We will have the dinner today."

"The burglary was done by a former criminal who at the time had reformed. He did the job at the request of the chief. How did he get the under-sheet? He rolled Mr. Hutchinson over, rolled the sheet after him and then rolled him back."

ANIMAL ODDITIES.

The Australian water lizard walks erect.

The tree frogs of South America sing
as musically as birds.

Sheep in time of famine eat the wool from one another's backs.

Gamecocks sometimes take to catching mice, which they devour greedily.

An eagle can live twenty-eight days without food, while a condor is said to be easily able to fast for forty days.

A decapitated snail kept in a moist place will, it is claimed, in a few weeks grow a new head quite as serviceable and good looking as that which was taken away.

The chameleon's eyes are situated in bony sockets projecting from the head.
By this curious contrivance the peculiar little animal can see in any direction without the slightest motion save of the eye.

Ivory as a Tonic.

"Some physicians," said a druggist,
"give an infusion of ground ivory and milk in the spring to stimulate and strengthen listless patients. It is a good remedy, for all I know to the contrary. Certainly it is an ancient one."

He opened a medical magazine and pointed to this quotation from Schrod-er's Zoology, a work published in 1637:

"Elephas (elephant)—His teeth are only used in medicine and vulgarly called ivory. The virtues: It cools and dries, moderately binds cuts, strengthens the inward parts. It is good for the jaundice, it takes away pains and weakness of the stomach, it heats the epileptic, resists poisons, drives off spring melancholia. The dose is half a drum."

His Was Harder.

It was in a country tavern, where a newly arrived commercial traveler was holding forth.

"I'll bet my case of samples," he said,
"that I've got the hardest name of anybody in this room."

An old farmer in the background shifted his feet. "Ye will, ye will?" he drawled. "Waal, I'll have to take ye up. I'll bet $10 against your samples that my name'll beat yours."

"Done," cried the salesman. "I've got the hardest name. It is Stone."

"Mine," he said, "is Harder."

Starting It Early.

Starting with his bride on their honey-moon, a man entered a railway office and, as always in the past, bought only one ticket.

The bride noticed the oversight at once.

"Why, you bought only one ticket,
dear," she said.

"That's so, dear," he answered. "I forgot all about myself."—Tit-Bits.

An Expert Accountant.

"Do you not think, Miss Eniles," he pleaded, "that in time you might learn to love me?"

"Possibly," the girl replied. "If you could render me a statement of what you are worth, Mr. Giles, I might learn to love you. I'm very quick at figures."—London Mail.

The Test.

"Come in here, I wish to tell you a piece of gossip Mrs. Smith told me."

"Is it good?"

"Is it? I had to promise not to tell a soul before she would tell me."— Houston Post.

The King's Visit to Ireland

Few announcements could be more welcome than that of another visit of the King and Queen to Ireland. Whatever may have been the merits of the late reign in other respects, it was unhappily marked through almost its whole course by a persistent omission to perform the most practically essential of all the duties of British Royalty at the present day, that of cultivating the respect and affection of the Irish people; a people eminently warm-hearted and open to personal impressions. Danger to Royalty in visiting Ireland there would have been absolutely none. It is a fact not less calamitous than startling that before George IV, the Irish people had never seen their King, except as an invader. George IV was received with rapturous demonstrations, in which O'Connell joined. The political part of the Home Rule movement is the artificial work of political aspirants for whom the field has been left vacant. They have taught the people to connect their agrarian troubles and sufferings with English rule, and thus to make the name of England hateful to the Irish people. The best antidote to disunion would have been a counterpart at Kilmalsham of Osborne and Balmoral. If such a remark sounds like Toryism the answer is that every race as well as every unit of humanity must have its childhood.—"A BYSTANDER," in Weekly Sun.

The Cigarette Evil

The industrial census placed before the Government a few days ago showed among other things that the consumption of cigarettes in this country had almost doubled. This may be regarded by some as a mark of prosperity in the matter of industrial development, but by the honest-minded man it must be regarded with considerable alarm.

It is doubtful if we have in Canada to-day a greater evil than that created by the cigarette. We read every little while of some one dying as a result of the excessive use of cigarettes. They undermine the system, and what is far more serious, they inspire a mania which is in itself the barrier to reform.

The W.C.T.U. is waging a campaign against the cigarette evil, which has been marked by earnest and consistent efforts. Though success has not been attained, still it must be conceded that things point in a more promising direction. The matter has been before the house on two or three occasions, and though at one time it looked as though the desired end were to be accomplished, still the lack of courage on the part of the majority spelled temporary defeat. The Union is pressing forward with renewed energy, and it is a healthy sign to notice some of our public men throwing in their lot with the movement.

The cigarette evil is one that is growing in seriousness. It is the danger attending young manhood that could easily be stamped out without seriously affecting any interests. Its elimination means the establishment of healthier interest of the whole we should commendations for our young men, and in bat the evil with an earnestness that will inspire success.—Ontario.

The Trent Valley Canal is progressing slowly but surely towards completion. On Saturday the lift lock at Kirkfield was formally opened by the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General. This lock opens a passage between what is known as the "height of land" section in Victoria county, 596 feet above Lake Ontario and 800 feet above sea level, and the lower stretch flowing into Lake Simcoe. This now gives uninterrupted water communication from Barrie and all points on Lake Simcoe, to Healy's Falls. There are still about fourteen miles of canal to construct to unite the waters of Lake Simcoe with the Georgian Bay; and the portion from Healy's Falls to Trenton.

The Doctor Away from Home When Most Needed

People are often very much disappointed to find that their family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like cramp colic and cholera morbus require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape much pain and suffering and all risk. Buy it now, it may save life. For sale by J. S. Morton.

Take the Postmaster's Word for it

Mr. F. M. Hamilton, postmaster at Cherryvale, Ind., keeps also a stock of general merchandise and patent medicines. He says: "Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is standard here in its line. It never fails to give satisfaction and we could hardly afford to be without it." For sale by J. S. Morton.

Women's Institutes

One of the most significant and promising movements in the farm life of Ontario has been the steady yet rapid growth of Women's Institutes. Begun eight years ago, with two districts organized, one Institute in each, Women's Institutes now occupy seventy-eight districts in Ontario; there are four hundred and two Institutes altogether, with a total membership of over eleven thousand. The summer meetings begin with the first of June, and end about the middle of July. When it is remembered that Women's Institutes are intended to show how labor may be saved in household work, and to supply farmers' wives and daughters with an opportunity for affording each other mutual instruction and encouragement in home-making, housekeeping, sanitation the proper care of milk, and kindred subjects, and, most important of all, in the ethical relations of life and the cultivation of a social, neighborly spirit, it will be understood what an influence these Institutes are already exerting, and what an extraordinary influence they promise to exert. They are a living demonstration of the fact that the final problem of the farm is not the doubling of crops—excellent as that endeavor is—but the doubling of the desirability, the comfort and the standard of farm life. The organization of Women's Institutes by the Provincial Government, under the leadership of such men as the Deputy Minister, Mr. C. C. James, and Mr. Putnam, Superintendent of Farmers' Institutes, shows that the Department of Agriculture recognizes its work to be not merely with products, but finally with the conditions of life on the farm. The Women's Institute is an extension of the work for Women in the Macdonald Institute. It aims at fitting woman to be mistress of her share in country life.

Hail Large as Eggs

Prince Edward county was visited on Monday afternoon by one of the most terrific hail storms experienced in years. The storm was particularly severe in the second and third concessions of Ameliasburg township, where hundreds of dollars' worth of damage was done. Nearly all the windows on the west side of the residences were broken, as well as all the windows on the west side of the Methodist church in the village. Many valuable windows in Victoria church, some miles from the village, were destroyed, and fruit trees suffered to a large extent. The storm broke out shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and hail stones picked up after the storm measured 1 1/2 inches in diameter, and weighed over two ounces. Nearly all the hail stones were large ones. The storm was followed by heavy thunder, lightning and rain.

For those who are taking a lengthy rest from business, or for those who are unable to leave it suggestions as to the best way to get the most good out of spare time are always interesting, and sometimes helpful. "Vacation for Business men," dealing with the best and most helpful way to spend a holiday; and "A Busy Man's Vacation," showing how a person can get rest and recreation at their own doors, are both interesting and helpful. Both these articles are to be found in the July Outing Number of Busy Man's Magazine. In addition to these, there are several others of interest to those about to take an outing, such as, "In Evangeline's Country," an entertaining account of a trip in picturesque Nova Scotia; "In a Border Mining Camp," and John Bull's Bread-basket, on Western Canada, the farming country. Other articles of popular interest also appear, among which are, "Government Ownership in Canada"; "The Farce at the Hague," a character sketch of Chas. R. Hosmer, Telegraph Operator; "Telegraphing Pictures"; "Inventions we owe to Savages"; "A Revolution in Travel" (the latter giving a little idea of the Monorail System); "Old Age Pensions in Germany"; "Even Temperament as a Business Asset"; "Succulent Dinners that Swim the Sea"; and other miscellaneous matter of equal merit. The amount of fiction is rather larger than usual this month, and no better can be said of it than that it is up to the usual standard.

THE TRAGEDIES OF STEEL

PITTSBURGH CORONER'S LOG BOOK OF CASUALTIES.

Fifty Per Cent. of Fatalities Comprises Human Sacrifice to Industrial Progress.

The grim and tragic side of Pittsburgh's industrial supremacy, as reflected in the county coroner's log book of violent deaths, is beginning to arouse a feeling of horror at the frightful cost of the wealth which its millionaires are piling up.

When the coroner closed his log for 1906, he found that in the year he had been called on to record a total of 2,666 deaths. Of these 919 were the result directly of accident in mill, mine or on railroad, the industries most essential to the city's progress. Sufficient more of the total number of deaths in the city were indirectly attributed to the same causes to make more than 50 per cent. of all deaths the cost in human life of the steel and money made in Pittsburgh for 1906.

Appalling as these figures are, the chances are that a new record will be established this year. Already in the five months that have elapsed, 1,000 deaths have been recorded in the coroner's log, and of these 244 came suddenly and violently in the mills and mines and on the railroads that gridiron the city. In the same period last year, the total number of deaths recorded was 1,015, and those laid at the door of the city's industries numbered 340.

250 DEATHS EVERY MONTH.

While in the aggregate these figures may seem abnormal they are recorded so regularly that their magnitude is scarcely realized. The average number of deaths reported to the coroner is about 250 a month, and there is little variation from this from year to year.

Comparing the loss of life by accidents with the tonnage and production of the Pittsburgh district, one life has been snuffed out for every 50,000 tons of coal that is shipped, and the annual shipment is about 50,000,000 tons. For every 3,800 cars that carry freight out of or into Pittsburgh, one soul has given up the ghost. This is exclusive of cars that are carrying freight through to other points.

Every 7,600 tons of the 7,000,000 tons annual production of iron and steel have been put out at the cost of the life of one of the manipulators somewhere in its manufacture, and of the 800,000 tons annual output of steel rails every 87,000 tons have been put upon the market after some one of its producers has laid down his life.

FLESH AND BLOOD IN RAILS

Although the coroner's log is the farthest kind of a casualty list, it is possible to glean from it some idea of the manner in which death comes to the workers. Most men die of burns, scalds, or of being run over by a train. That is the obituary of scores. Often a blast furnace bursts. That scatters death and sometimes a fate worse than death, which does not figure in the coroner's log.

The upsetting of a huge ladle of molten steel is no uncommon thing in the mills. Men work there at a frantic pace. Demand runs far ahead of the output of the mills, and no time is wasted in the making of steel. Men who work always alongside of death are not especially careful. Thus, often, the ladies spill over. Sometimes in these spills a man vanishes. But the tolls go out.

There are the giant rollers that crush out steel plates, and often human lives, and murderous machinery that is everywhere a death trap for the unwary workman. The record contains also the names of men who worked, for an instant, too near the

GREAT ELECTRIC CRANES.

Those huge mechanical arms that, with almost human precision, pick up and move pieces of structural steel about the plants and place them wherever may be indicated at the simple moving of a lever.

The mines and the railroads supply their quota to the coroner's log. Falling slate, gas explosions, derails, falls from scaffolding, in the shunting cars, and other accidents on the rail all help to swell the cost in human life.

PAPER PAIRS FOR MILK.

Latest London Contrivance for Securing Pure Milk Supply.

For years London's milk supply has been blamed by medical men and health officers for a great deal of the infant mortality.

Now the dairy companies are to deliver milk at the doors of houses in paper pails or pitchers, which are said to be absolutely proof against germs and water.

The paper pails are being made at a new factory at the rate of 500,000 daily, but they will require to be turned out at the rate of some millions daily if the demand is to be met.

These milk pails, made from wood pulp, can, of course, be used only once. But they will be cheaper than metal pails, pitchers, or glass bottles, for one reason, because all labor of cleaning and sterilizing will be saved.

The pail is a simple contrivance, twelve times lighter than the ordinary milk can, is strongly made and is finished off, after being rendered waterproof, by being sterilized in a furnace heated up to 500 degrees Fahrenheit. Every pail has a close fitting flanged cover which can be quickly adjusted, and when fixed, effectually seals the milk from any outside influence.

Success is pretty certain to come in the man who can get up for work unaided by an alarm clock.

STRANGERS AT ALTAR

PARTED IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE CEREMONY.

Amazing Romance of Real Life—Bride Married to Oblige a Brother.

A romance of real life, unsurpassed by the most improbable of sensational novels, was revealed in the London law courts the other day.

It was related by Mrs. Ada Olivia Sophia Brine, who claimed £684 from her husband, Mr. Harry Brine, of East Cotes.

Mrs. Brine's extraordinary story may be summarized as follows:—

She married a man in order to oblige his brother, with whom she was in love.

She never met the bridegroom before her wedding day, and they parted immediately after the ceremony.

Through the medium of an advertisement she met Mr. Brine, who arranged a divorce and married her.

She was imprisoned by him in a house, cruelly treated, and made to sign cheques, but escaped.

Mr. J. Willis, for the lady, stated that she first married a Mr. Crampson, who left her money. In addition to this she had £200 to £300 a year under the will of her father, Mr. Garus Wilson.

Her second husband was Mr. W. Will, but there were divorce proceedings. Mr. Brine, who had been a trustee in her settlement, being the co-respondent.

MATRIMONIAL ADVERTISEMENT.

Mrs. Brine, who is an elderly Irishwoman, said she was divorced from Mr. Will in 1903. They parted on the day they were married, and she never lived with him.

She met Mr. Brine after seeing an advertisement in a Sunday newspaper. He continued. He found out that she had not lived with Mr. Will, and said he could "get her out of it" if Mr. Will was paid.

A divorce was "worked up" by Mr. Brine. Mr. Will accepting a large sum and handing her over. She also paid the expenses of Mr. Will's petition.

He treated her, and she looked up, and forced me to sign cheques, but I escaped with one of his daughters," she added.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bower, K.C., she said she "started the matrimonial correspondence" for fun.

"Why did you marry Mr. Will?" she was asked.

"Must I really say that?" the lady pleaded.

"Well," said Mr. Bower, "I suppose you married him because you loved him."

"I never met him before in my life," was the surprising reply.

LOVED HIS BROTHER.

"I never heard such a thing in my life," exclaimed Mr. Bower, and Mrs. Brine explained, amid roars of laughter, "I knew the family well, and I loved his brother, Francis Will. It was for the sake of the brother that I married into the family."

Mr. Bower then questioned Mrs. Brine with regard to her relations with her husband. "Is this your diary?" he asked, holding up a book.

"Yes," she answered, adding dramatically, "What a mean thing to take a woman's diary. I had lost it for years, and here it is."

Counsel then read the following extracts:—

"B. and I inseparable. The two of us wandered away to seaward. Found a nook, where we rested till sundown and after. The hush of peace was over land and sea."

"Sabbath. B. took a little boat round to C's farm. We alighted, and spent the time in search of flowers. Found a book on the stars."

"My lover and I went out. He brought me a melon and a bottle of ale. Our hearts are inseparably fixed."

"Our courtship was very sweet," said Mrs. Brine. "It was when he was my husband that he became a devil."

Mr. Brine denied his wife's allegations, and said he had spent the money in accordance with her instructions.

Judgment was given for Mr. Brine with costs.

SOMETHING LIKE A HEN.

Yes see, my brother Sam was a natral genius, and war allus tryin' some way to invent fer make hens lay, an' one day he rigged a machine that did the thing he wanted. It war natral more or less than a hen's nest with a feed bottom. When the hen got on that 'ere nest, and layed, the egg dropped through into a basket. Arter Sam got the thing fixed, he put it in the hen house, an' stood outside, an' peeped through a crack to see the thing work.

The first hen that went on tew it war the old yaller hen. Sam said arter she'd laid she got up an' commenced her cackle, but happenin' fer look down she didn't see nothin'. Thinkin' she'd made a mistake, she shut up her noise, an' set down agin an' laid another egg.

This time she looked afore she begun her cackle, but the egg had gone through. Sam said the old hen looked mad, and set down agin an' laid another—but no go, it warn't there.

Arter she'd laid ar-fa-doo Sam went in ter the house, yellin' loud, an' an' writ out an application for a patent, an' saddled the old sorrel mare, an' went gallopin' away tew the Patent Office, ten miles off. About sunset he came back and asked me ter help him gather the eggs. Well, gentlemen, we took out six dozen hard-shelled eggs, which the old yaller hen had laid that afternoon. I told Sam we ought ter take the old hen off and give her some corn.

"Agreed," said Sam; but when we come ter look fer her all we could find was her bill an' claws an' a few feathers. The fact is, the old hen had laid herself flat away.

"Did Sam get a patent?"

"No," the Patent Office man said "I durstn't give him one, as he was afeard 'e would exterminate the whole feathered tribe on the face of the earth; an', besides, the supply of eggs would hev exceeded the demand."

Occurrences in the Land That Reign Supreme in the Commercial World.

The King has approved of the West Indian Battalion Royal Garrison Artillery being disbanded.

Hundreds of Lancashire colliers have gone out to New Zealand, and many of them are now waiting home for clogs to be sent out to them.

Pygmies brought from the forest of Ituria, in Central Africa, by Lieutenant Colonel J. Harrison, appear at Earl's Court Exhibition.

Sir Alexander John Arbuthnot, formerly a member of the Council of India, has died in London in his eighty-fifth year, after undergoing an operation.

For striking a petty officer, who reported him, Arthur Tucker, seaman, of H.M.S. Illustrious, was sentenced at Chatham to eighteen months' imprisonment.

Liverpool sailors have decided to ask the Steamship Owners' Association for an all-round increase in wages and the establishment of a Conciliation Board.

Westminster Guardians decided to supply to an aged inmate of the workhouse, named Thomas Johnson, a set of false teeth and a false palate, at a total cost of £4.

Because they played a game of dominoes on Sunday, two inmates of the workhouse have been sentenced by the Hampsford guardians to two days' dietary on bread and water.

George Benwell, thirty-eight, firewood merchant, of Kingston-on-Thames, committed suicide by leaping from the King Charles Bridge at Surbiton to the railway below, a distance of forty feet.

Depression following a lawsuit decided against him was suggested at the inquest as the cause of the suicide of Mr. Woolf, furniture dealer, of Ravenscroft Park, who shot himself in an hotel at Dover.

Mr. Justice Bingham, at the New Bailey, sentenced James Ashton, a lad of sixteen, to ten years' penal servitude for the manslaughter of William Garrett Dunton in the City Road on the night of the final contest for the English Football Cup.

About 300 girls employed at the Pool Wall collar and shirt factory at Taunton, have gone out on strike owing to the price of cotton supplied to them for work being raised. The strike of painters at Staunton has now been in progress for a month.

After thirty-eight years' service, during which he has walked 809,412 miles, and has never been late on duty, Richard Sears Goodman, a rural postman, attached to Newport Pagnell (Bucks), has been presented with the Imperial Service Order medal.

Mr. Douglas Sladen writes that within fifty yards of the Round Pond in Kensington Gardens his son on Thursday came across an ordinary ringed snake, between two and three feet long, coiled up and asleep. When poked with a stick it made no attempt to get away.

Constable Woodward was the rescuer of a girl named Sarah Barnett, who was struggling in the river at Chelsea, but, owing to the strength of the current was forced to let her go. As she sank the girl seized the officer's leg, and he then succeeded in dragging her to the surface and swam with her to the shore.

Colonel Mathias, Gordon Highlanders, who served in the Sudan operations, in the Chitral campaign, including the storming of the Malakand Pass, the Tirah campaign, in which he led the first assault at Dargai, and was wounded and made an A.D.C. to the late Queen, has retired under the age regulation.

Whilst the verger at St. Leonard's Parish church, Bilston, was going his rounds on Sunday evening lighting up the gas, prior to the service there was a terrible explosion of gas, and the interior of the sacred edifice was partially wrecked. The accident is supposed to have been due to a leakage of gas in the vicinity of the organ.

Old Scotland Yard, for nearly a hundred years the headquarters of the London police, is about to disappear, to make way for the construction of a grand new thoroughfare, extending from Whitehall to Northumberland avenue, and with it one of the most familiar landmarks of the British metropolis, a landmark enjoying a world-wide celebrity, will vanish.

SUICIDE FROM BARBARITIES.

Systematic ill-treatment of Soldiers in Austrian Army.

The large number of serious cases of ill-treatment of soldiers which have recently been reported have caused a considerable scandal in Austria.

Within the last few weeks, three cavalry soldiers belonging to different regiments have committed suicide on account of cruel treatment. One of them, a Hussar, shot himself within hearing of Archduke Josef, who was reviewing his regiment at the time. The archduke ordered an immediate enquiry into the circumstances.

A young recruit in the dragons wrote a pathetic letter to a Bohemian newspaper describing how he was constantly beaten and kicked about because he could not ride. "The officers continually call us 'cattle' and 'swine,' and treat us as such." The letter concluded: "I am going to kill myself before this letter can be printed, as I can stand it no longer." The letter and the man's suicide appeared at the same time.

ORGANS FOR WARSHIPS.

It is announced that warships carrying chaplains are to be supplied with organs in future. Four new cruisers of the Achilles class are to be supplied forthwith, and six other vessels have been selected for a like distinction. The change is regarded by the Admiralty as desirable in the spiritual interests of the sailors. It is thought the organ will give a more impressive setting to the services held on board ship than the band accompaniment.

$55,000,000 FOR BEER

BUSINESS OF SELLING DISSIPATION IN CHICAGO.

Estimate of the Breweries and Saloons of Beer Drunk During Last Year.

"Why have the primary and basic guarantees of civilization broken down in Chicago? Why has that city, year after year, such a flood of violent and adventurous crime?" asks a writer in McClure's Magazine.

The answer can be simple and straightforward: Because the tremendous and elaborate organization, financial and political, for creating and attracting and protecting the criminal in Chicago.

FROM BUSINESS STANDPOINT.

The dweller in the city, true to the instincts of city life, has made dissipation a financial transaction, has found it a great source of gain. Ethically considered this thing is hideous beyond belief; socially considered, it is suicidal.

But to be understood intelligently, it must be considered in neither of these lights, for as its methods and motives are purely business-like, it must be considered purely from a business standpoint.

LEADING BRANCH OF BUSINESS.

The leading branch of the great business of selling dissipation in Chicago, is naturally, that of saloons. In the receipts in the retail liquor trade in Chicago were more than $10,000,000. They were probably about $15,000,000.

There are 7,300 licensed liquor sellers in Chicago, and in addition about a thousand places where liquor is sold illegally.

The city spends at least half as much for what it drinks as for what it eats, not counting the cost of cooking and serving of food.

CAN START WITH $200.

Up to last year, no man with two hundred dollars, who was not subject to arrest on sight, need go without a saloon in Chicago, nor for that matter, need he now. With that two hundred dollars as a margin, the brewery sells him out a set from its stock of saloon fixtures, pays his rent, pays his license, and supplies him with beer. He pays for everything in an extra price on each barrel of beer.

The other supplies of his saloon—liquor and cigars—are bought out of his two hundred dollars cash capital.

There is now one retail liquor dealer to every two hundred and eighty-five people. Disregarding unlicensed dealers in the laboring wards, the licensed saloons run as many as one to every hundred and fifty.

In the stock yards, just forty-eight saloons in opposing rows of staggering wooden buildings down a distance across which a strong man could throw a stone.

SELL BEER OR DIE.

The breweries own or control the great majority of the saloons of American cities. They have a distinct policy: There are not as many saloons as there can supply them. This is what has been done in Chicago. Fully ninety per cent. of the Chicago saloons are under some obligation to the brewery; with at least eighty per cent. the obligation is a serious one.

The brewery, under present conditions in Chicago, must sell beer at all cost, or promptly die. This is because the brewing business has been over-capitalized, and over-bought there for at least ten years, and at the present time, a full third of the capital invested in the forty companies and fifty plants is not earning dividends. Under these circumstances the breweries of Chicago can have but one aim—to fill Chicago with beer to the point of saturation.

RAISING FEE NO AVAIL.

Reckoning it out by population, every man, woman and child in Chicago drank in 1906, two and one quarter barrels of beer—that is seventy-gallons—three and one-half times the average consumption of the United States.

The main object of the brewing business is well fulfilled: The consumers of Chicago expended not less than $55,000,000 for beer in 1906.

A year ago the license fee was raised from five hundred to one thousand dollars. It was hoped that this would wipe out the criminal saloon, but it did not.

Out of the sort. A hundred and thirty miserable little hives in the working man's ward slaggared down and died, but the man with the side line of prostitution and gambling naturally survived, and had the benefit of the other's failure.

A more terrible feature than even the crimes in its immensity caused by the drink traffic, is that the children are as quickly and as surely rotted as their parents, by the influence of the saloon upon the neighborhood of their homes.

WAR DOGS FOR TURKEY.

Major, Richardson, of the British army, who recently took three ambulant dogs to Turkey and instructed the Albanian soldiers of the guard at Yildiz in their use, has been created by the Sultan a commander of the order of the Medjidieh. The Sultan, who witnessed the performance of the dogs in his private grounds, expressed great delight at their work. Major Richardson says that the Sultan is a good sportsman, with a thorough knowledge of dogs.

TO SAVE PENS.

The millionaire, before filling his inkwell, dropped in two or three old pens and squeezed the writing fluid upon them. "Thus," he said, "I practise pen economy, prolonging three or four times the life of all my pens. You see, the corrosive power of the ink, which is immensely strong, vents itself on the old pens (and in the process has little or no strength left wherewith to attack the pen I have in use. Try this scheme, young man, and you will find that your pens will practically never wear out."

CADET PRINCE EDWARD

LEARNING THE ROPES AT THE ROYAL NAVAL COLLEGE.

The Future King of England Tumbles Into Line With 400 Cadets.

A first term cadet was strolling in the grounds of the Royal Naval College at Osborne recently, when he was met by a fourth-term cadet, who, noticing that the younger boy was fresh to the place, spoke to him.

"Hello," he said, "you are a first term?"

"Yes," said the new boy.

"What's your name?"

"Edward."

"Edward what? Haven't you got any other name? What's your full name?"

"Edward of Wales."

"The elder boy whistled.

"Oh," he said, "you're the chap, are you," and he walked on.

There is no snobbish spirit at the Royal Naval College, and Princes are judged by their personal merits alone. Indeed, Prince Edward of Wales, mainly little fellow that he is, is under the disadvantage of having to encounter lads who shrink from the suspicion of favoritism towards a highly-placed school-fellow. That Prince Edward is accorded no special favor is demonstrated by the fact that many of the four hundred cadets at the college do not know him.

TYPICAL CADET.

Prince Edward is just a typical cadet among cadets, fighting the battles every-boy has in school life, and enjoying himself greatly while he does it. He dropped into the ways of the school very quickly, and from the first showed a hearty enjoyment of the cup of cocoa and the biscuits with which, soon after half-past six, the cadets start the day. He early became an adept in the rush for meals at the sound of the bugle. From 7 to 7.45 the boys are at study, and then, when the bugle sounds, they leave their lessons and go to the double for the dining-hall. Prince Edward, as becomes a lusty boy, is with those in the van.

It is regarded by the college authorities as the highest commendation of a cadet that he is just an ordinary cadet. Only once was he guilty of a boyish informality, and it was in his first days and on an occasion which would try the heart of any schoolboy away from home.

EDDY SKIDDOED.

An official was taking him round the engineering shop, explaining some of the things he would have to learn in the future, when the news came that his father the Prince of Wales was in the college. Prince Edward forgot the machinery and forgot the official, and fled as fast as his legs could carry him to see his parent.

During the six weeks at the college one of his most exciting experiences has been a visit to the Dreadnought. He, together with a number of the other cadets, was taken out to the great warship, and the party was conducted over her as an interesting lesson. That was only an incident in the full life he shares with his school-fellows. He begins his studies at 7 in the morning, he leaves off at a quarter past eight at night. Between those times are wedged in two or three hours of recreation. Work is further lightened by two half-holidays a week.

GOT BLACK EYE.

Prince Edward is very fond of cricket, and those who have seen him play say he has the makings of a good wicket-keeper. A rumor spread over Cowes a few days ago to the effect that he was suffering from a black eye, as the result of a blow from a cricket ball.

Prince Edward had been through his first fight. Even now the officers at the college absolutely deny that the young prince has had a black eye at all, a good many people shake their heads knowingly and express the opinion that he is "a manly boy and not to be put upon."

CLAIM AGAINST GERMANY.

Butt In by Heirs of a Great Russian Statesman.

The Prussian Government is considering a claim of the heirs of a great Russian statesman, the Field Marshal Count Munnich. The claim is regarding a considerable sum and of great interest to two families living in France.

The Russian field marshal Count Munnich received from Frederick the Great, King of Prussia, as a present, a property situated in Prussia, given to him for good services rendered to the state by the conclusion of a treaty.

The count did not accept this, but with the agreement of the Empress Anna of Russia, it was transferred by Frederick the Great to the son of the field marshal. This son obtained afterwards the written promise that the sum of 312,000 "Thaler" should be given to him.

The descendants claim that this sum now, with the interest since 1741, the descendants of the granddaughters of the field marshal, his grandson died a bachelor in France, on the one side, the Counts d'Altonville and on the other side Mme. David-Nolche, wife of Mr. David, of the well-known furrier and dress-making firm of Bechoff & David. She is now in the hands of von Nolche, descending from Axel-Gustav, Baron von Nolche, who married in 1787 Marie Ernestine, Countess von Munnich, immediate heiress of the Field Marshal Munnich.

As the sum asked for amounts to a great many millions the present claim is of great interest. The Counts d'Altonville have, through the good offices of Countess von Wedel Gorman, ambassador in Vienna, addressed a letter to the chancery of the Emperor William. Prince Rudolph has given answer that the territorial claim cannot be admitted, but did not speak of the 312,000 thalers.

FAIR MEANS OR FOUL.

A sallow-complexioned old lady, accompanied by a phenomenally unprepossessing daughter, recently walked into the studio of a photographer.

"Be you the photographic man?" she inquired.

"Yes, mamam," replied the artist in plate-glass and chemicals; "can I do anything for you?"

"No; I'm too far over the border. It's my darter Maria here that I want took. Can't you touch up that complexion of hers and build up that nose, what was broke by fallin' out of the window?"

"I think I can," replied the artist. "I've seen pictures of lots of our relations, and I've allers noticed that the pictures doffered 'em. I know you kin make her like Edna May or not, just as yer please. Can't you take in Maria's ears, too, so she won't look so much like a rabbit?"

"There will be no difficulty in that," said the artist.

"How about that squint in her left eye?"

"I can touch it up with Indian ink," said the artist. "You see, the photograph is goin' to a young fellow who's got an advertisement in the paper for a wife, and Maria's willin' to him."

"I'll do my best."

"Well, all right, then. Just go ahead, and square them shoulders back just a trifle, an' bring the nose down line; destroy them freckles, and tone down her ears. An' the hair—it won't be red in the picture, will it?"

"Oh, no; there will be no color shown but black."

"That's a comfort, Maria. Kin I stay in the room?"

"Oh, yes."

"At right, strike an attitude, Maria, an' sit down fast, and well back that young man, as sits as you live."

Herds of Wild Animals on the Veld—Natives and the White Lord Under the Awning.

Spring is on us with a rapidly that the temperate climates know not. One good shower and in two days the face of nature is transformed. ## MAY SAVE SOME LIVES

DIRECTIONS FOR RESTORING THE APPARENTLY DROWNED.

Issued by the Royal National Lifeboat Institution of Great Britain.

The leading principles of the following directions for the restoration of the apparently dead from drowning, issued by the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, are founded on those of the late Dr. Marshall Hall, combined with those of D. H. R. Silvester, and are the result of extensive inquiries which were made by the institution amongst medical men, military doctors and coroners throughout the United Kingdom. These directions have been extensively circulated by the institution throughout the United Kingdom and in the Colonies. They are also in use in His Majesty's Fleet; in the Coastguard Service; at all the stations of the British Army at home and abroad; in the light-houses and vessels of the corporation of the Trinity House; the Metropolitan and Provincial Police Forces; the London County Council Schools and the St. John Ambulance Association.

Send immediately for medical assistance, blankets, and dry clothing, but proceed to treat the patient instantly on the spot, in the open air, with the face downward, whether on shore or afloat; exposing the face, neck and chest to the wind, except in severe weather, and removing all tight clothing from the neck and chest, especially the braces.

The points to be aimed at are—first and immediately the restoration of breathing; and secondly, after breathing is restored, the promotion of warmth and circulation.

The efforts to restore breathing must be commenced immediately and energetically, and persevered in for one or two hours, or until a medical man has pronounced that life is extinct. Efforts to promote warmth and circulation beyond removing the wet clothes and drying the skin, must not be made until the first appearance of natural breathing; for if circulation of the blood be induced before breathing has been restored, the restoration to life will be endangered.

II.—TO RESTORE BREATHING.

To Clear the Throat.—Place the patient on the floor or ground with the face downwards, and one of the arms under the forehead, in which position all fluids will more readily escape by the mouth, and the tongue itself will fall forward, leaving the entrance into the windpipe free. Assist this operation by wiping and cleansing the mouth.

If satisfactory breathing commences, use the treatment described below to promote warmth. If there be only slight breathing—or no breathing—or if the breathing fails, then—

To Excite Breathing.—Turn the patient well and instantly on the side, supporting the head, and—

Excite the nostrils with snuff, harts-horn, and smelling-salts, or tickle the throat with a feather, etc., if they are at hand. Rub the chest and face warm, and dash cold water, or cold and hot water alternately, on them. If there be no success, lose not a moment, but instantly—

To Imitate Breathing.—Replace the patient on the face, raising and supporting the chest well on a folded coat or other article of dress.

Turn the body very gently on the side and a little beyond, and then briskly on the face, back again, repeating these measures cautiously, efficiently, and perseveringly, about fifteen times in the minute, or once every four or five seconds, occasionally varying the side.

[By placing the patient on the chest, the weight of the body forces the air out; when turned on the side, this pressure is removed, and air enters the chest.]

On each occasion that the body is replaced on the face, make uniform but efficient pressure with both hands on the shoulder-blades or bones on each side, removing the pressure immediately before turning the body on the side.

During the whole of the operations let one person attend solely to the movements of the head and of the arm placed under it.

[The first measure increases the expiration—the second commences inspiration.]

The result is Respiration or natural breathing—and if not too late, Life.

Whilst the above operations are being proceeded with, dry the hands and face, and as soon as dry clothing or blankets can be procured, strip the body, and cover or gradually re-dress it; but taking care not to interfere with the efforts to restore breathing.

Should these efforts not prove successful in the course of from two to five minutes, proceed to imitate breathing by Dr. Silvester's method, as follows:—

Place the patient on the back on a flat surface, inclined a little upwards from the feet; raise and support the head and shoulders on a small firm cushion or folded article of dress placed under the shoulders.

Draw forward the patient's tongue, and keep it projecting beyond the lips; a hand over the tongue and under the chin will answer this purpose, or a piece of string or tape may be tied round them, or by raising the lower jaw, the teeth may be made to retain the tongue in that position. Remove all tight clothing from about the neck and chest, especially the braces.

To Imitate Movements of Breathing.—Standing at the patient's head, grasp the arms just above the elbows, and draw the arms gently and steadily upwards above the head, and keep them stretched upwards for two seconds. [By this means air is drawn into the lungs.] Then turn down the patient's arms, and press them gently and firmly for two seconds against the sides of the chest. [By this means air is pressed out of the lungs.]

Repeat these measures alternately, deliberately, and perseveringly about fifteen times a minute, until a spontaneous effort to breathe is perceived, immediately upon which, cease to imitate the movement of breathing, and proceed to induce circulation and warmth.

IV.—TREATMENT AFTER NATURAL BREATHING HAS BEEN RESTORED.

To Promote Warmth and Circulation.—Commence rubbing the limbs upwards, with firm grasping pressure and energy, using handkerchiefs, flannels, etc. [By this measure the blood is propelled along the veins towards the heart.]

The friction must be continued under the blanket or cover the dry clothing. Promote the warmth of the body by the application of hot flannels, bottles, or bladders of hot water, heated bricks, etc., to the pit of the stomach, the arms, between the thighs, and to the soles of the feet.

If the patient has been carried to a house after respiration has been restored, be careful to let the air play freely about the room.

On the restoration of life, a teaspoonful of warm water should be given, and then, if the power of swallowing have returned, small quantities of wine, warm brandy-and-water, or tea, should be administered. The patient should be kept in bed, and a disposition to sleep encouraged.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

The above treatment should be persevered in for some hours, as it is an erroneous opinion that persons are irrecoverable because life does not soon make its appearance, persons having been restored after persevering for many hours.

APPEARANCES WHICH GENERALLY ACCOMPANY DEATH.

Breathing and the heart's action cease entirely; the eyelids are generally half closed; the pupils dilated; the tongue approaches to the under edges of the lips, and these, as well as the nostrils are covered with a frothy mucus. Coldness and pallor of surface increase.

CAUTIONS.

Prevent unnecessary crowding of persons round the body, especially if in an apartment.

Avoid rough usage, and do not allow the body to remain on the back unless the tongue is secured.

Under no circumstances hold the body up by the feet.

On no account place the body in a warm bath unless under medical direction, and even then it should only be employed as a momentary excitant.

By order of the Committee of Management.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Secretary.

Royal National Lifeboat Institution, 20 Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.

NERVOUS INDIGESTION.

A Severe Case Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"I suffered so much from nervous dyspepsia, that I feared I would become insane," says Mrs. Alfred Austin, of Varney, Ont. "For months," says Mrs. Austin, "I was prostrated with this trouble. I got so bad I could not eat a mouthful of food without it nearly choking me. I was afflicted with such terrible feelings of dizziness and nausea that I had to leave the table sometimes with just two or three mouthfuls of food for a meal. My nerves were all unstrung, and I grew so weak that I could not even sweep the floor. In fact, my nerves affected me to such an extent that I feared to be left alone. I could not sleep at nights, and used to lie awake until I feared my reason would leave me. I was taking medicine constantly, but it did not do me a bit of good. I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on a former occasion with good results, and at last I determined to try them again. I can say nothing better than that these pills have been a blessing to me, as they have made me a well woman. Every trace of the indigestion is gone, and my nerves are as strong and sound as they were in girlhood. Now I can eat anything that is on the table, and I get sound refreshing sleep at nights. All this I owe to the faithful use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I shall never cease to praise."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills fill the veins with new, rich, red blood. That is why they strengthen the nerves and every organ in the body. That is why they cure all troubles due to bad blood or weak, shattered nerves, such as anaemia, with its grinding, wearing backaches, headaches and sideaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, heart palpitation, indigestion, listlessness, partial paralysis, kidney troubles, and those special ailments that render the lives of so many women and growing girls a burden. But you must get the genuine pills with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper I around each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LIVING ON TWELVE CENTS A DAY.

Professor Landouzy, of Paris, says it is possible to live on twelve cents a day, and he guarantees you three meals. The first is composed of milk, three pieces of sugar, bread and butter. At midday you may have bread, smoked ham, vegetables, or fruit (in summer), and a cup of coffee. In the evening you have soup, with lard and bread, haricots, lentils, chestnuts and wine. Total cost, twelve cents a day.

THE DIFFERENCE.

"What's the difference between a person with no sense of humor and a thief?" "Give it up."

"One takes things literally and the other literally takes things."

HOPE FOR BALD HEADED

MAY BE CURED IF THEY BREATHE CORRECTLY.

Anxiety Need Not Now Weigh Heavily Upon the Unadorned Pate.

Ordinary baldness is considered the consequence of inadequate chest breathing, in a recent paper by Dr. D. M. Parker, lecturer at the Detroit College of Medicine. The inadequate chest breathing allows a poisonous substance to develop in the lungs. This poisonous substance circulates in the blood. The roots of the hair are an indirect result of this situation, over the cranium; but this deprivation is directly entailed by the poison generated in the upper chest, the circulation of the consequent poison through the body and the starvation of the hair roots because the flow of their normally scanty nourishment is thus totally checked. Dr. Parker has studied this hypothesis of his for years, treating baldness and experimenting on animals.

INADEQUATE BREATHING.

Inadequate upper chest breathing leaves residual air undisturbed in the air cavities of a portion of the lungs. The residual air in any portion of the lungs that is not made use of for breathing purposes must necessarily lie undisturbed in the lung cavities. The residual air left in the lungs by inadequate breathing is warm, and it is saturated with moisture. Whenever residual air or what is the same thing, expired air, is kept chambered in the presence of warmth and moisture it invariably undergoes change, and develops a soluble poison that is capable, when present in the normal blood, of exerting a disturbance so far as concerns hair growth.

ACTION OF POISON.

It might be thought strange that a poisonous substance, circulating in the blood should limit its destructive action to the hair on the top of the head. This is explained by Dr. Parker's statement that the roots of the hair on the top of the head, lying over the hard, glistening, and practically bloodless occipital aponeurosis, are deprived of the nourishment that the roots of the hair on other portions of the head and of the face derive from the soft, blood-saturated tissue with which they are in close relationship. As a result, the hair roots of the top of the head are of comparatively low vitality, and yield readily to the action of the poison.

SIX WEEKS' CURE.

Observation applied to thousands of persons affected with common baldness developed, in Dr. Parker's experience, not a single exception to the rule that persons afflicted with this trouble do not employ upper chest breathing, and those not afflicted with baldness do employ upper chest respiration. Moreover, persons suffering from ordinary baldness find a remedy in the practice of upper chest breathing. After one week of dandruff entirely disappears. The hair begins to lose its dryness and harshness. In six weeks new hair begins to make its appearance. It is very fine, and first manifests itself at the edges of the bald spot. Craniums that had been bald for twenty years have developed hair after an amount of upper chest breathing. Of course, the practice must be steady and uninterrupted or there will ensue a relapse.

WHY DID THE COMPANY SMILE.

A pessimistic young doctor publicly deplored the impossibility of getting rich, and the difficulty of earning a decent living in the medical profession, without incessantly burning the candle at both ends.

"Stuff and rubbish, my lad!" a boastful old doctor cried. "There's as much money to be made now, in spite of competition, as ever there was. Take my case, for instance. I've lots of patients and I'm making money quick; but do I look overworked? Do I ever seem pressed for time? Have I not always plenty of leisure?"

"You certainly take life easily," the pessimistic young doctor replied, smoothly.

Then the company smiled, and the beautiful doctor fell into a train of thought.

MANY TURN-DOWNS.

Nena: "You may not believe it, but I said 'No,' to seven different men during the past winter."

Gertie: "I don't doubt it. What were they selling?"

"You certainly take life easily," the pessimistic young doctor replied, smoothly.

Then the company smiled, and the beautiful doctor fell into a train of thought.

HOW MUCH IS HABITABLE.

Ernest Thompson Seton Says Hundreds of Miles Farther North.

That the suitability of all portions of the west for agricultural purposes is to be tested in the immediate future is apparent from some of the reports of settlement sent in within the last few months. From Edmonton, for instance, scores of families have left on the long trek to Athabasca Landing and from that point onward to the Peace River country, and the vast area to the west, east and north.

A report is made from the heart of the Rocky Mountains to the effect that a considerable number of cars of settlers' effects were delivered during the past nine months at Salmon Arm, a station on the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway, about half way between Banff and the coast. A similar number of cars and settlers' effects were delivered in the same interval at Kamloops.

Hundreds of thousands of people who contemplate actual settlement are making the most careful scrutiny of all the information maps with the view of securing country which are open for homesteading and worth acquiring. The agents of the Government are daily furnishing informative literature. The result of this activity is that the available locations are being discovered in parts not heretofore regarded as fit for settlement.

On the subject of the proportion of the area of the west which is fitted for human habitation a considerable difference of opinion exists. Ernest Thompson Seton recently expressed the conviction that settlement would be made in districts four hundred miles to the north of any existing or contemplated railway.

Whether the country is permanently settled or otherwise, it is apparent from what has transpired during the past ten years, that there will remain eventually no portion of the west which has not been actually tested as the permanent abode of the white race. With the very rapid increase of population in the countries from which the present emigration to Canada is proceeding, it has become not a question of living in great comfort in the most favored portion of the world, but a question of sustaining life anywhere.

"Yes," said the red-eyed clerk, "I'm a little late this morning, the midnight oil, you know."

"Indeed?" interrupted his employer, "oil, eh? Well, the next time you paint the town I'd advise you to use water colors exclusively."

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator does not require the use of any purgative medicine to complete the cure. Give it a trial and be convinced.

NO FLIES ON HIM.

A young couple were observed as soon as they entered a railway carriage, and immediately put down as a bridal pair. But they were remarkably self-possessed, and acted just like old married folk, so that after a short time the other passengers began to doubt their belief, after all.

As the train moved out, however, the young man rose to remove his overcoat, and a shower of rice fell out. The passengers smiled broadly. But even that did not affect the youth, who also smiled, and, turning to his partner, remarked audibly:

"By Jove, Mary, I've brought away the bridegroom's overcoat!"

A SLIGHT AMENDMENT.

The face of the young man was rueful, and the lawyer he was interviewing looked exceedingly grave. It was a clear case of breach of promise, and the man of law could see nothing but heavy damages as the ultimate outcome. And he looked to some purpose to the young man, who waxed restive.

"Oh, yes," he said impatiently, "I know all about it! The same old song—'Do right, and fear nothing!'"

"No, not that! It's all," said the lawyer, smiling shrewdly, "What I meant to impress on you was 'Don't write, and fear nothing!'"

DISCHARGED WITH A CAUTION.

A laborer was charged with a petty offence.

"Have you anyone in court who will vouch for your good character?" queried the judge.

"Yes, sir, there is the chief constable yonder," was the reply.

"The chief constable was amazed. 'Why, your honor, I don't even know the man,' protested he.

"Now, sir," broke in the accused, "I have lived in the town for nearly twenty years, and if the chief constable doesn't know me yet, isn't that a character for you?"

AH! THAT'S THE QUESTION.

Mr. Rentall was annoyed with Mr. Shorter. It was not only that Mr. Shorter never paid his rent—though that was bad enough—but he was extremely cool about it. Another Monday morning had come, and once more Mr. Shorter was "sorry, but he'd have to beg Mr. Rentall to excuse him for the time."

The long-suffering landlord's patience was at last worn out.

"Look here," he cried, "you're preposterously off-handed about it; but how on earth do you expect me to live if you don't pay your rent?"

Mr. Shorter smiled the surprised smile which cheers not but exasperates.

"That, my dear sir," he said softly, "is to my thinking, somewhat beside the point. The question is, rather, how do you expect me to live if I do?"

MIGHT LAPSE.

Harold: "Do you think you could learn to love me?"

Miss Sharpe: "Yes, but I'm awfully forgetful."

No one need fear cholera or any summer complaint if they have a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial ready for use. It corrects all looseness of the bowels promptly and causes a healthy natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor, and is rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc., in the market.

"What are you crying for, my poor little boy?" "Bee-hool Papa fell down stairs!" "Don't take so on, my pet. He'll get better soon." "Sister saw him fall all the way. I never saw nuffin!"

But, Tommy, said his mother, "didn't your conscience tell you that you were doing wrong?" "Yes, mummie," replied Tommy, "but I don't believe everything I hear."

Something More than a Purgative.—To purge is the only effect of many pills now on the market. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are more than a purgative. They strengthen the stomach, where other pills weaken it. They cleanse the blood by regulating the liver and kidneys, and they stimulate the action of an injurious nature, used for merely purgative powers, enters into their composition.

Young Barrister (whose offer of marriage has just been accepted by his beloved): "What a relief! I feel as if I had just got three murderers acquitted."

Just a Word of caution: Where the skin is annoyed by burns or scalds apply Weaver's Ointment immediately; the sooner the better.

Wife—"Those new neighbors of ours seem to be awfully poor." Hubby—"How do you know?" Wife—"Whenever I want to borrow anything they never have it!"

For the Overworked.—What are the causes of despondency and melancholy? A disordered liver is one cause and a prime one. A disordered liver means a disordered stomach, and a disordered stomach means disturbance of the nervous system. This brings the whole body into subjection and the victim feels sick all over. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a recognized remedy in this state and relief will follow their use.

"George," murmured the young wife, "am I as dear to you as I was before we married?" "I can't exactly tell," replied the husband absent-mindedly. "I didn't keep any account of my expenses then."

The never failing medicine, Holloway's Corn Cure, removes all kinds of corns, to remove cannot withstand this wonderful remedy.

Liquor and Governments

The Dominion Government would seem to believe in prohibiting the liquor traffic, or did it simply yield to the common business sense of contractors when it proclaimed a prohibition zone extending twenty miles on each side of the Grand Trunk Pacific, making a belt of forty miles of prohibition territory. Why what is good for Grand Trunk workmen or Grand Trunk contractors is not good for people generally, does not appear. We should be fairly satisfied if prohibition were proclaimed for twenty miles on all sides of all factories, colleges, schools, churches, and so forth. But that it is not the good of the people that is being cared for seems to be rendered evident by the vacillating course of the government since it made this arrangement. There are other interests pulling at the government's maternal skirts, and every pull must be heeded. For what are the acts of governments but the results of all the pulls made at their skirts? It was found that in eastern Manitoba the twenty-mile zone would include certain villages where liquor is sold, and where there are in consequence held to be vested rights in the business. The tavern-keepers found a champion in Mr. Cyr, M.P. The prohibition zone was immediately cut down in the Rainy River district to ten miles on either side of the track. This did not cover all the existing bar-rooms. Mr. Cyr made further representations, and the minister, Mr. Aylesworth, has, it is averred, offered further to cut down the emancipated zone to five miles on each side. The enormous power of liquor over governments is revealed every day. The Quebec government is said, we do not know with that truth, to have listened most encouragingly to the complaints of certain Montreal liquor men that their licenses were too high. High license has been much vaunted as a means of curtailing what is admittedly a most blighting traffic. It certainly does make the government, by just so much more, a partner in that traffic; and it would not pay a government which largely lives by the fruits of that traffic to lay burdens on it beyond what it can bear. The greatest revenue from the greatest number must be its policy. That licensing is done purely for the revenue that can be got out of it, and not at all for the good of the people is proved by the fact that saloons which are constantly pouring forth their unstable and degraded product before the very eyes of the police, or, in other words, that are constantly demoralizing our people and the stranger within our gates in all men's sight, receive the renewal of their licenses from year to year as though they were the estimable institutions that the law demands they should be.—Witness.

Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, recently has declared that America, because of the exhaustion of the nitrogen of the soil, is travelling towards ground poverty. Mr. Edison, as Dr. Cameron, the soil chemist of the Department of Agriculture, proclaims, is unnecessarily alarmed. The whole atmosphere, as he says, is stored with nitrogen, and the advances in science have made practicable the extraction of this element by the ton. Several factories in the United States are now producing nitrogen from the atmosphere and selling it to farmers. More wonderful still, by a certain process, leguminous plants—a vast order of herbs, including the bean, pea, clover, indigo, logwood, tamarind, vetch, etc., etc.—are enabled by the operations of forty different kinds of bacteria to absorb nitrogen from the air and restore it to the soil. The Agricultural Department of the United States has constructed a laboratory where these beneficial bacteria are produced for distribution. They have done amazing things in increasing agricultural productivity. It is an actual fact that the employment of these bacteria has increased the yield of many crops from two hundred to a thousand per cent., besides—more wonderful still, perhaps—leaving the soil richer than it was at the time of planting. We have at our side a Jeremiah by the great scientist, Prof. Crookes, in which he proves conclusively—to his own satisfaction—that we must all inevitably be starved for want of wheat some day. Experience, however, teaches that Edison is nearer the mark when he confesses that he knows less than a billionth part about anything, and that nature is a teacher who is never wearied in imparting knowledge to those who diligently seek it.—Witness.

The Man of Honor

There is something more, something beyond this acquired power of intellectual labor, said President Eliot, of Harvard, in an address to the students recently. As Shakespeare puts it, "The purest treasure mortal times afford is a spotless reputation." How is that treasure won? It comes by living with honor, on honor. Most of you have begun already to live honorably and honestly; for the life of honor begins early. Some things the honorable man can do—never does, he never wrongs or degrades a woman. He never oppresses or cheats a person weaker or poorer than himself. He never betrays a trust. He is honest, sincere, candid and generous. It is not enough to be honest. An honorable man must be generous; and I do not mean generous with money only. I mean generous in his judgments of men and women, and of the nature and prospects of mankind. Such generosity is a beautiful attribute of the man of honor.

Our Home

Its Privileges, and Our Duties to Parents and Teachers

By MISS ANNIE HUME, STIRLING HIGH SCHOOL

The first thing to be considered in a home is the privileges afforded by it. The first and greatest privilege is the friendship of the members one to another. What more can any one wish than to gather parents, brothers, and sisters around the fire on a cold winter evening, and each relate his experiences of the day; or to go for a stroll on a beautiful moonlit evening of summer. In a home what concerns one member concerns all. If one has had a great sorrow, all the other members sorrow with that one, or if it be a joy then they are glad with that one. It is a very great privilege to be allowed to share in all the hopes of a family; parents tell their children their future hopes and plans.

The home is the place to take all our troubles, if it be the ideal home, whether large or small, in school or in private life. Our parents are always ready to share our burdens, and they are the best advisers. They seem to know instinctively what is best for us, and what we should not do. It is also a privilege to obey our parents. While we should be civil and loving to others, our parents should command our greatest love and respect.

Parents are largely responsible for the life of their children when they are grown up. The Bible says "Train up your children in the way they should go, and when they are old they will not depart from it." Many a child is left to bring himself or herself up alone, but this should not be allowed. Parents must be as they wish their children to be. They must set the example, for a child always copies his parents. A boy always thinks his father is a hero, and he believes every word he says. Therefore parents ought only to tell their children the truth. One of the greatest duties of a parent is to see that the children get to Sunday School every Sunday, and they should see that the teacher is a good one. Many a parent attends only to the outward appearance of their children, never thinking that their minds must be enriched with pure, wholesome literature. If anything goes wrong in school life parents should not side with the pupils against the teachers until they inquire the cause of the trouble. Parents must strive to make the home an ideal one, and teach the children it is theirs, to be made use of by them, so far as the parents see fit. If parents make home a pleasant and enjoyable place for the children they will remember it in the years to come, and often thank their mothers for the interest they took in them. But if the home is not enjoyable and pleasant they will not have the same to look back upon.

Lives of great men all remind us. We can make our lives sublime, And departing leave behind us Footprints on the sands of time. Footprints that perhaps another Sailing o'er life's solemn main, A forlorn and shipwrecked brother, Seeing may take heart again.

In a home one of the essentials is good literature. There should be no trashy novels, but good pure literature, which will also be instructive. Books on Nature are very interesting and instructive, and we should read these. None of us know half what we ought to know about Nature. But better than reading of her is to be out of doors and study from her. Books of travel and discovery help to lift our minds higher, and show us that we are a very small item in the world, and that the world in which we live is one in a thousand. History shows us that our bad habits, if once indulged, will make harsh tyrants out of us.

A child should first of all love its parents, and if it does, from that comes all else—their wish to obey, honor, and respect them. The Bible says "Children obey your parents." We should obey their every wish and command, not grumblingly, or because we are asked to do so, but because it should be a real joy to do so. We should treat parents with great respect, and honor and help them all we can. A child should not think he knows more than his parents, for if he does he is sure to come to grief. Children should also tell only the truth to their parents; if they once tell a lie to them they will soon know that "lies are never believed even if do tell the truth."

Of course our greatest duty to our teachers is to obey them, and not to be impatient. We should willingly do all we are asked to do by our teachers, never disobeying their commands. We should honor and respect them, for think of the time and trouble they put on to improve our education. It is a continual strain on a teacher, and very hard work for them to be always trying to teach us, putting so much time on each lesson. Our Sunday School teachers should also receive our greatest respect, for the training we receive from them helps to mould our future lives. Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam, Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home. A charm from the skies seems to hallow us there, Which seek through the world is ne'er met with elsewhere.

An exile from home, splendor dazzles in vain. O give me my lowly thatched cottage again! The birds singing gaily that come at my call, Give me them, and the peace of mind, dearer than all. Home! home, sweet home, There's no place like home.

POLAR DAYS AND NIGHTS.

Day, Which is Summer, is Not So Bad, but the Night is Awful.

During a polar winter the average thickness of ice on the ocean where no storms or strong tides interfere reaches six feet or more. There is really no warm season. Even during the long summer days snow still falls frequently. Clear spells are relatively warm, but, especially in the antarctic, fogs and clouds are frequent, while winds bring low temperatures.

Nevertheless the summer near the margins of the arctic zone is described in the Journal of Geography as having clear, pure, crisp air, free from dust and with little precipitation.

The monotony and darkness of the polar night is decreased a good deal by the long twilight, due to the high degree of refraction at low temperatures. The sun actually appears and disappears some days before and after the times which are geometrically set for the change.

Light from moon and stars and from the aurora also relieve the darkness. Optical phenomena of great variety, beauty and complexity are common. Clear and lunar halos and coronae and mock suns and moons are often seen. Auroras seem to be less common and less brilliant in the antarctic than in the arctic. Sunset and sunrise colors within the polar zones are described as being extraordinarily brilliant and impressive.

Thus the north polar summer, in spite of its drawbacks, is in some respects a pleasant and beautiful season. But the polar night is monotonous, depressing, repelling, an everlasting uniform snow covering, rigidity, lifelessness, silence, except for the howl of the gale or the cracking of the ice.

Small wonder that the polar night has sometimes unbalanced men's minds. The first effects are often a strong desire for sleep and indifference. Later effects have been sleeplessness and nervousness, tending in extreme cases to insanity, anaemia, digestive troubles.

Extraordinarily low winter temperatures are easily borne if the air is dry and still. Nansen notes "not very cold" at a temperature of 22 degrees when the air was still. Another arctic explorer at 9 degrees says, "It is too warm to skate."

Zero weather seems pleasantly refreshing if clear and calm. But high relative humidity and wind, even a light breeze, give the same degree of cold a penetrating feeling of chill which may be unbearable. Thus the damper air of spring and summer usually seems much colder than the drier air of winter, although the temperatures may be the same. When exposed directly to the air, the skin burns and blisters, the lips swell and crack. Thirst has been much complained of by polar explorers and is surely due to the active evaporation from the warm body into the dry, relatively cold air.

There is no doubt that polar air is singularly free from micro organisms, a fact which is due chiefly to lack of communication with other parts of the world; hence diseases which are common in temperate zones, colds among them, are rare.

Gulls as Life Savers.

"I wouldn't no more kill a gull than I would a baby," said the sailor. "Why not?" "Why not? Because gulls have saved my life, that's why not. Gulls is life savers. They've saved the lives of thousands of seamen. They ought to all wear round their sleek white necks a pink silk ribbon with one of them there Andy Carnegie medals tied to it. Wunst off the Orkneys, in a fog, we lost our bearings, and we'd 'a' run aground and drowned sure if the loud screaming of the gulls on the cliffs hadn't give us timely warnin'. So it goes. Time after time in black, stormy nights, in mists and fogs, gulls' cries, as good as any fog horn, warns sailors what has lost their way off deadly coasts.

Epicurean Finesse.

Two Marseillais were discussing the best method of eating game. "Well," said one, "if it is a woodcock, I hang it up on a nail by the beak and fasten some larks onto its claws. After a week I throw away the woodcock and eat the larks, which by that time have absorbed all the flavor of the woodcock." "I do the same," replied the other, not to be outdone, "except that I throw away the larks as well as the woodcock, and eat the nail."—Bon Vivant.

Miraculous Cures.

Reginald of Durham, who wrote a chronicle some time before 1195, asserts that a young English nobleman was cured of leprosy at the shrine of St. Cuthbert in Durham cathedral and that a young woman who had been for the space of three years an inmate of a large hospital established at Badale, near Darlington, in the diocese of Durham, was miraculously healed at the shrine of St. Godric at Finchale in the presence of Ralph Haget, sheriff of the county, and Norman, parson of the parish of Hailtune.—St. James' Gazette.

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative and my book on either Dyspepsia, the Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Heart, or Kidneys are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weak these nerves and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for bloating, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, or any other ailment, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me today for sample and free book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by J. S. Morton.

EMPRESS EUGENIE.

Her Dramatic Descent Upon the Cabinet Council.

In Frederic Lollée's "Women of the Second Empire" the author tells a sensational story of Empress Eugenie of France. It concerns a pressing political matter, one of church and state. Because the empress felt strongly on it the emperor feared lest she should endeavor to influence the deliberations of the cabinet council by appearing in person. Accordingly he gave orders that the meeting should be kept secret from her. M. Lollée says: "But the matter so carefully concealed was already known to her, and, acting on the first impulse of her fiery Spanish temperament, boiling over with anger, she flew rather than walked to the council chamber. A sentry had been placed at the door with orders to allow no one to pass. He opposed the entrance of the impetuous sovereign.

"I wish to enter. Stand back!" she cried angrily. Finding himself in a horrible quandary between the orders he had received and his fear of hurting his majesty, the guardsman, between his gallantry to her sex and his fidelity to the word of command, fell at the feet of Eugenie with his bayonet laid across the doorway.

"Your majesty," he said, "no one may pass, by order of the emperor."

"We shall see," replied Eugenie, and without more ado she leaped over the sentry's bayonet, burst open the door and entered the council chamber with the violence of a whirlwind. The emperor was presiding, grave and imperious, he alone having his head covered in the presence of his respectful and attentive ministers.

"But the sovereign failed to impose respect on his angry wife, who saw in him only the man and the husband. Going straight up to him, with a back-handed blow she knocked off his hat, then, without a word, withdrew as she had entered, leaving the ministers dumb with surprise and consternation."

SILVER WEDDINGS.

They Had Their Origin in the Reign of Hugues Capet.

The fashion of silver weddings dates back to the reign of Hugues Capet, king of France in 987.

Once as Hugues was arranging his uncle's affairs he found on one of the estates a servant who had grown gray in the service of his relative. He had been such a friend of his master that he was almost looked upon as one of the family.

On the farm with this old man was also a serving woman who was as old as he and also unmarried and who had been the most devoted and hardworking of the women servants of the king's uncle. When the king heard these praises of the two, he ordered them to be brought before him and said to the woman:

"Your service is great, greater than this man's, whose services were great enough, for the woman always finds work and obedience under than a man, and therefore I will give you a reward. At your age I know of none better than a dowry and a husband. The dowry is here—this farm from this time forth belongs to you. If this man who has worked with you five and twenty years is willing to marry you, then the husband is ready."

"Your majesty," stuttered the old peasant confusedly, "how is it possible that we should marry, having already silver hairs?" "Then it shall be a silver wedding," answered the king, "and here I give you a wedding ring," drawing a costly ring from his finger and placing the hands of the thankful old people together.

This soon became known all over France and raised such enthusiasm that it became a fashion after a twenty-five years' marriage to celebrate a silver wedding.

A Voyage of Death.

In the Sea of Okhotsk the salmon are suicidal and one of the most startling examples of the spendthrift side of nature may be found in the rivers that run into this sea. When six years old the salmon begin a voyage of death. Ascending the river of their infancy they race in countless thousands upstream until lack of food and lack of elbow room kill them off. A recent traveler declares that however many millions of salmon may run up the river, not one ever reaches the sea again alive. What becomes of the rivers of dead salmon? The seagulls wheel down upon the scene and feast upon their eyes, scornful anything less dainty. Bears, wolves, foxes and sledge dogs are made comfortable for the year.

Easily Replaced.

Mr. Fastest (with extra)—Sensational elopement! Well, what do you think of that? Young Galey has run off with his father's stenographer! Mrs. Fastest—Heavens! Why, I'll break the poor old man's heart. Mr. Fastest—Oh, I don't know. There are just as pretty stenographers in the employment agency as ever were hired.—Puck.

Irresistible.

The Doctor—What your wife needs is more physical exercise. Homer—But, doctor, I can't induce her to go outside the house. The Doctor—Oh, yes, you can. Mark all the bargain advertisements in the paper and give her $50.

A Different Matter.

"The law holds an accused person innocent until he is proved guilty."

"The law may, but how about the police?"—Washington Herald.

Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices.—Emerson.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

If you can smile when your rival is praised, you have tact.

There is always a demand for the man who does his best.

As a rule, other people are the best judges of your importance.

Our opinions are like our visits—more appreciated when not forced upon people.

Drifting with the tide is a slow way to get anywhere; the tide flows both ways.

The aggressive man is usually only a polite way of referring to your quarrelsome friend.

Don't air your family skeleton. People know enough about it when it is kept locked in the closet.

The most aggravating kind of a person to live in the house with is one who always has his own way and yet goes around with an abused air.

Schopenhauer on Anonymity.

Anonymity is the refuge for all literary and journalistic rascality. It is a practice which must be completely stopped. Every article, even in a newspaper, should be accompanied by the name of its author, and the editor should be made strictly responsible for the accuracy of the signature. The freedom of the press should be thus far restricted, so that what a man publicly proclaims through the far sounding trumpet of the newspaper he should be answerable for, at any rate with his name. If he has any, and, if he has honor, let his name neutralize the effect of his words. Rascal, your name! For a man to wrap himself up and draw his hat over his face and then fall upon people who are walking about without any disguise—this is not the part of a gentleman; it is the part of a scoundrel and a knave.

Why Books Are Gilt Edged.

Have you ever wondered why the top edge of your books is sometimes gilded and the other edges left plain? The explanation of this is very simple. When a volume is placed on the shelf of a bookcase the top side is obviously more exposed to dust than the others. The object of the gilding therefore is to save the pages from being soiled, for were it not present the dust would cling to this top edge and the appearance of the book would to a great extent be spoiled.

Precept and Practice.

A child walking with his tutor stole an apple from a stall in the street. His instructor, having witnessed the theft, gave his young charge a severe lesson on the heinousness of stealing and then, snatching the apple from him, quietly ate it himself. This is the abridgment of the greater part of all history.

The Post of Being a Man.

Even though you be hard pressed and violently attacked by the enemy, still it is base to give way. Hold the post assigned to you by nature. You ask, what this post is? It is that of being a man.

Fate.

"Marie, how does it happen that I just now saw you giving your sweet heart my cake and wine?" "I don't understand it either, for I covered up the keyhole."—Meggendrater Blatter.

It Didn't Break.

A little girl held a mirror up before a visitor's face and asked, "Do you see yourself in it?" "Yes, my darling." "Are you quite sure?" "Yes. Why should I not?" "Because I heard mamma say the other day that if you ever peeped into looking glass you'd smash it all into tiny little bits!"

He Could Dodge.

"There's nothing slow about Jones," he said reflectively. The other laughed scornfully. "I guess you never loaned him any money," he said. "Oh, yes, I have," replied the first speaker. "That's what made me speak that way. I loaned him $10 six months ago, and I haven't been able to catch him since."

She Got a New One.

"I've stopped asking people if my bonnet is on straight." The Husband—Why, my dear? The Wife—I love you too much, John, to disgrace you by calling a body's attention to an old bonnet like this.—London Tit-Bits.

Letter of Condolence

To our Brother, Hiram Dafeo.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—We, the officers and members of Tanter's L.O.L. No. 50, desire to express our heartfelt sympathy with you in your bereavement, through the loss of your beloved wife.
Bound as we are in a great Christian brotherhood, your sorrow is our sorrow and your loss, our loss. When brought face to face with death, human consolation is weak, but we have in our great Christian source of comfort for those that mourn, and we earnestly pray that our Supreme Master on High may sustain and strengthen you in the hour of your affliction, and that His protection may be continuously around you and guide you in the way of righteousness, and we trust you will look forward to a glorious resurrection, when you will meet with her who has gone before to those celestial mansions, where there will be no more parting. We commend you to your Saviour, who is able to bear your burden and sustain you in this your hour of greatest trial and need.
Signed on behalf of L.O.L. No. 50, ADAM BURNETT, W.M.,
JAMES E. TANNER.

Calling for heroes who, self-interest scorning,
Do what they know and dare what they feel.

Not in the wealth of her prairies so peerless,
Not in her output of silver and gold,
But in a people, free, righteous and fearless,
Lies her supremest of treasures untold.

Canada calls! Then let the response be
One that shall honor our glorious land;
Let us be all we would pray that our sons be,
All that our hopes and traditions demand.

Pure as the gold in the heart of her mountains,
Strong as her torrents that leap to the sea,
Straight as the pine tree and clear as her countains,
Honest and fearless, face-forward and free,
A. D. WATSON.

Best Medicine in the World for Colic and Diarrhoea

"I find Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to be the best remedy in the world," says Mr. C. L. Carter, of Skirrow, Ala. "I am subject to colic and diarrhoea. Last spring it seemed as though I would die, and I think I would if I had not taken Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I haven't been troubled with it since until this week, when I had a very severe attack and took half a bottle of the twenty-five cent size of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and this morning I feel like a new man." For sale by J. S. Morton.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The ladies of Trinity Church, Frankford, expect to see all their friends at their Garden Party on the evening of July 17th.

A Lawn Social will be held on the grounds of the Sidney Baptist Church on the evening of Wednesday, July 17.
The lawn socials held there have always been very enjoyable, and a good time may be expected.

There were 905 boxes of cheese offered at the Stirling Cheese Board on Tuesday. The sales were: Jas. Whitton 815 and Mr. Cooke 840 at 11c. The balance were unsold. The Board will meet next Tuesday at 4 o'clock.

A garden party in aid of St. Thomas' Church, 8th line Rawdon, will be held on the church grounds on Tuesday evening, July 16th. A good band will be in attendance, and ice cream, fruits, candy, etc., will be served.

The morning subject in the Presbyterian Church next Sabbath will be
"The meaning of the burning bush." Evening subject "The birth of the soul." Miss Leelah Calder, of Buffalo, has kindly consented to sing.

The town is assuming quite a festive appearance for the Orange celebration tomorrow. Arches are being erected along Mill and Front streets, and merchants are busy decorating their windows with the orange, purple and blue.
Several booths for refreshments are being prepared in anticipation of the demands of the huge gathering expected.

Mrs. Preston Cummings, whose maiden name was Louisa White, departed this life at Bay View Drive, Long Beach, Cal., on July 2nd. She had been in California for the past year, and for the last two months had been ill.
The remains will be taken to Campbell-ford, where the funeral will take place on Saturday, July 13th, at 10 a.m.

The results of the recent examinations at the Ontario Normal College were published on Friday. Among the names of the successful students we find those of Miss Janet Smith, of River Valley, who received a first-class and interim High School certificate, and Miss Florence Bissonnette, who received an interim Public School certificate.
We congratulate these young ladies on their success.

Buffalo, N.Y., is having an Old Home Week, which will be held from Sept. 1st to 7th, inclusive, and all former residents are requested to send their addresses to the Old Home Week Committee in order to receive souvenir invitations. It is not likely that there are any former residents of Buffalo in this vicinity, but there are several Canadians from this place and surrounding district who are residents of Buffalo.

A public meeting will be held in the town hall on Monday evening next to consider the request made by the Board of Education that the Council raise funds for the putting in of a new heating and ventilating apparatus in the Public School. This is an important question, and every ratepayer is requested to be present. It is necessary that new heating fixtures be put in the school, and the Board of Education is desirous of putting in the best, and as they believe, the only system that will give satisfaction.

The most important duty school trustees have to perform is the selection of a teacher. Few, very few, realize how important this duty is, or how much influence for weal or woe it has on the future of the children. Carelessness in the discharge of this duty is censurable.
Selections made for any other reason than the welfare of the children are criminal. Trustees should bear in mind that a special grant of $20 is now paid to every school whose teacher has a second class professional certificate.
In addition, forty per cent. of the excess of salary over $300 is paid.

Welcoming their New Pastor

On Friday evening last members of the Official Board, and friends, representing the Rawdon Circuit, met at the parsonage to extend a welcome to their new pastor, Rev. W. H. Clarke and family. After a social hour a cordial address of welcome was read, and kind words spoken, to which Mr. Clarke responded, thanking the brethren for their greeting and good wishes, and assuring them that his best endeavor would be given to promote the work of God on the Rawdon Circuit.

Dr. Acland Oronhyatekha, son of the late Supreme Chief Ranger of the I.O.
F., died suddenly at "The Pines," near Deseronto.

The longer I live the more deeply am I convinced that that which makes the difference between one man and another —between the weak and powerful, the great and significant—is energy, invic-ible determination—a purpose once formed, and then death or victory.
This quality will do anything that be done in the world; and no twolegged creature can become a man without it.—Buxton.

Village Council.

Council met on Friday evening last.
Present—W. R. Mather, reeve, and Messrs. Meiklejohn, Coulter, Wright.
Minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The following accounts were read,
and on motion ordered to be paid.
B. R. Wright, wood for Mrs.
Smith.....$ 8 60
A. McCutcheon, assessor's meeting 3 00
" delivering Court 1 50
A. McCutcheon, work on sidewalks 3 00
" 22 lbs. spikes..... 96
" 76 lbs. plank..... 1 52
" constable's salary 10 00
" cost of Hagerman 1 00

Moved by Mr. Meiklejohn, seconded by Mr. Coulter, that in reference to request of School Board for $2,000 for heating and ventilation purposes for the Public School, that in the opinion of this Council it would be unwise to grant the request without first submitting it for the consideration of the electors.—
Carried.
Council adjourned.

The Danger of Food Adulteration

The time has come when every housekeeper who regards the health of her family must know where she stands on the question of food adulteration. . . .
Scientific knowledge and unscrupulous greed have joined hands to pollute human food for the sake of money making.
To understand the situation, its extent and its dangers, is the right and duty of every intelligent housekeeper. To this end, an analysis of the adulterated foods and a lecturer to American housewives, Dr. J. C. Olsen, has granted an interview to a representative of THE NEW IDEA WOMAN'S MAGAZINE, which appears in the August issue. He explains the existing conditions, indicates their cause and gives some valuable information for the detection of impurities in food.

This is the greatest country in the world for everything to go with a rush.
Trains rush. Automobiles rush.
Everybody is in a rush. People rush for the train and rush for a seat. Before the train stops they rush for the platform. They rush into a restaurant and rush for a table and give the waiter a rush order. They rush the food into their stomachs and then rush for a doctor to get something for indigestion. A fellow will rush a girl for a short time, rush into an engagement with her, rush after a license, rush to the preacher to get married, and pretty soon he is making a rush for a divorce to end it all.
But there are times when they don't rush. For instance, a man will rush into a saloon and never think of rushing out. He will rush into a game of poker for "just one stack" and never think of quitting until daylight in the morning. A man will rush into a newspaper office to subscribe and then forget about the editor for years to come. A man will rush through life as if he were in a hurry to have it done with as soon as possible, but when the time comes for him to die his rush is over.

To Secure Success

No success deserves the name if it in any way lessens manhood. It may be better to deserve success than to attain it. To the extent that the faculties are cultivated, the chances for success are increased. A determined will is the fire under the boiler, without which the best engine is valueless. Dogged persistence often distances brilliant ability.
He who has regard for his duties and responsibilities is commonly accorded his rights. To be ashamed to work is the disgrace of the degenerate. Differences of lot or of endowment are the necessary conditions of existence, and should excite neither envy nor bitterness. All men are equal in the most essential, particular—each can do his best. Self-control is the first rung on the ladder of success. He who does one thing supremely well is spared the necessity of doing many things indifferently. It is well to look out for oneself, but better to remember that there are others. He who laughs when he can be able to bear what he must. To be satisfied is dangerous—to be self-satisfied is ruinous. Confidence invites success, and cheerfulness adds inducement. The past, for better or worse, is buried in character; the present is to be met with courage; the future never arrives. Judicious discontent is the running mate of progress. He who has pluck need not wait for luck.—Charles A. Murdock.

Words of Wisdom

Foolish spending is the father of poverty. Do not be ashamed of hard work. Work for the best salary or wages you can get, but work for half-price rather than be idle. Be your own master, and do not let money or fashion control you, individually—hat, coat and boots. Do not eat up or wear all you can earn. Compel your selfish body to spare something for profits saved. Be saving to your appetite, but merciful to others' necessities. Help others, but, if possible, get along without help for yourself. See that you are proud, too! Let that pride be of the right kind. Be too proud to be lazy; too proud to give up without overcoming every difficulty; too proud to wear a coat you cannot afford to buy; too proud to be in company that you cannot keep up within expense; too proud to be stingy.

A careful estimate of Canada's population, made by the Bureau of Census and Statistics, based on immigration returns since last census and the natural increase in population, shows that on April 1 last the population was 6,504,990, an increase of 133,589 since the decennial census of 1901. If the same rate of increase is maintained until 1911 the decennial census of that year will show a population of over seven and a half million.

Piles get quick and certain relief from Dr. Shoop's Magic Ointment. Please note it is made alone for Piles, and its action is positive and certain. Itches, painful, protruding piles, hemorrhoids, and all other piles, can be done in five days, and no large creature can become a man without it.—Buxton.

Mr. R. Scott has had a telephone put into his residence.

Miss G. Ketcheson is expected home shortly from Oregon, as she informed her friends here that she intended starting on July 5th.

Mrs. Snarr is improving slowly, but is not yet able to return home.

Mrs. Horton is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wesley Brown.

Miss Kate Cook arrived home on Tuesday after her visit to Colorado.

Planting Trees in the West

The Dominion Government forestry branch is engaged in an active campaign of tree propagation and tree preservation in the West. The officials have been educating the established farmers and the new settlers on prairie lands to plant trees. The movement is meeting with the greatest success.
This year to date the Government has supplied about 2,300,000 young trees to farmers throughout the three Provinces, making a total of about ten million planted during the past few years.

That war, though sometimes inevitable, is always an evil, few will deny.
If anyone doubts it he will probably be converted by the sight of the field after battle, of a hospital full of wounded, or of a country ravaged by an invader.
That the war passion excels the maner-passions is a fallacy abundantly con-futed by the annals of the commissariat and the stock exchange. All the churches pray for peace, though some of them, the State churches especially, do not patronize the object of their prayers. That the citizens of a free country should be trained to arms and capable of taking part in its defence in case of need is very well. But the cultivation of the war passion in the minds of children, thus filling the veins of the nation with the poison of the national proclivity to war, which seems now to be coming into vogue, is surely not so well.—"A BYSTANDER," in Weekly Sun.

Three hotels in Tweed have been charged with selling liquor to minors, contrary to the License Act. One was fined $40 and costs, another $20 and costs, and in the third case judgment was reserved.

Philip Ketcheson, of Tweed, who is charged with indecent assault upon two little girls named Arbuckle and Casey, was committed for trial at the fall assizes by Magistrate Masson, in Belleville. He was allowed out on bail.

It was Phillips Brooks who said: "If we should sweep temperance out of the country there would be hardly poverty enough left to give healthy exercise to our charitable impulses." And there would be abundance of money to carry on the work of evangelizing the world.

HIGH SCHOOL STATISTICS

Seven Hundred and Nineteen Teachers at the Present Time.

The second part of the report of the Ontario Education Department, issued the other day, shows that there are seven hundred and nineteen high school teachers in Ontario at the present time. Of these 23.65 per cent. are women. The percentage of women to the total number of teachers has been steadily increasing in late years. In 1904 it was 21.1 per cent., in 1905 23.1 per cent., in 1906 23.8 per cent. The highest salary paid is $3,500. The average in Collegiate Institutes is $1,176, which is $51 higher than last year. The average in High Schools is $975, an increase of $42 over last year. The average salary for men assistants is $1,091, an increase over last year of $68. The average for women assistants is $762, which is higher than last year by $80.

TECHNICAL TRAINING.

The greater part of this section of the report is taken up with the report of the inspector of technical education and the report of the inspector of continuation classes. In regard to technical training, Mr. A. H. Leake, the inspector, says: "The introduction of art, nature study, and constructive work should do, and are doing, much to give a more practical trend to Public school education, but a curriculum on paper without efficient teachers is of little value. From observation and correspondence I am forced to the conclusion that a large number of our teachers are without the necessary knowledge to enable them to teach these subjects. A small departmental grant would encourage their introduction. This would only need to be continued until they were firmly established, and their value recognized. To give to the teachers the knowledge lacking, steps such as the following might be taken:—1. The issue of bulletins by the department. 2. Establishing centres of instruction. 3. Encouraging correspondence regarding difficulties. 4. The institution of small circulating libraries containing (say) twenty of the best books on these subjects, accompanied by a brief explanatory pamphlet.

"Up to the present, our educational system has concerned itself almost entirely with preparation for college life and the so-called learned professions, and those who have neither the inclination nor the opportunity to take up either have been neglected and not considered fit subjects for educational effort. Every interest in the province demands consideration and schools of the following classes are required:—1. Agricultural High Schools or classes. 2. Technical High Schools or classes. 3. Commercial High Schools or classes. 4. Academic High Schools."

A number of recommendations are also made in reference to continuation classes, and it is claimed, "to bridge the gap between the rural school and the Ontario Agricultural College."

2,000 MINERS OUT AT COBALT.

Thirty-three Mines Affected by Strike of Western Federation Union.

A despatch from Cobalt, Ont., says: As expected, over 2,000 miners, nearly all members of Union No. 146 of the Western Federation of Miners, walked out of their different mines on Monday morning on a general strike, thus signifying their intention of not submitting to the new scale of wages which went into effect on Monday. This number has been increasing all day, and many employees of different companies have left their jobs since the first lot reported, and have expressed their intention of joining the union. As a result of the strike nearly all of the mines adhering to the schedule have shut down. Among these which have not signed the agreement are the Connaught and Foster, which companies are said to be considering the union scale, and the mines are running. The Buffalo Mine is said to have completely shut down, and Manager Jones is said to have stated that he will not take back any of the employees who went out. All companies in whose mines a strike has been declared are determined to hold to their agreement, in which case the strike may continue for some time if the union does not accept the companies' schedule.

BURGLARIES GALORE.

Twenty-Four Took Place in One Night at Vancouver.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: Twenty-four business offices in the city were entered by burglars between Sunday night and Monday morning. The burglaries were committed in the following places:—1. The offices of a dentist, lawyers, contracting firms and insurance companies. The burglars were evidently experts. No powder was used, despite the magnitude of the operations. The burglars, who are still at large, did not net over $100. At daylight two men were observed by policemen in the neighborhood of the large Williams block. They broke into a run and escaped. The gang is believed to be from Seattle.

EATEN BY MOSQUITOES.

Body of Drowned Winnipeg Boy Found in a Swamp.

A despatch from Winnipeg Beach, Man., says: The body of Arthur Todde, the nine-year-old son of J. Todde, of Winnipeg, was found on Monday in a swamp badly eaten by mosquitoes. The boy had been at the beach, picnicking with friends and could not be found when the party was ready to return. His clothes were found on the beach and it was thought he was drowned, and the lake was dragged. When found, the body was clothed only in a bathing suit.

FIVE YEARS FOR SCHMITZ.

San Francisco's Mayor Goes to the Penitentiary.

A despatch from San Francisco says: Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz, convicted of extortion, was sentenced on Monday to five years in the penitentiary. When sentence was pronounced there was a remarkable outburst of applause from the hundreds of persons who crowded Judge Dunne's court-room. Schmitz must serve his term in the San Quentin Penitentiary. Sentence followed the recent conviction of Schmitz for extorting $1,175 from French restaurant keepers.

HIGH INFANT DEATH RATE.

Montreal's Mortality Statistics for Last Week.

A despatch from Montreal says: According to the mortality statistics completed at the City Hall for last week, the death rate among infants was appalling high. The number of children who died was 116. The total of deaths among all classes and ages was 172. This is a record for the city, and the death rate among children under five years of age was a trifle over 67 per cent. Births for the week numbered 177.

"SOO" TRAFFIC 17,788,319 TONS.

June Returns Show Nearly Three Million Increase.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie says: June traffic through the "Soo" ship canal broke all records and brings the season's total to date up to 17,788,319 tons. This is slightly under three millions greater than for the same period last year. The total for June was 8,865,442 tons, over a million tons increase over May. Heavy traffic was also in force, grain and coal. Of the total tonnage, 7,033,618 was eastbound and 1,831,816 westbound. It is expected that July and August will show still heavier traffic.

BUILDING NEW JAILS.

Money Granted by Government for New Ontario Judicially Spent.

A despatch from Toronto says: Dr. Bruce Smith, Jail Inspector, has just returned from a tour of inspection of the jails in New York and Ohio, and that the grant of $100,000 voted at the last session of the Legislature for the building of new jails and improvement of others in that district was being judiciously expended. New jails are being built at Gore Bay, Sudbury, Port Arthur and Port Frances, while improvements are being made to the "Soo" jail and the one at Kenora. The work is being done in a very judicious manner, and the jail inspectors who are working on the double tracking of the C. P. R.

A DISAPPOINTED LOVER.

Winnipeg Suicide Identified as a Wealthy Farmer.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The Central Park suicide has been identified as Israel Scott, a wealthy farmer of Eglin, Man., who was disappointed in a love affair about three months ago, and has since been spending his time in the city without employment.

TURNKEY KNOCKED SENSELESS.

Desperate Attempt to Escape from Chatham Jail.

A despatch from Chatham says: Arthur Smith, of Knox, Penn., and Edwin Baldwin, of Wainfield, Ohio, on Thursday made a desperate attempt to break jail by cutting through the turnkey, Christopher Somerville, nearly lost his life. Both men were arrested on Tuesday, in Tilbury, a few miles west of here, for forgery and the uttering of two forged cheques for small amounts on the Sovereign Bank of Albany. They were arraigned before Judge Bell here on Wednesday, when they pleaded guilty and were remanded for one week for sentence. Early Thursday morning, while the turnkey was making his rounds, he entered their cell. He had laid the heavy lock on the floor while he undid another, fastening. The prisoners seized the lock and with it struck the turnkey a terrible blow on the head, knocking him senseless. Governor Davidson, hearing the disturbance, rushed in, and unarmed, wrested the lock from the assailants, at the same time calling for assistance. When it arrived the men were easily transferred to safer quarters. The turnkey will recover.

MANY BY-LAWS CARRIED.

Progressive Port Arthur Undertaking Some Big Things.

A despatch from Port Arthur says: Thirteen by-laws were voted on Wednesday and adopted by a majority vote. These included the construction of two concrete and steel bridges, the purchase of street cars, the expenditure of $60,000 for improvements to the Current River, extension of the waterworks $253,000, for the erection of a police station, for double-tracking the street railway for seven miles, the establishment of an incinerating plant, for the erection of new car barns and the isolation hospital and for park improvements. About $600,000 was called for by the various by-laws. A plebiscite on development of Dog Lake Falls revealed an affirmative response, while the proposal to purchase land for a fair ground was rejected. The vote was small and little interest was taken.

STEAMER MOUNT ROYAL WRECKED.

Six Members of Crew Drowned, Including First Officer, Purser and Steward.

A despatch from Victoria, B. C., says: The Hudson's Bay Company's stern-wheeler Mount Royal, plying on the Skeena, was a complete loss by wreck on Saturday afternoon. Captain Johnson and all the passengers were saved. Six of the crew were drowned. The dead are—W. M. Lewis, first officer; James O'Keefe, purser; A. Willis, steward; B. Fryne, fireman; a Japanese carpenter and a Japanese deckhand. Indians with canoes did good service in the work of rescue.

Mengre details were received Saturday night of the loss of the Hudson's Bay steamer Mount Royal, operating on the Skeena River between Port Eslington and Hazelton. The vessel struck while negotiating the dangerous rapids in the worst part of the river at Kitchikan Canyon, and sank almost immediately.

EXPRESS TRAIN WRECKED.

The Fireman Killed and Engineer is Badly Scalded.

A despatch from Rainy River, Ont., says: A train wreck occurred on Friday night on the Canadian Northern, six miles east of here. The wrecked train was No. 2 Express, eastbound, and was in charge of Engineer W. Hamilton and Conductor McGeah. Six miles east of Rainy River the locomotive struck three cattle, which were lying on the track, derailing the engine, mail and baggage cars and the first and second-class coaches. The sleepers and dining car did not leave the rails. Engineer Hamilton was badly scalded, but his injuries are not expected to cause death. Fireman Vance was so badly injured that he afterwards died in the hospital.

FRENCH SOLDIERS MUTINOUS.

Men Drafted for Service in Africa and Corsica as Penalty.

A despatch from Paris says: Reports of mutinies among regiments encamped at Larzac have been common during the last week. They have always been met by official denials and the production of commanding officers' reports that all was well in the camp. That this was not altogether true is shown by an official statement on Wednesday to the effect that about a hundred men belonging to the 100th Regiment were being sent away to be distributed among other regiments. It is officially said that eleven of them have gone to Marseilles, whence they will be transferred to Corsican and African stations.

GRAIN IS GROWING FAST.

C. P. R. Report of Western Crops — Weather is Favorable.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The weekly crop report was handed out by the C. P. R. officials on Thursday morning, and indications all along the line are to the effect that the wheat and other grains are growing fast under favorable weather conditions. There has been plenty of rain in most districts, but several need more showers. The grain is up 16 to 18 inches in some places.

REVENUE FROM CHINAMEN.

Sum of $31,000 Collected in Texas From One Ship Load.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Arrivals of Chinese in Canada continue to increase. The Empress of Japan arrived at Vancouver a few days ago with 521 Chinese passengers. Of these 63 paid $500 each, or $31,000 in all, for permission to enter Canada. One hundred and eighty-five of the Chinese were individuals who had made money in Canada and had gone back to China to get it. They had one year under the law within which to return to the Dominion.

TRUSTED TELLER'S HAUL

He Put $96,317 in a Suit Case and Said Good-bye.

A despatch from New York says: Detectives throughout the United States are searching for Chester B. Runyan, paying teller of the Windsor Trust Company, who, the directors allege, is missing, with $96,317 in cash. George W. Young, a director of the trust company, confirms the reports of the directors, which the detectives say is one of the most remarkable ever reported. Runyan is accused of having placed $96,317 in currency in a suit case last Saturday, and after shaking hands with his banking associates, left the trust company. Since then he has not been seen. Runyan, it is said, did not even go to his apartment to bid good-bye to his wife, to whom he had been married for five years. He is said to have taken all the cash available in the bank last Saturday. The directors, it is stated, have made up all the loss of the defalcation. Runyan was a man of exemplary habits, so far as known, and his conduct was such as not to arouse any suspicion. When the auditors went over his accounts on May 1 they were found to be all right.

DEATH IN A FOREST.

Three Men Drowned in Quebec—Sought Safety in Lake.

A despatch from Quebec says: A fierce forest fire is raging near Reed Station, sixty miles from here, and has caused the death of three men. They were trying to escape from the fire and rushed into the lake and were drowned. Only one of the victims has been identified. He is an Englishman named W. T. Macdonald.

SUICIDE IN ASYLUM.

Elderly Woman Drinks Poison in Institution at London.

A despatch from London says: Mrs. Wootton, an inmate of the Asylum for Insane, committed suicide on Thursday night by drinking carbolic acid, which she had obtained in some unknown manner. Mrs. Wootton, who was an elderly woman, was confined on account of a suicidal mania. Her relatives live in this city.

GUNBOAT ON GREAT LAKES.

Great Britain Has Given Permission to the United States.

A despatch from Washington says: The State Department has received the assurance of the British Government that there will be no objection to the request of this Government in sending the gunboat Don Juan de Austria to the Great Lakes, where she will be used for cruising purposes by the naval militia.

SLEEPWALKER'S DEATH.

Climbed to Window of Industrial School and Jumped.

A despatch from Montreal says: Antoine Robert, the 15-year-old son of Chief of Police Robert, of Lachine, while walking in his sleep on Saturday night, climbed to a window of the Monk's Industrial School at Oka and jumped out of the window to the ground, a distance of 45 feet. While walking in the garden in the morning one of the monks found the lad's dead body clad in a night shirt lying close to the school wall. His skull was fractured and death must have been instantaneous.

PLANTING TREES ON PRAIRIES.

Active Campaign of Education Going on in the Northwest.

A despatch from Ottawa says: An active campaign is going on in the Northwest in favor of tree propagation and tree preservation. The officials have been busy getting the established farmers and the new settlers on prairie lands to plant trees.

GIANT LOCOMOTIVES.

The C. P. R. Has Placed Order for Fifty Big Ones.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The C. P. R. have decided to construct fifty giant locomotives, exceeding in size any engine ever built in Canada heretofore, for the use on the mountain division. They will have a draw bar pull of 40,000 pounds, whereas the greatest tractive effort of the present locomotives is 31,000 pounds, which will move a trainload of nine hundred tons.

The French battleship Hoche caught fire at Toulon on Saturday, and was sunk in her slip to prevent an explosion.

DISAFFECTION IN INDIA

Has Spread Among Landholders, Peasants and Coolies

A despatch from London says: Indian despatches represent the trouble in India as in nowise over, but as rather increasing. A correspondent, who has returned to Calcutta from three years in the most afflicted districts in Bengal, telegraphs that the seriousness of the situation is hardly realized by the Europeans in India or at home. A few years ago the discontent was confined to a few plebeians and clerks, but now it has spread among the landholders and the Bengali aristocracy, as well as among the peasants and coolies.

In the Burial district committees of safety, after those called into existence during the French revolution, have been formed. These committees hold judicial enquiries, summon witnesses and punish offenders. The Government has borrowed companies of Gurkhas from Assam and military police from other Provinces. These are posted in small batches about the country, but are unable to prevent the persecution of loyalists.

The worst feature of the situation is the growing number of assaults on Europeans. After detailing some of these the correspondent adds that Europeans are about armed with revolvers or the old-fashioned cut-throat razors are still in use. Many persons were drowned in Chilli by a flood caused by the bursting of a dam formed by volcanic action.

EARNINGS UP IN BILLIONS.

Railroads Establish New Record for Fiscal Year Just Closed.

A despatch from New York says: According to complications made by eastern financial publications, the reports of the earnings of the railroads of the United States, when they are eventually announced, will establish new records of great gains. The estimate of the gross earnings is $2,578,413,273, an increase of $258,653,243, or 11.5 per cent., over the previous year, as still further compared with an increase of $237,277,624, or 11.4 per cent., in 1906 over 1905. The net earnings, it is estimated, will amount to $834,150,303, an increase of $53,871,626, or 6.84 per cent., over the net earnings of the previous year, as compared with an increase of $56,329,141, or 13.9 per cent., in 1906 over 1905. The wages paid to railroad employees in the same fiscal year will amount to more than $1,025,000,000.

MISSING WITH MILLION.

German Bank Manager Brings Ruin Upon Thousands.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: It is developed that last week's bank failure at Marienburg, due to the defalcation of the manager of the concern, was more serious than at first reported. The losses are now said to total about $1,000,000. Thousands of small depositors lost their savings and many tradersmen lost their savings and many on the Berlin Bourse during Thursday afternoon that a private bank at Danzig had been affected by the Marienburg failure, causing a drop of two points in its shares. The feeling of uneasiness caused by the Marienburg failure and the report from Danzig was increased by the announcement of the arrest at Anklam, Pomerania, of Herr Knorr, a banker, on the charge of embezzling $100,000.

VICTIM OF FLAM-FLAMMER.

Old Trick Was Worked at St. Catharines Post-office.

A despatch from St. Catharines says: An unknown man on Friday appeared at the stamp counter in the post-office and asked Miss Ethel Haynes, stamp vendor, for change for a $20 bill. Miss Haynes said she had a ten and two fives, the other hand being in his pocket, asked her to put them in an envelope and seal it. This done, the stranger counted out $19.75, handed Miss Haynes back what she thought was the same envelope, while he went out to get the other quarter. On his not returning the envelope was found to contain nothing but two sheets of blank paper.

DARE HE?

CHAPTER XXXV.—(Continued.)

As he speaks, he begins to retreat towards the door, but so slowly as to give her plenty of time to recall him that she so wished. But she does not. She only stands looking uncertainly and distressed. She cannot find such a melancholy impression of her little face away for the whole night with him—it would give him the blues too seriously after this dismal day—he takes a step or two forward again.

"Are not you rather lonely?" he asks, with an expressive look round.

She gives a small, uncomplaining smile.

"Oh no; I do very well. I am generally alone at this time of day; they like to leave their evenings to themselves—least, father likes to have mamma to himself; I am sure it is quite natural. There is not the slightest trace of any sense of being aggrieved in either words or tone."

Again that picture of the adored Elizabeth of former days, of whose presence her father was never weary, whose jokes were always considered so unequalled, and whose presence in favor was so allowed that her intercession and influence were always employed by the others as certain in their efficacy, rises before Jim's eyes.

"They are like lovers still," continues Elizabeth softly; "it is very pretty when people are lovers still after nearly thirty years."

"And you—do you write letters?"

"No, I do not; I have not anyone to write to."

A pang of shame at his unworthy suspicion, coupled with a sense of astonishment at her simple confession of friendship, prevent his speaking; and it is she who goes on an Italian exercise; I began to learn Italian in Florence;—with the inevitable low sigh that always accompanies her mention of that name—

"And to-day, for something to do, I took it up again. It has been a long day, has not it? Oh, what a long day!"

"Long!" repeats Jim emphatically. "I might choose to call this day; but many a century has been shorter."

"Someone was playing battledore and shuttlecock in the hall. I wonder to what number they kept it up? how many years it is since I have played battledore and shuttlecock!"

There is a suppressed envy in her tone, which tells how far from disapproving the innocent pastime to which she alludes would be to her even now. She has set down again on the straight-backed chair from whose elevation she had commanded her Italian studies; a large greyish cloak, lined and heavily collared, and bordered with fur, hangs, unfasted at the throat, about her. Out of the dark, however, her delicate neck and head rise, like a pale primrose from out of piled dead oak-leaves in a yet wintry wood. Through the door, which he has left open behind him, come bursts of maniac mirth from the votaries of Dumb Crambo.

"What a noise they are making!" she should think they are.

"I wonder what they are doing?"

"I can inform you on that point; they are playing Dumb Crambo."

She repeats the words after him with a lingering intonation, in which there again is, or, at least, he thinks that she detects it, a tinge of envy.

"Would you like to join them?"

"No—slowly—not quite that; but it sounds ridiculous—but I should like to play Dumb Crambo again. We used—in an affectionate, lingering tone—to play it when we were children."

It is the first time that she has ever voluntarily alluded to the Mont, and he calls to mind her earnest prohibition, addressed to him at Florence against any mention of it.

"I know you did; once or twice I played with you."

"You?"

"She starts. It is evident that the unimportant fact of his having taken part in their games has quite escaped her; but, a moment later, her soft and courteous nature evidently making her fear that he will link upon her obliviousness as unkind—

"Oh, yes, to be sure." Then again lapsing into reminiscence, "what odd words we used to choose sometimes—words that nobody could guess! I wonder what words they have chosen?"

He thinks of saying jocosely, "shall I go and ask them?" but refrains, because he fears it would put it into her head to send him away.

A sort of piercing squeal makes itself heard from the salon.

"Do you think that can be meant for a pig?" asks Elizabeth, her fine ears prick up in unfeigned interest. "Oh!"—with a return of uneasiness—"I wish that they would not make so much noise; father does so dislike noise. They might as well have put it off till to-morrow."

"Why would to-morrow's noise be more endurable than to-day's?"

"It would not have mattered to-morrow; father will not be here; he is going to Hammam Rihra."

Burgoyne's jaw drops. Is this the alternative course decided upon by Mrs. Le Marchant? Having failed to dislodge him from Algiers, is she going to remove herself and her daughter out of his reach?

"Do you mean—are you all going to Hammam Rihra to-morrow?—all going away?"

It is some effect of light from the rose-shaded lamp that makes it seem to him as if a tiny smile, and yet a smaller blush, swept over Elizabeth's face at the suggestion of his tone—an agnostness much more marked than he had intended it should be.

"Not to-morrow; not all of us. Father and mamma are going there for a couple of nights to see what the place is like—one hears such contradictory accounts; and if they are pleased with it."

"Yes?"

"If they are pleased with it we shall all probably move on there in a day or two."

He would like to be sure that this sentence ends with still, but a prodigious storm of hand-clapping from the extensive theatre prevents his hearing whether it has that regretful finish.

"And they are going to leave you behind?"

"Why not? there would not be much use in taking me; and, as I tell you, they love being tele-a-tele."

"And you love being alone?"

The moment that the question is out of his mouth, he realizes its full unkindness. He is perfectly aware that she does not like being alone; that she is naturally a most social little being; and even now, these frightful minutes of unsatisfactory broken talk with himself has made her look less chilled, less woe-begone, less white. Her answer, if it can be looked upon as one, must be taken by him as a rebuke. It is only that she says nervously:

"One certainly does hear dreadfully plainly here with the door open."

Her tone is of the gentlest, her look no angrier than a dove's, and yet he would be obtuse than he is if he did not at once comprehend that her remark implies a wish that he should presently shut that door behind him on the outside. He complies. With that newly-gained knowledge as to to-morrow's Hammam Rihra, he can afford to comply.

The next morning's light reveals that the weather, pleased with having so indisputably proved its power of being odious, has recovered its good humor.

Beyond the tree-tops a radiant sea is seen laughing far below; and the wet tiles on the little terrace shine like jewels. A sea even more wonderful than radiant; no servile copy of the sky and clouds to-day, but with astonishing colors of its own—a faint yet glorious green for a part of its watery breadth; then what our poverty compels us to call blue; and then a great tabcloth of inky purple, which looks so solid that the tiny white boats that are crossing it seem to be sailing on dry land. From among the glossy green of the wooded hill, mosque and campaigne stand out, dazzling in their recovered lustre; and cool enchanting villa in especially backed with a broken line of dusky stone-pines, stands, snow-arcaded, enthroned high up among the verdure.

Jim is very anxious to be out of the way at the hour of the Le Marchants' departure. He has a panic fear of being waylaid by the mother and herding some earnest supplication addressed to him to abstain, during her absence, from any converse with Elizabeth. He is not quite clear at what time they will set off, so, to insure himself against mistakes, he resolves to spend the morning and lunch at the Villa Watson. Arrived there, he is shown by an Arab manservant into the court, and finding it empty, sinks down into one of the chairs, and lets his eyes wander round to the fountain, lulling dripping into its basin, to the tiles, the white-arched doorways, carved in low relief, and themselves so low that it must be a humble-statured person who enters them without stooping.

"What a home for love in idleness! Who can picture any such house? But of the world done in such a house? a harder labor ever entered upon than listening to some lady singing 'with ravishing division' to her lute?"

The lady who presently joins Jim appears, by her ruffled air, to have been engaged upon no such soothing occupation as lute and recumbent lover.

"You will not mind staying here?" asks Cecilia; "Dr. Crump is in the dining-room with Sybilla; I am sure that you do not want to see Dr. Crump?"

"I cannot express how little I wish it."

"I cannot think what has happened to Sybilla—winking up her forehead in annoyed furrows—but she is so dreadfully sprightly when he is there; she never was sprightly with Dr. Crump, and he is such an impossible man—the sort of man who, when first comes in, always says, 'Well, how are you this morning?' Do you not think that it stamps a man to say 'How are you?'"

"I think it does."

"He talks such nonsense to her!"—with irritation—"he tells her that he, too, is a bundle of nerves! If you could only see him! And one day he told her that when first he came here he had seen the Angel of Death waving his fans above her head! and she swallows it all!"

"I am not at all surprised."

"It makes me sick!" cries she energetically; "let us go into the garden."

So into the garden they go: both the new one, whose luxuriant growth of verdure is the outcome of but eight or nine years; and the old one, along whose straight walks the feet of the Moorish ladies used to patter under the orange trees. Beneath them now there are no white bundles of muslin; only on the ground the oranges lie thick, no one in this plot of ground thinking it worth while to pick them up. Jim and his companion pace rather silently to a pretty Moorish summer-house, dug, a few years ago, by the English architect out of the firmhouse, into which it had been built. It is dainty and cool, with a little dome and lovely green and blue tiles; and an odd small spring, which is taught to wander by tiny snaky channels into a little basin. They go into the summer-house and sit down.

"Yes, it is pretty," says the girl absently; but her mind is evidently preoccupied by some other subject than the beauty of the giant bignonia which is expanding the multitude of its orange-red clusters all over a low wall, making it into one burning hedge, and has called forth an exclamation of delight from Burgoyne. What that subject is immediately appears.

"Do you know who is in Algiers—whom I saw driving through the Place Bressant on Sunday afternoon?"

"Who?"

"The Le Marchants. Ah, you are not surprised?"—rather suspiciously. You knew already."

Jim hesitates a second; then reflecting that whether or not he acknowledges the fact now, Cecilia is certain to learn in a day or two at latest, he answers with a slight laugh:

"It would be odd if I did not, seeing that they are staying at my hotel."

"You knew that when you went there?"—very quickly.

"Of course not!"—with a movement of impatience.

A pause.

"I suppose," says Cecilia, rather cautiously, as if aware that she is treading on dangerous ground, "that you have not found out why they stampeded from Florence in that extraordinary way?"

Oh, no, of course not!—as this suggestion is received with a still more impatiently than her former one. "It is not a thing upon which you could question them; and, after all, it was their own affair; it was no business of ours, was it?"

"Not the slightest."

"I always used to like them," continues Cecilia pensively; "at least"—becoming aware of an involuntary movement of surprise at this statement on the part of her neighbor—"at least, they never gave me the chance of liking them; but I always admired them. I wonder are they more accessible than they were in Florence this year; everybody says that there never was a year when there were so few nice English!"

The tentative towards sociability implied in this last speech is received by Jim in a discouraging silence. He has not the slightest desire to promote any overture on the part of Cecilia towards intimacy with Elizabeth. He knows that they would be unsuccessful; and, moreover, he is conscious that he would be annoyed if they were not.

"I can fancy that this would be a very pleasant place if one had someone to go about with," continues she; "but father grows less and less inclined to move. Poor dear! he is not so young as he was, and I am not quite old enough yet, I suppose, to go about alone."

She makes a rather wistful pause—a pause which he feels that she intends him to fill by an offer of himself as escort. But none such comes. Realizing this, she goes on with a sigh:

"There are not many advantages in being old; but, at least, one is freer, and in a youth spent as mine is, there is reason to be thankful for it."

The tone in which she makes this lugubrious reflection is so extremely doleful that Jim cannot refrain from a laugh.

"Cheer up, old girl! there is a good time coming! It is a long time that has no turning."

But he contents himself with these vague forms of consolation. He has no engagements of his own. Why, then, is he conscious of so strong a reluctance towards trying himself by any promise to the broadly-hinting lady beside himself? There is another pause, during which Cecilia looks down on the floor with a baffled air, and traces the outlines of the tiles with the point of her red sunshade.

"There is a band plays twice a week in the Place de Gouvernement—plays admirably. Now, I suppose that there would be nothing odd; that no one could say anything; that it would not be the least improper, considering our connection and everything; if you were to take me to hear it some day?"

"I never have the slightest idea of what is improper and what is not," replies he; "but there is more of alarm than of encouragement in this."

"No more have I!"—laughing rather awkwardly—"but in this case I am pretty sure. Tuesdays and Fridays are the days on which the band plays."

"Oh!"

"To-day is Tuesday, is it not?"

"Yes."

"I thought that perhaps, if you had nothing better to do, you might take me to-day."

The direct proposal which he has in vain tried to avert has come. If he accepts it, of what profit to him will the absence of the Le Marchant parents be? He does not formulate this fact to himself, not having, indeed, owned to his own heart that he has any set design upon Elizabeth's company for the afternoon.

"I am afraid—" he begins slowly.

"You are vamping up an excuse," cries Cecilia, laughing.

"Your excuse, I cannot have made any engagements here yet. You do not know anybody, do you, except the Le Marchants?"

"And they have gone to Hammam Rihra," replies he precipitately.

He is ashamed the moment that the words are out of his mouth, for he knows that they convey a falsehood.

"At least—"

But she interrupts him before he can utter his mendacious clause.

"To-morrow, then?"

Again he hesitates. The same objection applies with even greater force to the morrow.

"But the band does not play to-morrow."

"Oh! what does that matter?" subjoins she impatiently. "I had just as soon go somewhere else—the Arab town, the Kabyle village, anywhere."

He is driven into a corner, and realizes that there is no long that there is a distinct element of offence in the fact and large sigh with which the girl resumes.

"Well, times are changed! I always used to make one of those happy excursions to Florence and so on; and now—thanks to her, I suppose—I never felt a bad thing."

She rises as she speaks, and takes a couple of huffy steps toward the house; after the civil ceremony the bride and groom were driven back to the prison with the gendarmes, and the religious ceremony was performed in the prison chapel, after which the convict returned to his cell.

The residents of Ypres are circulating a petition, which will be presented to the authorities, asking that the convict be pardoned.

blasted sight you choose to name, only tell me by which of them you would like to begin to ride round."

As he leaves the house and the appeared fair one, after luncheon, an hour and a half later, he tells himself that he has got off cheaply in having vaguely sacrificed the whole of his Algerian future, but having preserved to-day and to-morrow.

SALESWOMEN OF PARIS

WORK HARD AND HAVE LONG HOURS, BUT IT PAYS WELL.

Educated Girls Preferred—Politics and Dry Goods—Prospects of Promotion.

The dry goods stores of Paris employ about 6,000 saleswomen. They are a highly businesslike lot of women. They work hard and have long hours, but their pay is fair; they have prospects of advancement and they are taken care of in illness and old age.

The change from the old methods of business to the new is hardly greater than the change in the girls who wait on the customers. The old time fille de boutique wearing a cap and apron was half-shop girl and half servant, but altogether gay and irresponsible.

The modern saleswoman is, at least on duty, a prim and self-possessed person in an impeccable black silk gown of up-to-date cut, with her hair carefully dressed, her hands manicured and her language as polished as that of a school teacher.

Nearly all of them now hold school diplomas of one grade or another. Some of them have certificates of graduation from commercial high schools. The stores prefer these testimonials to experience.

The situations are in great demand. It is said that establishments employing from 500 to 900 saleswomen have from 7,000 to 8,000 applicants annually. Not only the aptitude but the family and personal record of each candidate is considered, and after the sifting process is completed landing a place is very often a matter of pull.

A TRYING BLUNDER.

All the shopgirls begin as debilitate or charge girls. The beginner receives her board or else a commutation of $120 a year in place of it. She undertakes a serious responsibility all the same. If she makes a mistake to the detriment of the store she is liable for the amount.

The position is a trying one. It is the severe test by which they try out beginners. One debilitate in the confusion of a Christmas mob reported a vase marked at 195 francs as costing 19 francs 50 centimes, a difference amounting to $35.

When the mistake was discovered, the girl was requested to make good the difference at once. Her mother was a poor widow, and they had no resources save a few articles of jewelry, which they took at once to the Monte de Piete, but on which they could raise only $16.

The girls in the store hearing of the misfortune at once started a collection to make up the difference, but just then the purchaser turned up at the store, having just realized the blunder herself, and made full payment. The debilitate was not discharged, but her promotion to the rank of demoiselle de magazin was postponed six months.

LIFE IS GAY.

When the debilitate is promoted to be demoiselle de magazin, she is in a sense settled for life. Her whole career is likely to be spent in the department to which she is then assigned. But this does not mean that her life is narrowed any more than that of any other woman.

She works long hours—8 a.m. to 7 p.m.,—with an hour about noon for dinner,—but her life is gay, and much is done to make it pleasant. The girls as they troop to and from work through the streets of Paris are a spectacle of high spirits and discretion. They protect one another, and woe to the masquer who attracts the attention of a group.

WHEN SHE IS PROMOTED.

Besides her commission the demoiselle de magazin has the prospect of promotion to encourage her. As plain saleswomen her compensation all told may vary from $400 in the lower grades to $700 in the best lines. But promotion to the rank of assistant forewoman means from $800 to $1,200 a year, according to the department.

In France $1,200 a year is the pay of the sub-director of a department. And the saleswoman's career may not end there. About 20 per cent. of all saleswomen become assistants—from these a small number reach the rank of forewoman—practically heads of departments, although they are always associated with male heads. Their pay ranges from $2,500 to $5,000 a year, with an interest in the profits of the department.

MARRIAGE OF CONVICT.

Fell in Love with Gaolet's Daughter, and the Two Were Married.

A strange romance at Ypres, Belgium, culminated in the marriage of a convict, who is undergoing life imprisonment in the local prison, to the daughter of a gaolet.

The gaolet's daughter was in the habit of taking food to the convict, and an attachment was formed which resulted in marriage. The girl admitted her love for the prisoner, and the gaolet at last consented.

The convict was taken to the town hall in a covered wagon, escorted by four gendarmes who acted as witnesses. After the civil ceremony the bride and groom were driven back to the prison with the gendarmes, and the religious ceremony was performed in the prison chapel, after which the convict returned to his cell.

The residents of Ypres are circulating a petition, which will be presented to the authorities, asking that the convict be pardoned.

ON THE FARM.

CAN WE AFFORD TO FEED GRAIN TO OUR COWS?

This question is ever present with the dairy farmer. It will not down. Some answer it confidently by saying "Yes!" Some shake their heads doubtfully and say "I hardly know. Others declare, "At present prices of such feed it doesn't pay." If we take a census of these farmers, we will land on about this ground:

That those dairy farmers who feed a grain ration, are, as a rule, the most prosperous. They will tell you that it pays, providing you will take care to do two things: (1) Have good cows. Either breed them or buy them; don't keep a poor cow a minute longer than you are obliged to, for she is a constant tuitler a year to barely pay for her keeping. From this conclusion there seems to be no escape. If you want more, you must have a better cow.

(2) Take care that the cow is stabled and milked in a way most favorable to milk production. If by your fault, you hinder her in her best work, you will surely charge you for it and you must pay the bill.

These are the two general conclusions and conditions that surround the question. From these two we may go on and deduce a score or more of other important conclusions. For instance: (1) The problem is so difficult that only men of active, well informed minds can make a good success of it. (2) That we must be dairymen, using dairy bred cows, and a good supply of dairy intelligence in feeding as well as in providing the right conditions to surround the cow. (3) That if we produce our cows by breeding, we must look into the laws and principles of dairy breeding. We must not come at it in loose, haphazard ways for we are doing work for a long time. We must understand that breeding of profitable dairy cattle is based on just as distinctive, well settled principles as is the breeding of trotting horses, beef cattle, mutton sheep, or game fowls. (4) Because of loose, haphazard ideas of dairy breeding among farmers, we have the abundance of poor cows and the scarcity of good cows, that is seen on every hand.

(5) That breed is a very important thing if it really means what it should; if the development of dairy qualities, due to type, dairy individuality has been made the leading purpose. A cow or bull bred is much more apt to give results, than any other. Hence, when we choose from a certain breed, it is well to be assured of the skill and wise judgment of the breeder. There are wise men and foolish men among breeders. As he is, so are his cattle in a very large degree.

(6) If we buy our cows, we must be a good judge of a cow, else we will be throwing away our money, feed and care. To be a good judge of the dairy quality of a cow, one must have a natural love of the animal, well supplemented by a study of the external signs of dairy capacity. (7) If we do well with our cows, we must have also a good judgment of true dairy conditions. Now, all these things call for study, thought, information. A successful dairy farmer must give himself a dairy education, the same as a good lawyer must have a good legal education. It is nonsense to suppose that so deep a subject, one that means so much, can be solved successfully without a well informed mind. And all this talk has come logically from the single question: Shall we feed grain to our cows? Verily, the cow is a fruitful subject.

BETTER POULTRY ON THE FARM.

Now that poultry is in such demand and at double the former prices for eggs and chicks, poultry on the farm is becoming a greater interest than ever before. It is just as easy to grow good chickens as scrubs, and they eat no more and bring much more money. A lady who gives much attention to growing chickens on the farm sends the following letter on the subject. She says:

"I would like to see more and better poultry on our farms, and I believe there is no way in which we can more readily and surely increase the returns from our farm. The point at which we should stop increasing the size of our flocks is that at which there is nothing more for a grower to clean from the flocks in the way of bugs and lost grain. The tender grass and the young clover that are to be found all over the farm in late summer and fall make good feed for fowls and we should utilize them as much as possible by having a large number of fowls to use it.

We need more poultry on the farms, as is evidenced by the increasing price for poultry products. This means that the demand is ahead of the supply. When the prices get high there is a tendency for the people to buy other food in the place of poultry products; therefore we are the losers. There is another reason why we should increase the amount of poultry on our farms and that is that poultry meat is not as sold as off meat, and therefore, in selling it we get more for the same food value parted with than from a like weight of beef or pork."

The better the poultry the more we will get for the food consumed, which is, of course, of great moment. We have in most of our flocks hens that eat and eat and never lay an egg. Some of them have passed beyond the age of laying and the owners have lost track of them in the flock. We can get better flocks by weeding out these unprofitable layers."

WHITEWASH THE QUARTERS.

This is the season of the year when the hog quarters should all be put into the best kind of shape by cleaning them out thoroughly, whitewashing them inside and out, and wherever the hogs touch them. Air slaked lime sprinkled around the floor of the pens, especially in the corners and sides, is an excellent method of treating the floor. Troughs should be whitewashed inside and out and air-slaked lime scattered freely around where the pigs are in the habit of eating. If there is some lime in the troughs it doesn't hurt, it is an advantage.

By exercising care, sickness may be prevented. Cleanliness is one of the essentials. It is a great preventive, and the lime wash is an excellent disinfectant. We cannot endorse this too strongly. Give the hogs some charcoal. It is a regulator and an aid to good digestion. Have clean, sweet sleeping quarters. Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well.

MANY STRANGE BIRDS.

SOME BUILD THEMSELVES REGULAR PLAYGROUNDS.

Australian Species Make Themselves Bowers Decorated with Shells and Parrot Feathers.

Among birds, as among other adult animals, says the London Globe, life in general is too much of a struggle for a sufficiency of food to admit of play in the ordinary sense of the word. The family of bower birds, at any rate, are unique in making for themselves special playing places in the shape of bowers, or otherwise. These birds are characteristic of the Australian region, being found in the tropical and subtropical parts of Australia. The first example of a bower built by one of these remarkable birds was brought to this country by John Gould as a result of his expedition to Australia in 1838-40. And it is a striking tribute to the skill and industry of these famous builders that out of the eleven species of bower birds now known he was able to describe ten.

All members of the family, with the exception of the cat bird of Queensland, make themselves some sort of playground. Some interesting notes on some of these bowers are given in the current number of the Field. The recent bird, the most numerous of the family, makes a little avenue of twigs stuck into the ground, and

NEARLY MEETING ABOVE.

This avenue is rather less than a foot long and eight or nine inches high, founded on a platform of twigs, leaves and grass. At the entrance is a collection of shells, bits of bone, stones of fruits, gaily colored feathers and leaves. Having discovered a bower, the observer must hide himself, and wait perhaps for hours, if he wishes to see the birds at play. A party of them appears of glossiest black and blazes yellow plumage. One of them enters the bower, picks up a shell or leaf, performs a variety of antics with it and throws it away. The others meanwhile are performing outside. When the first performer comes out the others enter in turn and do likewise. Darwin and other naturalists have considered that this is the bower bird's courtship.

In the bower of the satin bower bird are found numerous feathers of species of parrots. These are always blue or yellow, and the bird is said never to use red ones. The golden bower bird of Queensland first piles up a platform of sticks around two neighboring trees. It then builds its bower between them. Besides the sticks it covers it makes three or four smaller ones.

PEAKED LIKE INDIAN WIGWAMS.

round it. These latter are made by drawing together the tops of the grass and ferns and fastening them. In playing the birds run in and out of these bowers.

The tooth-billed bower bird, on the other hand, merely flattens out about a square yard of ground and bares it of vegetation. On this it lays from seven to nine leaves of a particular species of tree. It will play with these leaves by the fowls tossing them over its back, and to add to it. A curious point is that it brings a fresh supply of leaves every morning to its playground and never uses the old ones.

Many of the bower birds are good mimics, but this species is said to excel them all. It can imitate any bird, and does it so well as to deceive the birds themselves. It has been called the master mocking bird of Australia. One species of bower bird, it may be noted, has developed an acquired taste, for it loves to collect in its playground the bleached bones of sheep. About a cartload of these was found in one bower. From the fact that eight males and twelve females were seen at one bower it would appear that these remarkable structures are the joint work of several birds.

Physicians at Alton who have watched his case give credit to the eggs and milk for his restoration to health.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had. For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and salivary complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. ## FALLING OFF A BICYCLE.

Mark Twain's Story of the Way He Established a Record.

It seems a good while ago. I must have been rather young for my age then, for I was trying to time an old fashioned bicycle nine feet high. It is at stages of life that there have really been people willing to trust themselves upon a dizzy and unstable altitude like that, and that I was one of them. Twichell and I took lessons every day. He succeeded and became master of the art of riding that wild vehicle, but I had no gift in that direction and was never able to stay on mine long enough to get any satisfactory view of the planet. Every time I tried to steal a look at a pretty girl or any other kind of scenery that single moment of inattention gave the bicycle the chance it had been waiting for, and I went over the front of it and struck the ground on my head or back before I had time to realize that something was happening. I didn't always go over the front way. I had other ways and practiced them all. But no matter which way was chosen for me there was always one monotonous result—the bicycle skinned my leg and leaped up into the air and came down on top of me. Sometimes its wires were so sprung by this violent performance that it had the collapsed look of an umbrella that had had a misunderstanding with a cyclone. After each day's practice I arrived at home with my skin hanging in ribbons from my knees down. I plastered the ribbons on where they belonged and bound them there with handkerchiefs steeped in lotions and was ready for more adventures next day. It was always a surprise to me that I had so much skin and that it held out so well. There was always plenty, and I soon came to understand that the supply was going to remain sufficient for all my needs. It turned out that I had nine skins, in layers, one on top of the other like the leaves of a book, and some of the doctors said it was quite remarkable.

I was full of enthusiasm over this insane amusement. My teacher was a young German from the bicycle factory, a gentle, kindly, patient creature with a pathetically grave face. He never smiled; he never made a remark; he always gathered me tenderly up when I plunged off and helped me on again without a word. When he had been teaching me twice a day for three weeks I introduced a new gymnastic—one that he had never seen before—and so at last a compliment was wrung from him, a thing which I had been risking my life for days to achieve. He gathered me up and said mournfully, "Mr. Clemens, you can fall off a bicycle in more different ways than any person I ever saw before."

—From Mark Twain's Autobiography in the North American Review.

A BUNCH OF ROSES.

At a regatta on Lake Lucerne the whole surface of the lake was strewn with roses.

The rose has through all time been the symbol of the purity and charm of girlhood.

Spartan soldiers after the battle of Cirrha refused offerings of wine unless it was perfumed with roses.

The rose seems to have long been the symbol of silence. It has been suggested that the utter inability to set forth the charms of the rose has admonished to silence.

Sweet as the fragrance of a garden is the Persian fable of the lump of clay which gave to the air a perfume that floated over the garden walls of fair Iran. "I have been dwelling with roses," said the clay.

In Bulgaria and Roumania, which are great centers for the manufacture of attar of roses, damask roses are exclusively used. These are gathered at dawn, just as the buds begin to unfold, and the essence is distilled from them before the sun sets.—Circle.

Lost His "Mr."

For a man of mature years to have the distinction of Mr. removed from his name would no doubt be a severe punishment. Yet this is what the Parisians inflicted on Josias Plaistow, and all because he stole four baskets of corn from the Indians. And then after poor Josias was Mister no longer the hard hearted founders of Massachusetts were not satisfied, but fined him $5 and made him return eight baskets of corn to the offending red men in place of the four he had taken.

Where Cain Killed Abel.

While cycling round Kettering I was startled to see what appeared to me to be two men fighting in a field. On reaching the field I dismounted and climbed over the fence to see what it was and discovered it was a stone statue representing Cain slaying Abel. It is unique. Cain has one knee pressing Abel to the ground and one arm uplifted ready to strike. The statue must be hundreds of years old, and is supposed to be on the exact spot where the murder was committed.—London Tit-Bits.

THE POET WHITTIER.

How He Met His Only Love and How They Parted Apart.

John Greenleaf Whittier was one of the sweetest poets that this country or any other has ever produced, and this in spite of the fact that he was doomed to live and die a bachelor.

In the spring of 1828, when the poet was about twenty years old, he did his first and last courting.

In the quaint old town of Marblehead, in the home of a well-to-do shipmaster, dwelt Evelina Bray, the shipmaster's daughter. Evelina was "sweet sixteen," as pretty as a peach and as pure as the wood violets with which she loved to decorate her hair, and with the winsome, modest maiden Whittier fell desperately in love.

During the aforementioned springtime as the flowers were creeping up from under the snow and the landscape was taking on its first delicate touches of the summer to come young Whittier went down to Marblehead found Evelina and told her of the sentiment that he could no longer conceal. To his joy he learned that the sentiment was reciprocated.

But the "course of true love did not yet run smooth," and it was already decreed that Whittier's was to be a "lost love."

The shipmaster of Marblehead was a worldly man, and one of his chief delights when on shore was to hear his daughter play on the piano and sing, while Whittier's parents as well as Whittier himself were of the strictest sect of the Quakers, in whose eyes a piano was an emblem of sin and music the sure and certain mark of wickedness.

Between these opposite, antagonistic and uncompromising views of things there was no concord possible. Whittier knew it, Evelina knew it, and like the philosophers that they were, they concluded to say no more to each other upon the tender subject—and they never did.

Five years later, in 1833, the couple met again, but no word was spoken of the affection that each knew was in the other's heart. It was the meeting of friends, that was all.

It was not until 1855, at a class reunion at the Haverhill academy, that the poet and his sweetheart again stood face to face. Since he had last held her fifty-two years had rolled away. The two were now old. The rose had faded from Evelina's cheek, and into her lover's face wrinkles had stolen, and upon his head old Time had left his time.

But the heart never grows old; love is immortal—immortality young and fresh—and, parting from his old love forever, the poet went home to write the touching lines—

Look forth once more through space and time
And let thy sweet shade fall
In tenderest grace of soul and form
On memory's frescoed wall—
A shadow and yet all.

—Rev. T. S. Gregory in New York American.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

So many people consider a wish an ambition.

One way to make something out of nothing is to start a fight about it.

To every man comes a time when he wishes he was as smart as he used to believe he was.

As a rule, it is easier to help a man and make him a friend than it is to injure him and make him an enemy.

Every young man could wear a hero medal if the commission would take his best girl's estimate of his strength and courage.

If you don't laugh at a man's joke, he says you have no sense of humor. It never occurs to him that he lacks the sense of humor.

The loafer will always tell you there "isn't much opportunity for a man in this town." Still there are twenty-four hours in a day here, as elsewhere.

Pretty Feet Always Painful.

Pretty feet are always painful feet. Shoes rarely, if ever, fit them; hence they carry their possessors haltingly, and too often they must direct themselves toward the chiropodist's. The high arched instep, the pretty foot's essential quality, is yet in a way a deformity, for it causes an abnormal tightness of the tendon governing the toes, and the toes in consequence all turn under a little, as though trying to grasp something. Turning under, the joints stand out prominently, just as the knuckles stand out when the fingers are closed. The leather of the shoe rubs and irritates these prominent joints, and the pretty foot's pretty owner pays the penalty in many a smart, in many a jumping pain.

No Stage Murders in Turkey.

On one point the Turkish censor of the drama is inflexible—there shall be no murder committed on the stage. This is in order to prevent corruption by evil example. Consequently the dramatic effect of many plays is somewhat marred by the manner in which principals destined to be murdered are rushed off the stage and, after receiving the fatal thrust out of sight of the audience, stagger back from the wings to sing their death songs.

SOME CURIOSITIES.

Different Lengths of a Mile—How a Road Was Determined.

The standard yard prevails throughout the United Kingdom, but the lengths of the English, Scotch and Irish mile is different in each, which is the more curious, seeing that the English and American miles are identical. But the occasional local variations in our English acre are even more remarkable. These were perhaps originally due to the inexactitudes of ancient land surveying, which was comparatively of such a free and easy description that the acres of neighboring counties, not far apart adjacent parishes, sometimes varied.

A book published in the reign of Edward VI. gives the following curiously naive instructions on the subject: "Stand at the door of a church on Sunday and bid sixteen men to stop, tall ones and small ones, as they happen to pass out. Then make them put their left feet one behind the other, and the length thus obtained shall be a right and lawful rood to measure the land with, and the sixteenth part of it shall be a right and lawful foot."

This is almost laughable, but we have only to apply to one of the older dictionaries to find that anything like exactness, whether of definition or of fact, is quite a modern scientific development. And the story of the acre is a case in point. It was supposed to have been reduced to a common standard in 1305, but it was not until 1824 that we enacted the statute acre of 4,840 square yards.

With the loose system of measurement prevailing for the greater part of that long interval, it is not surprising that the so called "acre" was too often what the local wisecracks happened to make of it. By long use and wont it seems probable that the discrepancies thus arising occasionally crystallized into customs, of which some examples still survive. A Welsh acre was formerly twice as large as an English one, while a Scottish acre is larger than ours by more than 1,000 square yards.

According to authority, there are seven different measures still in use by which the acre may be variously defined. Lancashire has within her borders acres measured on a customary local scale, while the so called Cheshire acre is even larger than that of its Welsh neighbor—London Globe.

CHINESE USE TIME STICKS.

Each Will Burn Throughout a Period of Twelve Hours.

The Chinese have several contrivances for keeping the time of day. The water clock has often been described, but the use of burning sticks is less familiar. These are described by Colonel Bridges in his book, "Round the World in Six Months."

We bought a small bundle of time sticks. The sticks, each of which is thirty-two inches long, are used, as their name more or less implies, for the purpose of measuring time. For use by day some are especially made, while others for service by night are particularly constructed.

Each burns during a period of twelve hours. Of these "King Alfred's candles," as some of our party termed them, we bought two and from a printed circular or advertisement which was at the same time handed to us by the man who sold them we learned the following particulars:

The materials from which these time measuring sticks are made are prepared according to the directions of the official or imperial astronomers or astrologers. The duration of each time stick is adjusted according to the clepsydra or water clock, so that the time which it indicates when burning may be regarded as correct.

Time sticks which are manufactured to mark the hours of the day must be lighted at day dawn, when the lines on the palm of the hand are just visible, while those which are constructed to mark the hours of the night must be lighted at dusk, when the lines on the palm of the hand are not discernible. Each stick when burning must be placed in a perpendicular position. It is also necessary that it should be placed in a room free from currents of air.

Leibnitz and the Alchemists.

Leibnitz, one of the great men of literature, who died in 1716, wished to join a society of alchemists who were prosecuting a search for the philosopher's stone. He compiled a letter from the writings of the most celebrated alchemists and sent it to the society. The letter consisted of the most obscure terms he could find, and he himself, he said, did not understand a word of it. Afraid to be thought ignorant, the society invited him to its meetings and made him secretary.—Argonaut.

Her Poem.

"Oh, George," she exclaimed, "now that you've seen my new hat you simply can't regret that I got it! Isn't it just a poem?"

"Well, if it is," replied John, "I suppose a proper title for it would be 'Owed to a Milliner.'"

Case in Point.

Miss Middleage—How true it is that the older we grow the less we appreciate the things that used to delight us in childhood! Miss Pert—Yes, especially birthdays.—London Tit-Bits.

The Continuous Challenge.

Jimmy—Aw, no wonder yer kin lick me. Yer two years older'n me. Mick—Well, come round when yer as old as me an' I'll lick yer den too.—Judge.

Time far more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old.—Holmes.

The Orange Celebration

Greatest Gathering Ever Held in Stirling

The celebration of the 12th of July by the Orangemen of this place and vicinity brought together in Stirling the greatest number of people that has ever been seen here by the "oldest inhabitant." The weather was not the most favorable, clouds and showers during the day making it unpleasant, yet nothing could dampen the ardor of the members of the Order. They were here to celebrate the battle of the Boyne, and right royally it was done.

The first to arrive were the Oddfellows' Band and the Orange True Blues from Belleville, who came on the early morning train. For a while they had the town to themselves; but after a time as the clouds broke away and the sun shone forth, the different lodges from the districts to the east and north began pouring in, together with their friends, until before midday the streets were crowded with people.

The main streets had been gaily decorated with flags, streamers and banners, and with the evergreen arches presented a handsome appearance, and the throngs of people made a most animated scene, such as is seldom witnessed except in large cities.

Ample provision had been made by the members of L.O.L. No. 110 to feed a large crowd on the Agricultural Grounds, and all remarked that they never sat down to a better spread at any large gathering, and everyone was pleased and satisfied. The hotels had also made provision to give dinners to large numbers, and were well patronized.

After dinner was over a procession was formed on the Agricultural Grounds, and headed by the Oddfellows' Band marched down Front street, passing along Emily to Church street, and thence by Victoria to James and Mill street, and returning by Front street to the grounds.

During the afternoon excellent speeches were made by Rev. Geo. E. Ross, West Huntingdon; Rev. R. C. Blagrove, Belleville; Rev. W. G. Clarke and Rev. B. F. Byers, Stirling. The rain interfered with the speaking and caused the crowd to disperse earlier than otherwise would have been the case.

There were fifteen lodges present, and it is estimated that there were between five and six thousand people in town during the day.

In the evening a concert, under the auspices of the local Lodge, was given in the opera house by a number of Belleville artists. The program rendered consisted of songs, monologues and funny skits, and was well received by a good sized audience.

Stirling Lodge No. 110 is to be congratulated on the success of the celebration. The proceeds were over $1,000, and after paying expenses a good sum will remain to assist in paying for their hall.

The Ontario of Monday says: James Rainnie, a prominent resident of Rawdon, was on trial to-day before Magistrate Masson on the charge of perjury in a suit he had against one William Pounder in the Division Court on the 15th of May. Mr. Anderson appeared for the prosecution and G. G. Thrasher for the accused. The Magistrate committed Mr. Rainnie for trial, which will take place in September before Judge Deroche.

The Doctor Away from Home When Most Needed

People are often very much disappointed to find that their family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like cramp colic and cholera morbus require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape much pain and suffering and all risk. Buy it now, it may save life. For sale by J. S. Morton.

Wellman's Corners

Mr. Wm. Morton's family and their guests, Mr. Ivan Clancy and his sister of this place, Miss Lowery of Frankford, and little Miss Lucile Ashley of Madoc, have been having a very unpleasant experience. On Sunday evening after partaking of their supper they were all taken violently ill. Dr. Towle of Springbrook was sent for and found they were suffering from poison. Dr. Carlaw, of Campbellford, was also called in, and both doctors had their hands full for a while. Mrs. Morton and her son Hugh were soon better, with Mr. Morton and Miss Emma; Miss Clancy and Miss Lucile Ashley were also relieved, though it took some time to bring them around. Until a late hour in the night it was feared that Miss Lowery and Mr. Clancy would succumb, but happily there was no such sad result. At noon on Monday all the patients were considered out of danger, though Mr. Clancy was still very ill. It is thought that the poisoning came from salmon that they had eaten. Miss Morton, who had prepared the food for the table, says she didn't quite like the appearance of the salmon in one of the cans, but concluded that it was good, and mixed it with the other. The incident has created a great sensation in the neighborhood, and everyone is thankful that there has been no loss of life from the unhappy occurrence.

Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Clarke, has made a very favorable impression on his people here. In his inaugural sermon he took for his text "For me to live is Christ, to die is gain," and last Sabbath he preached from the words, "A man shall be for a covert from the tempest, and as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." Both discourses were thoughtful and practical.

The Orangemen report that they had a fine day in Stirling on the 12th, and one of them told your correspondent that he saw but one drunken man that day, and he added with commendable pride, "he wasn't an Orangeman." However, according to the newspaper reports you didn't give them as lively a time as their brethren had in Toronto.

The social at Mr. Fred Snarr's was a decided success, a large number being present. The lawn was beautifully decorated, and the strawberries and cream, ice cream and other dainties, were delicious. The ball playing was interesting, and the tug of war amusing. The committee realized $167.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Totten have returned from the West. They had a delightful trip. Fred Anderson, of the Postoffice department, met them at the station in Regina, and they say that he is both looking and doing well. They also saw Mr. John Watson, another of our young men who left here a few years ago.

Mr. Wm. Matthews is in a very precarious state of health. Mrs. Wm. Green, of Bloomfield, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Gullett. Vernon, son of Mr. Thos. Matthews, has just recovered from an attack of scarlet fever. Fortunately no other member of the family has taken it.

IN DAYS OF CAWNPORE

FIFTY YEARS SINCE THE TERRIBLE MASSACRE.

One of World's Most Awful Tragedies—Story of the Siege—Highlanders' View.

It is just fifty years since the terrible massacre of women, children and the weak garrison at Cawnpore, India, horrified the civilized world, and caused the manhood of the British Empire to fly to arms to avenge the torture and death of their unfortunate countrymen and countrywomen.

CAWNPORE.

Cawnpore was the key of Oude lying midway between Allahabad and Lucknow, and was a city of considerable business importance, the traders, merchants and East India company's employees, with their wives and children, making up a large European community. Besides these there were the wives and families of the British officers and soldiers of the small garrison, which was under the command of General Sir Hugh Wheeler, a brave old officer of fifty years' experience in Indian warfare, who had won many laurels in hard-fought battles under Lord Lake.

SIEGE LASTED 21 DAYS.

On the 6th of June the memorable defence of Cawnpore began by a couple of hundred unflinching British soldiers against three to four thousand Sepoys who had received a thorough military training by the British General Wheeler had entrenched the barracks of the European troops and the cavalry hospital, with skill, and collected all the white residents in this fortified refuge. This spot became the scene of one of the most heroic defences that ever took place since the world began. The ferocious miscreant Nana Sahib, who began his career by robbing the widow of his benefactor, the ex-Peshawar, directed the siege which lasted twenty-one days, and is thus described by a survivor:

MOST NOBLE FORTITUDE.

It was a siege, the miseries of which to the besieged have never been exceeded in the history of the world. And never since war began—never in the brave days of old, when women turned their hair into bow-strings—has the world seen nobler patience and fortitude than clothed the lives, and shone forth in the deaths of the wives and daughters of the fighting men of Cawnpore. Some saw their children slowly die in their arms; some had them swept from their breasts by the desolating fire of the enemy. There was no misery which humanity could endure that did not fall heavily upon our Englishwomen. Day by day the little garrison diminished, struck down by the insurgents' shot or the fierce rays of the sun.

OFFERED SAFE CONDUCT.

Fearing his prey would escape his ferocious hands, Nana, on the eighteenth day of the siege sent one of his female prisoners, Mrs. Greenway, to General Wheeler with a letter, in which he offered safe conduct to Allahabad to all who would lay down their arms. At first the fine old General refused the terms, but after some deliberation with his officers, they were accepted, as the solemn oath of the British Empire was signed to the agreement of capitulation. In the entrenchments and loop-holed buildings were three hundred women and children, and of men about the same number, half of them civilians. Boats were to carry them, by the terms of surrender, to Allahabad; these to be drawn up at the landing-place on the river Ganges, on Nana Sahib's presence, on that fatal morning a mournful procession of a few hundred emaciated and suffering fled out of the entrenchments they had so gloriously defended under the most trying physical conditions for twenty-six days.

FIENDISH TREACHERY.

Hardly had they pushed out from the shore when a signal was given by the Nana, hidden near the shore. The whole of the boatsmen jumped into the river from the boats, with masked canons were run out and opened fire with grape shot, while the Sepoys who lined the banks poured on the British soldiers poorly armed, with their hapless wives, a murderous rifle fire. A few of the boats drifted down the river, but the soldiers, again made prisoners, were immediately massacred by the brutal Sepoys, in Nana Sahib's presence, while the few women and children who were in the stranded boats were shut up in a small building to be slaughtered later on.

BODIES THROWN INTO WELL.

Sir Henry Havelock's avenging army, with the cry, "Remember Cawnpore!" upon their cry, the foe in great force near Pultypore, under the leadership of Baba Ras, the Nana's half brother, and in a short time the bridge over the Pandoo Nuddee was carried with his bayonets of the 78th Highlanders, 84th Regiment, and the Madras Fusiliers.

But the fiendish Nana Sahib, hearing of the complete rout of his army, at once gave out orders for the massacre of the 350 women and children imprisoned in the Assam bungalows, some of the victims were half-naked, and died bravely with their European sisters. Miss Wheeler is said to have killed six of the murderers before jumping down the well. The same evening the bodies of the slain women and children were thrown into this well by order of Nana.

BLOOD SPLASHED ON WALLS.

On the site of this well has been erected a beautiful memorial chapel, and on its walls are recorded the names of the victims and others who took part in the heroic defence. On the morning of the 16th July, Havelock's soldiers advanced on Cawnpore, with vigor, the pipers of the 78th Highlanders playing the Brigade to the assault. Suddenly there was a terrible explosion, the Nana had ordered the magazine to be blown up and then fled to Bilthoor, fifteen miles, with his rabble, who looted every place in Cawnpore belonging to the Europeans.

A Mr. Shepherd, who had escaped, at once led the Highlanders to the chamber in which the helpless women and children had met such frightful tortures and miserable death. Their blood was splashed on the walls and ran inches deep on the floor, while scattered round the room were tresses of women's hair, children's boots and shoes and leaves of bibles and prayer-books.

"CAWNPORE" TO THE DEATH.

The Highlanders are said to have divided the tresses, and swore that for every hair they held a mutinous Sepoy, or Hindoo bearing arms would pay the death penalty. Unarmed natives and native women and children were not molested by any British soldier, but quarters were given the murderers when they showed signs of asking, "Cawnpore" was hurled at them with a shot or the bayonet driven home. History states that over one thousand men, women and little ones captured by the treacherous Nana Sahib were slaughtered in the most ruthless manner. He escaped capture by the British, who for years used every means possible to make him a prisoner and try him for his horrible crimes, but all to no purpose. He is supposed to have fled to the Nepal country and by large bribes, was able to rest in safety from arrest.

MAN AND MONKEY ARE RELATED.

Eminent German Scientist Endorses Theory of Darwin.

Professor Haeckel, of Jena, Germany, the eminent Darwinian, whose public appearances are exceedingly rare, lectured the other night before a distinguished audience of scientists from all parts of Germany, on "The Problem of Man." The Zoological Institute of the University of Jena produced all its treasures, skeletons of a gorilla, of man of various races, of apes, decorating the platform. After paying a tribute to the early work of the Swedish naturalist, Linnaeus, as the predecessor of Darwin in the theory of descent, Haeckel claimed Darwin as the man who established for all time the morphological relationship of men and apes. It is not to be understood by relationship, said the lecturer, that man has been descended from some existing type of ape, but rather that he and the existing anthropoids had one common ancestor—perhaps in the remote Tertiary period—that this ancestor was descended from a still more remote "half-ape," which in turn descended from some insect-eating beast of mammal affinity.

This line of descent, claimed Haeckel, is now accepted by scientists with great certainty, that the theory about the descent of the elephant or the whale. As for the religious or philosophical consequences of such a theory, it is immaterial whether man's origin was found in the region of the apes or in that of any other species of mammalia; for example, the sheep, as Professor Virchow once sarcastically suggested. However, one outside may rebel against this theory of descent, it remains a fact that no group of animals approaches nearer to man than the apes.

Professor Haeckel paid an eloquent tribute to Huxley for his work, showing how close their relationship was. Dealing with the objections of those who point out anatomical differences in the legs, feet, brain, etc., who lay stress on man's consciousness of good and evil, his sympathies, his nobler feelings, Haeckel said that, although these objections had his entire sympathies, there would, he thought, be more intellectual pleasure among men on this question if they freed themselves once and for all from the blinding influences of traditional prejudices; and if they recognized in their lowly origin the best evidence of their brilliant faculties, and in their progressive but reasonable ground for belief that their future will lead them to still loftier heights.

BABES BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Amazing State of Affairs Disclosed in England.

As a result of police inquiries in England, nineteen further cases of baby farming are alleged to have been brought to light in connection with the prosecution at Liverpool of Herbert Smith, twenty-one, a music-hall conjurer, and Lottie Roberts, twenty, who stand charged with obtaining money by false pretences. Five cases were taken the other day, and the sums obtained range from £10 to £15.

The prosecution alleged that while arrangements were being made by one set of advertisements for prisoners themselves to adopt a child, prisoners were arranging by another set of advertisements to obtain immediate transfer of such infant to other persons. This a child obtained at Lincoln was transferred the same day at St. Pancras; another child obtained at St. Pancras was quickly got rid of at Sheffield; a third taken at Altrincham was parted with at Wigan; and a fourth fetched from Chester was parted with at Halifax—in this case within about four hours.

The children trafficked in were mostly illegitimate, but they seemed to have been fairly well cared for. Prisoners were again remanded, when other cases will be gone into. Smith had passed under different names, such as Esdale, Hughes, Smith and Barker, and wrote on papers with a monogram to give the appearance of respectability.

The stipendiary magistrate said that he would send them for trial. The evidence furnished by the prosecution revealed prima facie such an extensive traffic in illegitimate children, that it would be seriously against the public interest to allow a case of this class to be deprived of the fullest publicity.

Sniffen (in his own estimation a rising poet): "Ah, you know, Miss to me, my fancies always come to me in my dreams." Miss Bracing: "That is perhaps why they come to other people so sleepily." Sniffen: "A moment's hesitation, concludes that it would be well to retire for a while."

PART OF BACK BONE GONE!

ONE OF THE MOST REMARKABLE CASES IN SURGERY.

Man Lives With Three Vertebrae Missing—The Marvellous Skill of Physicians.

When Alexander Adrehi, a patient in the City Hospital on Blackwell's Island, New York, is discharged in a few weeks one of the most remarkable cases in surgery will have been completed.

For four years he lay almost constantly on a waterbed in the hospital, with pain of his backbone shot away. For the first few weeks after he was injured the lower part of his body was completely paralyzed. He has now so far recovered as to walk and go up and down stairs.

In May, 1903, Adrehi was shot in the back in a street fight in Brooklyn. The bullet hit the spinal column, shattering the tenth and eleventh vertebrae and almost severing the spinal cord. He was taken to Brooklyn Hospital, and at first it was believed his death was but a matter of a short time, as it was deemed impossible to overcome the injury to the spinal cord.

THANKS TO DR. FOWLER.

The late Dr. George Ryerson Fowler, who died a year ago, had charge of the case and he decided to operate. An incision six inches long was made directly over the eleventh vertebra. The tenth and eleventh vertebra had been completely shattered. With a chisel the laminae of the tenth and eleventh vertebrae were cut away, exposing the severed cord. A narrow, ragged and contused strip of membrane, about an eighth of an inch wide, remained. The bullet was removed, the ends of the spinal cord were then sutured, the membrane being included in the sutures. A drain, consisting of a half-dozen strips of oiled silk, was introduced and the wound seamed was performed May 9, 1903. A month later the man was able to move his toes. In November he could sit up in bed. Every day he received massage treatment to restore and stimulate the circulation. Electricity was used for the same purpose.

IS PERMANENTLY CURED.

When Dr. Fowler died Adrehi was removed to the City Hospital on Blackwell's Island and placed in care of Dr. Louis Casamajor, who contrived a walking machine for him.

It consists of a harness which fits under his arms and supports his weight. This is suspended in a frame which moves about on ball-bearing casters. Adrehi propelled it with his feet, his weight supported by the harness. In a short time he was able to travel all about the corridor in the hospital. Now he can walk without the use of crutches or a brace, and goes up and down stairs by holding to the banisters. He exercises abundantly, and the massage treatment is administered only occasionally. He moves his legs and feet freely, and the sense of feeling in them is fully restored. The circulation seems to have been perfectly established, and he is believed to be permanently cured.

He is short the tenth, the eleventh and twelfth vertebrae, but Dr. Casamajor says nature will in time make compensation with a growth of tendon which will fully supply the deficiency. The cost to the city in the care of this patient has been great. At the usual rate for pay patients of $1 a day it would figure more than $1,200. But for weeks and months, when physicians and nurses were battling with death to win him back to life, he required constant attention. It is doubtful if $5,000 would cover the cost.

WOMEN LIVE LONGER.

Longevity Three Years Greater Than That of Men.

What is known as the new English life-table is discussed in a Registrar-General's blue book, issued recently. It shows that the normal death-rate per 1,000 in England and Wales has decreased since 1840 from 21.74 to 18.19 in 1900, and that the chance of life at birth has increased during the same period, but not yet reached the years given by the Registrar-General. Women, it will be noticed, may expect to live three years longer than men.

The following table gives the expectation of life (in years) at birth for England and Wales as a whole, and for selected healthy districts—

	1888.	1881.	1891.
Men, England generally . . . . .	54.	50.	1900.
Women, England generally . . . . .	59.91	53.66	44.13
Men, healthy districts . . . . .	41.85	47.18	47.77
Women, healthy districts . . . . .	48.56	51.48	52.87
Men, London districts . . . . .	49.45	54.04	55.71

What are the healthy counties? A table of the death-rate per 1,000 from 1891 to 1900 shows the healthiest to be Rutland, and the least healthy Lancashire, to which London comes next.

While the death-rate from tuberculosis per 1,000,000 has decreased since the decade 1892-60 from 3,557 to 2,010 in 1900-1901, that from cancer averaged 754 in the last-named decade, or more than one-fourth greater than in the preceding decade.

SOME ROYAL ROMANCES

COURTSHIPS OF KINGS THAT WERE REAL LOVE AFFAIRS.

They Are Usually Cut-and-dried Affairs, But Some of Them Are Quite Romantic.

The courtship of the Queen Dowager of Italy was one of the shortest on record. One day the Duchess of Genoa sought counsel of Victor Emmanuel II. It appeared that representations had been made on behalf of a German prince for the hand of her daughter, Margaret. They discussed the matter, and on returning to the palace he mentioned the matter to his son, Humbert.

The Prince, with some agitation, craved permission to enter the lists against the German prince. The King was delighted, and father and son immediately returned to the palace of the Duchess.

KING EDWARD'S LOVE-AFFAIR.

While the King entertained the Duchess, Humbert drew his cousin aside and asked her to marry him. Having received the wished-for answer, Prince Humbert led the Princess back to her astonished mother and formally announced their betrothal. The whole affair was over in ten minutes.

Not very well known that Queen Victoria had selected a German princess as a suitable bride for our present King. But on this subject the Prince had other views, for he had fallen in love with the beautiful Danish princess. His mother decided that he should have his own way, and a meeting place between the young people in the Cathedral of Speier. The sequel has shown the wisdom of Queen Victoria.

The courtship of King Alfonso's father is particularly interesting. The King fell in love with Mercedes, a daughter of the Duc de Montpensier, and the Court was thrown into a panic. Alfonso's mother, Isabella II., had been driven into exile by a combination of circumstances, which included the ambition of Montpensier. But the King ignored the anathemas of Isabella and the entreaties of his Ministers, and set about the conquest of the fair Mercedes.

The Royal lovers were staying at La Granja, and had wandered far from the palace. The young princess was too weary to return on foot, so the King hired a farmer's grain-cart and mule to take them home. The King drove, but after a little the mule was allowed to go as it pleased, for Alfonso was declaring his love for the Princess, and swearing to marry her, in spite of all.

THE TWO ROYAL SISTERS.

One of the most romantic of Royal courtships was that of Francis Joseph of Austria. The young Emperor was privately betrothed to Helene, the eldest daughter of the Duke Maximilian of Bavaria. He went to visit the Duke to complete the necessary arrangements. Soon after his arrival the Emperor was walking in the woods near the castle when he met Helene's younger sister, Elizabeth, the tomb of the family. With girlish impulsiveness she greeted him with, "God guard you, cousin!" and flung her arms round the neck of her Imperial relative. He promptly fell in love with this child of the woods.

To celebrate his birthday the Emperor's mother gave a ball. Elizabeth was invited, but, not having made up her mind, she had to decline. The Emperor, however, insisted that Elizabeth should be there. Between the dances he led the Princess into an alcove. On a table was a book with pictures of Austrians in their national costumes, and they turned over the pages together. "These are my subjects," her partner said suddenly; "say one word, and you shall rule them."

The reply was so satisfactory that the Emperor immediately gave the Duke Maximilian for the hand of his younger daughter, Elizabeth. The old Duke was furious at the affront, put upon Princess Helene. He refused to allow Elizabeth to take her sister's place until the Emperor passionately declared that, should his request be rejected, he would start at once for home and marry his cousin Helene, the sister of the Duke's daughter. Thereupon the Duke gave his reluctant consent.—Pearson's Weekly.

A HOUSE OF GLASS.

The Freak Palace of a New York Financier.

In a country home built entirely of glass, C. Parker Woodbury, a New York financier, with a town residence in Brooklyn, will seek sanitary perfection and all the health-giving qualities from sunlight filtering through the roof and walls, as well as the windows of his residence. This house is to be erected at Beechurst, L.I., at a cost of $25,000. Albert Swasey, an architect at No. 40 West Twenty-third Street, is preparing the plans. Woodbury's glass house. It will be the size of a five-story room dwelling, but instead of having interior walls, with hallways and doors, the two floors are to be divided off, as suits the occupant's fancy, with Japanese screens made of bamboo and paper.

The floor of the house is hollow. Glass blocks twelve inches long and ten inches thick will be used. While the glass will be tinted, and, therefore, not transparent, it will be translucent. Green color probably will be the tone chosen by Mr. Woodbury for the walls of his home. In order to modulate the amount of sunlight entering the rooms an elaborate system of screens is to be devised, but these probably will not be used in demand, since the builder desires all the sunlight he can get.

At night the house will be lighted by electricity, and as the light will penetrate the walls, the Woodbury home will be one of the show places of Beechurst when it begins to glow in the evening.

CLOTHES MADE OF PAPER

COMPARABLE TO A THIN RUBBER GARMENT.

Tastefully Figured Stuffs—Paper Sacks as Mail Bags—Soon on the Market.

For a long time yarn has been manufactured out of paper in Germany; but now yarn is being woven into fabrics, which the manufacturers claim can advantageously be employed for wearing apparel, tablecloths, towels, upholstery materials, rugs, hangings, buckram, linings, sacking, etc.

In fact, fashionable clothes are now being made out of paper and will soon be on the market.

The samples sent to the Bureau of Manufactures at Washington show a variety of threads and numerous forms of woven fabrics. The contrast is a sacking material, and closely resembles ordinary jute sacking in appearance. It is fairly strong, and reliable reports state that it is fully as durable as the article of jute.

Some rather tastefully figured stuffs intended for hangings, portiers, etc., are of composite structure, the warp being of cotton and the woof of paper yarn. Heavier materials of this sort are said to render good service as rugs. The lightest stuffs are apparently too stiff to lend themselves easily for use as wearing apparel.

FISH GELATIN TREATMENT.

A light, blue stuff, with a rather lustrous surface, is, however, not far removed in point of pliability or suppleness from certain grades of American cotton fabrics, which find a ready market among the Chinese. A closely woven stuff, upon which designs have been printed, could be used very effectively for a wall covering.

The sacking manufactured there has rendered admirable service and seems to replace the jute article perfectly. Sacks of this material have been very successfully employed as mail bags.

By treatment with fish gelatin the resistance to moisture has been so heightened that woven stuffs can be repeatedly washed and do not suffer from exposure to the elements. An interesting application of paper at Verviers is that of the manufacture of hats in imitation of ordinary straw head-gear and of the more costly Panama hats. The results are said to be very satisfactory. Special advantages are claimed for the paper-hats, apart from the cheapness. The color of the artificial straw or of the leaves of the Central American screw pine is better than that of exposure to the sun, and what is of considerable importance, the plaiter can command the use of material of any length.

WARMTH WELL KNOWN.

Paper does not "generate" heat when in contact with the skin or when used as a vest any more than any other inert substance. Rough fabrics, more particularly certain coarse woollen goods, do stimulate the circulation when in immediate contact with the skin, but purely as the result of mechanical irritation. It has long been a matter of common household knowledge that a sheet of stout paper is as good as a heavy garment in protecting any given part of the body against cold. Thus, a newspaper between a vest and a coat protects the back of the wearer as effectively as if he wore a heavy overcoat, and the use of paper to protect the feet is well known.

POOR CONDUCTOR.

Its value in this connection is based upon the fact that it is a poor conductor of heat and but slightly permeable in most of its forms. It is comparable in this respect to a thin garment of caoutchouc as a protection against cold, because it retains about the body a layer of air already warmed by animal heat. It does not have all of the disadvantages attending the use of caoutchouc, resultant from the complete impermeability of the latter, and the consequent condensation and retention of the moisture emanating from the body, but in the latter respect it is probably less healthy than tissues of animal origin, such as silk and wool. These garments permit the very slow exchange of the layer of warm air about the body, charged with its various emanations, for external colder air.

REMARKABLE BAND.

Probably the most extraordinary band on earth is that which is stationed in the Imperial Palace at Moscow. A famous composer was recently taken into a room to play the piano, but in the compositions played by this band. The composer was mystified until the lights were raised, when 200 soldiers were revealed, each with a horn or trumpet in his hand varying in size from 1½ inches to 20 feet. Each instrument and each player was under the control of a single note, but the playing was so perfect that the sound was just as if from one grand instrument played up by a master hand.

WHEN YOU SLEEP SOUNDEST.

The period of deepest sleep varies from three o'clock to five. An hour or two after going to bed you sleep very soundly; then your slumber grows gradually lighter, and it is easy enough to waken you at one or two o'clock. But when four o'clock comes you are in such a state of somnolence that it would take a great deal to rouse you.

ATTEMPT TO KILL PRESIDENT

Maniac Fires Two Shots at the French Chief Executive.

A despatch from Paris says: The national fête day was marred by an attempt on the life of President Fallières by Leon Maillé, a naval reservist, of Havre, who, it is believed, is suffering from a mania which causes him to imagine himself persecuted. Maillé fired two shots at the President, but did not hit him. He was at once placed under arrest.

On account of the activity of the anti-militarists, who tried to organize a demonstration against the army throughout France on Sunday, exceptional precautions were taken to safeguard the President. The attempt on his life occurred on the Avenue des Champs Elysees while the President was returning to the palace from Longchamps, where he had reviewed the garrison of Paris in the presence of 250,000 enthusiastic people. Premier Clemenceau and M. Lanes, the President's Secretary, were with the President in the car, which was escorted by a squadron of cuirassiers. The carriage had safely emerged from the Bois de Boulogne, where the anti-militarists had stationed themselves, with the intention of hooting the soldiers, and was descending the broad Champs Elysees amid the acclamations of the crowds thronging the sidewalks, who were shouting "Vive Fallières," "Vive l'Armée," when Maillé from the curb at the corner of Lesseur street fired two shots point blank at the President in quick succession.

ATTEMPT TO LYNCH PRISONER.

As by a miracle no one was hit, President Fallières was cool and collected when the cortege stopped. The diplomats, who were following the President's landau, alighted from their carriages and hurried to his side. Finding that nobody had been injured, the President ordered the cortege to move on. In the meantime two policemen seized Maillé, who made no resistance. But the police, with difficulty, prevented the irate crowds from lynching the prisoner, until a cordon of reserves came up and conducted him to the station. There Maillé refused to give any reason for his act, saying: "The revelations I have are so grave and serious that I will only make them before a Magistrate for transmission to the chief of State. It is a matter between the Government and me. I am the victim of many villains."

THE POWDER EXPLODED.

Six Sailors Killed on U. S. Battleship Georgia.

A despatch from Washington says: Six men, including one officer and five enlisted men, are dead, and two officers and twelve enlisted men are injured, some of them more or less seriously, as the result of an accident aboard the battleship Georgia on Monday morning, caused by the igniting of a powder charge in the after superposed turret. The explosion occurred about 10 o'clock while the ship, with other vessels of the Second Division of the Atlantic Fleet, was at target practice off Provincetown, Mass. Lieut. Casper Goodenrich, jr., who is a son of Rear Admiral Goodenrich, commandant of the New York Navy Yard, is among the dead, and Midshipman John T. Cruz and Falkner Goldthwaite, were wounded. The Georgia proceeded at once to Boston, where the injured men were placed in the naval hospital at Chelsea. It was there that Midshipman Goldthwaite and the five enlisted men died last Monday afternoon.

SLIT THE MAN'S TONGUE.

Revolutionaries Cruelty By Buffalo Burglars.

A despatch from Buffalo says: Because he would not deliver to two burglars the keys to his employer's house, Frank Smith, 45 years old, a coachman in the employ of John Gehm, a wholesale meat dealer, was horribly tortured Sunday morning, and left for dead by his assailants. Smith slept in a room above the barn at the rear of Gehm's house. He was awakened shortly after midnight by two masked men, who demanded the keys of the house. Smith refused to give them up, and the burglars then began a series of revolting tortures. Smith's tongue was slit with a knife, and the soles of his feet were slashed in a score of places until he became unconscious. The men then threw Smith down the stairs, where he was found next morning. The matter was kept a secret by the police until Monday, when one arrest was made. The prisoner gives his name as Taylor.

DEPORTING THE BAD ONES.

Two Undesirable Prisoners Will be Sent Home.

A despatch from Kingston says: A prisoner named Harrison, who is serving a term in the penitentiary, is to be deported next week. He will be sent to Detroit, where the United States authorities will take charge of him and deal with him as they see fit. Another prisoner in the penitentiary here is also to be deported shortly.

AMURDER AT HAMILTON

Jacob Sunfield Shot Mrs. Radzyk, Then Killed Her Husband

A despatch from Hamilton says: A tragedy occurred here on Friday afternoon about 2.45 by which Andrew Radzyk lost his life by a bullet. Mrs. Radzyk was shot in the breast and Jacob Sunfield stands arrested, charged with murder. The husband and wife resided in a small cottage on Sherman avenue north, within 100 feet of the International Harvester Works, and Sunfield was boarding with them. The neighbors were alerted by the sound of three shots, and Mrs. Radzyk was seen to run towards the factory. Upon arriving there she was found to be bleeding, and whilst being attended by the resident doctor the police were telephoned for. Sergt. Walsh and Constable Clark were dispatched to the scene and upon entering the house found Radzyk stretched on the floor of the bedroom in pools of his own blood, whilst the gory condition of the sheets and quilts showed that he had been lying there when shot. In a rear room was found Sunfield with his head buried in his hands and apparently in a stupor. When roused and told to hold up his hands to be manacled he showed an inclination to resist, but when finally handcuffed he seemed quiet enough. In the meantime an ambulance was summoned, and the injured man, who was conscious, was placed in it and hurried off to the house of Dr. Cummings. He could not speak English, but mentioned a name once or twice before relapsing into unconsciousness. At the doctor's house the X-rays were put on him, and a bullet was discovered lodged in the man's brain. He was then transferred to the hospital. Sunfield was taken down to No. 3 police station, and when asked what had happened, would only reply: "You will find out." When searched an Iver-Johnson revolver was found with three cartridges exploded. The woman was wounded in two places, but not dangerously. According to her story, Sunfield shot her husband, who was lying on the bed asleep, and then came out and shot her. Radzyk was operated on on Friday evening, but all efforts to save his life were futile, and he succumbed at 8.30 without making a statement. Judging by the half-empty whiskey bottles lying around and the fact that Sunfield was intoxicated when found at the house, the shooting seems to have been the result of a carousal and jealousy.

SPENT $21,000,000 ON ROADS

Value of Work Done in Ontario in Ten Years.

A despatch from Toronto says: As shown by the annual report of Mr. A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Public Works, on highway improvement, the amount spent by Ontario on road improvements during the last ten years was $21,000,000. Of this $10,438,900 was in cash, the remainder being made up by 10,561,100 days of statute labor. This does not include the expenditure in town and city streets. Lennox and Addington, Middlesex, Peel, Lincoln, Oxford, Wellington, Hastings, Lanark, Wentworth and Simcoe were the counties in which the most work was done from 1903 to 1906. The aggregate sum spent in these counties in this time was $887,282, of which the Government contributed $295,751. The miles of roads improved totaled 2,076. The expenditure in 1906 was $250,444. Although admitting that automobiles have come to stay, in regard to the present situation, Mr. Campbell says: "The automobile on the country road is undoubtedly producing, at the present time much hardship. Occasionally accidents are reported, and that the number is not greater is partially due to the fact that farmers, and their wives and daughters especially, are compelled to use the roads with horses less than they would otherwise do, owing to the fear of meeting an automobile. This is most unfortunate, and it is not a matter of surprise that much feeling has arisen antagonistic to the automobile."

RECORD OF FATALITIES.

Thirty-four in Winnipeg Since Beginning of Year.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Since the beginning of the year there have been in Winnipeg no less than 34 fatalities, an appalling record, besides five people who have taken their own lives. Possibly never before have so many met violent deaths in this city in the same space of time. From the record it would seem that Winnipeg is increasing in the number of accidental deaths at a rate that is truly appalling. The record is: Accidental ..... 10 By street cars ..... 5 By freezing ..... 2 By asphyxiation ..... 1 Burned to death ..... 6 Suicides ..... 5 Drowned ..... 3 Killed on railways ..... 8 Poisoned ..... 1 Murder ..... 2

VIOLENT DEATHS AT MONTREAL.

A despatch from Montreal says: Montreal is getting a record for deaths by violence, no less than seventy-five such cases having occurred in June.

DIED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Sir Alfred Billson Expired During a Division.

A despatch from London says: During a division in the House of Commons on Tuesday evening Sir Alfred Billson, member for the northwestern division of Staffordshire, suddenly fainted and then expired. The House immediately adjourned. Sir Alfred was born in 1852. A pathetic feature of the incident was that Sir Alfred's daughter was in the ladies' gallery at the time of her father's death. She was not aware of his seizure, and the news was gently broken to her by John Burns. Sir Alfred was knighted at the time of the last birthday honors.

Nearly a million people died of the plague in India during the first five months of the present year.

DROUTH IN MANITOBA.

Southern Sections of the Province are Suffering.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Private advices received during the past few days from southern Manitoba indicate that the drouth is having disastrous effects on the crops, and failure is staring many districts in the face. Rain has fallen in streams along the creeks and rivers, and others have got no rain at all. Many farmers are reported to be ploughing up their fields. North of the C. P. R. main line, extending to the boundary of the Province with Saskatchewan, there are excellent crop prospects.

PRISON BINDER TWINE.

Seventeen Carloads Shipped From Kingston to Alberta.

A despatch from Kingston says: Seventeen carloads of binder twine, comprising the output of the penitentiary factory, has been forwarded by steamers to Fort William and thence by train to the farmers' association of Alberta Province. The prices paid range from 10 cents to 11½ cents per pound.

KING'S PHYSICIAN DEAD.

Sir William Henry Broadbent Attended Royal Family.

A despatch from London says: Sir Henry Broadbent, physician-in-ordinary to King Edward and the Prince of Wales, and who for a long time attended the late Queen Victoria and others of the Royal family, died on Wednesday. He was born in 1835.

CHINA WAKING UP.

A despatch from Peking says: Important edicts have been issued ordering reform in the provincial judicial system and establishing police, industrial details and modern courts of law in the provinces. The changes will first be introduced in Chihli and Szechuan. The officials and people are also called upon to prepare for the adoption of a constitutional form of government.

GROWTH OF MANUFACTURES

Six and a Half Millions Is the Population of Canada.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A bulletin was issued on Wednesday morning by the Bureau of Census and Statistics, showing the growth of Canada's manufacturing establishments during the past six years, and giving the comparative average production per establishment in 1901 and 1905. The various industries are divided into three groups: First, those with products of between $500,000 and $500,000 per establishment; second, those with products of between $200,000 and $500,000 per establishment; and third, those running over one million dollars per establishment.

Compared with the census of 1901, which was for the calendar year 1900, there were in the first class 178 works, producing each $500,000 and over in 1905, as against 72 in 1901; in the second class there were 62 works producing $250,000 and over in 1905, as against 24 in 1901, and in the third class there were 17 works producing $250,000 and over, as against 6 in 1901. There were four works in 1905 producing each $500,000 and over, whereas not one factory had reached the amount in 1901.

SOME GREAT PRODUCERS.

The greatest volume of production by a single factory in 1905 was over $8,000,000, and the greatest in 1900 was under $4,000,000. The production of all works in the year 1900 was $481,053,371, and in 1905 it was $717,118,082.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.

A Flash of Lightning Ignited Her Clothing.

A despatch from Moncton, N. B., says: During a severe electrical storm which swept this section on Tuesday afternoon thirteen-year-old Mary Trites was killed by a bolt of lightning in her room, two miles from Paines Junction. The child had gone upstairs in company with her little sister to lower a window, and had just placed her right hand on the sash when there came a terrific flash of thunder, followed by a vivid lightning flash. Almost instantly the clothing of the little girl sprang into a blaze, and she was hurled back against the foot of the bed which stood in the room. The other child, frightened by the thunder, threw herself on the floor and cried out to her mother. When the latter rushed upstairs she found the eldest child on the floor terribly burned and lifted her onto the bed, where she expired a few minutes later. Her arm and breast had been fearfully burned, and it is thought that her back was broken by the shock. The child was a daughter of George Trites, I. C. R. section foreman. The house was quite badly damaged by the bolt.

TWO MUST DIE ON GALLOWES.

Cabinet Considers Three Appeals for Executive Clemency.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Three appeals for executive clemency in the case of men sentenced to death have been considered by the Cabinet. In two of the cases it was decided that the law must take its course. In the third, clemency was deferred, pending the receipt of a further report from the judge who tried the case. The two murderers who must pay the penalty of their crimes are a man named Dale, who two years ago shot two Frenchmen in British Columbia, and Ching Lung, a Chinaman, who stabbed a man in the Kootenay District a year ago. The man who has a reprieve is Frank Capelli, convicted of the slaying of one, Dow, at Whiteside, in the Party Sound District.

WHEELS CRUSHED OUT HIS LIFE.

Carcade Lad Thrown From Wagon When Team Took Flight.

A despatch from Strathroy says: Harry, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John McWhinney, who lives about a mile and a half from town on the Ninth Concession of Carleton Place, had his life crushed out at an early hour on Friday morning. While his father was hitching up a team to go for a load of lumber, the little fellow, who was six years old, climbed into the wagon. Suddenly one of the horses sprang forward and threw the lad. The hind wheel passed over his body and he died in twenty minutes before the doctor arrived.

THEY DIED OF STARVATION

Seventy-One Indians Perish in Woods Surrounding Lake Mistassini.

A despatch from Quebec says: Further details reached town on Tuesday in regard to the death from starvation of a party of twenty-one Indians in the woods, while en route from Lake Mistassini to Roberval. On the 22nd of March last an Indian named John Boston found the remains of three of the victims, Thomas Bazil, Miller and Big John, about a hundred miles from Lake Mistassini. He interred the bodies where they were found. Another party of Indians from Mistassini is expected at Pointe Bleue, the Indian reserve near Roberval, this week, when further details of the terrible tragedy are expected. Thomas Bazil was a Montagnais, from Pointe Bleue, where he leaves a wife and child. Miller was the son of a former chief of the Hudson's Bay post at Mistassini, while Big John belonged to

In the third class there were four Canadian sugar refineries producing on the average $4,288,005 per annum, nine smelting establishments producing on the average $2,899,707, twelve slaughtering and meat-packing establishments averaging $1,687,481, six flouring and grist mills averaging $3,818,242, four cotton mills averaging $1,715,333, and three agricultural implement works averaging $1,725,737.

All told, there were in 1905 eighty-one establishments with an annual production of over one million dollars each, as compared with thirty-nine in 1901.

GROWTH OF POPULATION.

Canada now has a population of over six and a half millions. The department of Census and Statistics has recently made a careful and elaborate estimate of the population. It found that on the first day of April, this year, the population of Canada was, as nearly as could be estimated, 6,504,000. This is a growth of population in six years since the last decennial census, of 1,133,585. The total population in 1901 was 5,370,415. If the present rate of growth is maintained Canada will show a population of over seven and a half millions when the next census is taken.

Since April 1 last the immigration has totalled over 100,000, so that the total population at the present date is in the neighborhood of $6,600,000.

ROSY PROSPECTS FOR CROPS.

In Most Sections on the C. P. R. Warm Rains Have Fallen.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The C. P. R. crop reports from nearly all sections are most encouraging, with glowing prospects of fair average crops. In about twenty districts they need rain, but as yet no damage has been done. In the majority of sections warm rains have fallen abundantly, and the grain, although somewhat late, is shooting up at a rapid rate. Many sections report the shot blade through, and the height of the stalks running over 20 inches. All fear of a poor crop is passed if occasional showers come to help the sun. This week's report is the most favorable of the season, and next week the crop report gatherers are expected to send in the climax of a big wheat crop for 1907 despite the late Spring drawbacks.

DISORDERS IN BELFAST.

Strikers Spill Sugar But Drink Contents of Whiskey-laden Van.

A despatch from Belfast says: The anticipated disorders growing out of the strike here have occurred. A van carrying freight to the docks for a Brazilian line steamer was seized by a mob and burned in the street on Wednesday. Another was thrown from a dock, while still another, loaded with sugar, was held up, the bags ripped open and their contents strewn in the street. One whiskey-laden van was seized, but the whiskey was not poured into the street, the rioters preferring to take possession of it. Two cases had been looked when the police arrived.

PUSHING WESTWARD FAST.

Good Progress With Line From Saskatoon to Edmonton.

A despatch from Edmonton, Alberta, says: The progress made during the past two months on the Grand Trunk Pacific, between Saskatoon and Edmonton, gives more reassuring prospects of an early completion than the work hitherto indicated. About 1,200 men and 900 teams of horses are employed on the work. Seventy-five miles of road is graded from Saskatoon west, and with the large force employed now, it is expected that over 100 miles west from Saskatoon will be completed by Aug. 5. Then a large force of men at work on the Battle River crossing will be moved up between Battle River and Edmonton.

The southern provinces of Russia have been swept by a severe storm, and thousands of acres of crops have been destroyed.

Our Public School

Meeting Held for Discussion of Heating and Ventilating System

The public meeting held in the Town Hall on Monday evening called, as the notice stated, "to consider the demands of the Board of Education upon the Council for the supplying of a considerable sum of money to enable the Board of Education to install a proper heating and ventilating system in the Public School," was not largely attended, though it was a fairly representative gathering of the ratepayers.

Mr. Mather, as reeve, occupied the chair, and stated the object of the meeting. He wished the members of the Board of Education to state their case. This was objected to by some members of the Board, who said the Council had "turned down" their proposal, and thought the members of the Council should explain their reason for doing so. After considerable "sparing for position" it was agreed that members of the School Board should speak and explain their position. We cannot attempt to give anything like a full report, as this would more than fill the columns of the paper.

The first speaker was Mr. C. W. Thompson, chairman of the School Board, who gave a statement of the negotiations entered into with the various firms for the installation of a heating and ventilating system, and of the visit of Dr. Faulkner and himself to Oshawa to inspect the Pease system in use in the public school there; also of their visit to Peterboro and Lakefield to inspect other systems in use in those places. He stated that after visiting these places they most decidedly recommended the Pease system as the one which gives thorough satisfaction.

Dr. Faulkner next followed, and read a lengthy report which he had prepared and submitted to the School Board, and also to the Council. This report confirmed in every particular all that Mr. Thompson had said in favor of the Pease system. The Dr. then went on to show that if this system was installed it would be possible to conduct the school with three teachers, instead of four; and that the saving of the salary of a fourth teacher would more than pay for the installing of the Pease system in twenty years, and it would thus not cost the ratepayers anything. He showed how, with the proper heating and ventilation secured by this system in the Oshawa school, an average of eighty pupils were being taught in one room not so large as any of the rooms in our public school; and if this could be done here, there would be no difficulty in placing the number of children attending our school in three rooms, and thus save the salary of one teacher. He stated that the school had been for years in an unsatisfactory state as regards heating and ventilation, and was liable to be condemned at any time and the Government grant withheld.

Dr. Bissonnette then spoke as to the unsanitary, and unhealthy condition of the school, and stated that on this account he allowed his children to attend only half time—the first half of the forenoon and first half of the afternoon.

Mr. Meiklejohn repudiated the insinuation that had been made that he was interested as agent of another firm, and that when solicited to take the agency he had told them he had not time to attend to it, and did not wish to have anything to do with it.

Mr. W. S. Martin scored the Council for their action in the matter, and said that the members of the School Board were among the heaviest ratepayers, and had as much the interests of the village at heart as the Council, and did not wish to go into any unnecessary expense, but that this was necessary, and under the method proposed would not place any additional burden on the ratepayers.

Mr. F. T. Ward also spoke to the same effect.

Mr. Mather then spoke in behalf of the Council, and said he thought it strange that this Province of Ontario had not in the past, nor has it now, anyone in connection with the Education Department who could be looked to as an authority in the matter of heating and ventilating school buildings. Many of the States across the border had such officials in connection with their educational systems. In reference to the raising of the amount asked for by the School Board he did not see any way but to comply with their request, and raise the money required, in the easiest and most inexpensive manner.

It being then after eleven o'clock the meeting quickly dispersed.

A terrible disaster occurred at London, Ont., on Tuesday afternoon, when a four storey brick building suddenly collapsed, burying a number of people in its ruins. Nine persons are known to have been killed, and a great many are injured, some of whom may not recover.

Drought in southern Manitoba threatens to work havoc with the crops.

North Hastings' Examinations for Admission to High Schools

The following, who wrote at Stirling, Madoc, Marmora and Bancroft, were successful. The examinations were conducted in accordance with the Departmental Regulations:

The highest standing gained by any candidate was obtained by Cora Mosher, Springbrook, who got 574. Of those who wrote at Madoc, Mary Sexton got 502. At Marmora, Mary Fletcher got 527. At Bancroft, Jennie Lynch got 525.

Those to whose names the word "Honors" is appended obtained at least 75 per cent. of the total number of marks, besides making 40 per cent. on each subject. Trustees, parents and teachers would do well to study this list.

Reduction in Railway Rates

The findings of the Railway Commission with respect to the discrimination in rates from United States points to Canadian points as against those from contiguous Canadian territory to the same destination, has been announced, and as a result of the efforts and representations of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association a general readjustment of rates throughout eastern Canada has been brought about. An order has just been issued to railways that tariffs covering the new basis of rates must be issued without unnecessary delay.

The new proposition means a general decrease in class freight rates in the territory east of the Detroit river and Sudbury, and including the Maritime Provinces; the same basis of rates from and between all large centres; the same in winter as in summer; overseas complaints as to the violation of the long and short haul clause of the Railway Act, except as authorized; the removal of the discrimination which now exists at frontier points in favor of the United States manufacturer; the rates between all points to be based on short line mileage, and as nearly as practicable, uniformity in rates between various distributing centres in Ontario.

Railways may continue to apply from recognized water points, such as Toronto, Hamilton, St. Catharines, etc., a basis in competition with water during the summer slightly lower than the general basis adopted, but there is to be no increase from those prevailing at the present time.

As an illustration as to how the new basis will work out, the present first-class rate, Windsor to Montreal, is 70 cents in the winter and 60 cents in the summer. The new basis will be 58 cents all the year round.

Free, for Catarrh, just to prove merit, a Trial Size Box of Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Let me send it now. It is a snow-white, creamy, healing, antiseptic balm. Containing such healing ingredients as Oil of Eucalyptus, Thymol, Menthol, etc., it gives instant and lasting relief to Catarrh of the nose and throat. Make the free trial, and see for yourself what this preparation can and will accomplish. Address Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Large jars 50c. Sold by J. S. Morton.

Owner's risk conditions has been so amended and defined that the carriers are liable for loss through negligence on the part of themselves, their agents or employees.

There is to be no disturbance of any special commodity tariffs or commodity rates, or in other words, the rates are lower than the new class rates.

Increase of Population

The census department has prepared an estimate which places the population of Canada at six and a half millions on April 1st last, an increase of more than one and one-quarter millions since the census of 1901. If the present rate of increase is maintained the Dominion should show a population of seven and a half millions at the next regular census. The increase of immigration is, however, becoming greater every year, and this year will reach probably 400,000, with a probability of increasing to half a million in a year or so. It will not be surprising, therefore, if the next census shows our population to be much greater than the above estimate.

A sudden cold wave has struck Austria-Hungary. Ten degrees of frost was registered at Vienna on July 16th, and severe frosts were reported from various places. There is much snow in the mountain districts, and summer visitors at mountain hotels are snowed out. Such conditions have not prevailed before in 190 years.

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my book on either Dyspepsia, the Heart, or in either Kidneys, or the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weakness of these nerves and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No one can remedy even claims to treat the inside nerves. Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me to-day for sample and free book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by J. S. Morton.

His Self-Denial

Not long ago we heard a man's little daughter say to him, "Papa, can't I have a nickel to buy some gum? He was a good kind man, and he didn't refuse her roughly. He patted her on the head and said,—"Daughter, your old dad can't afford such things. It takes all our money to buy bread and meat and keep you and mamma in shoes." She looked disappointed and walked away. Presently he started home. He felt as if a hot iron would help his appetite, and put him in a more cheerful frame of mind in which to greet his family, so he walked in and put his right foot upon the footfall. "What'll I take you boys?" he asked. "I'll take a Tom and Jerry myself." Some of them took for straight, some took it diluted with water. Nobody condescended to take beer. Our friend planked down a dollar. When the bar keeper ran up the register it showed 65 cents. Thus it is that a family man often denies himself for the benefit of "her and the children."—Lamar Democrat.

Newspaper Law

1. A post-master is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reason for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it from the post-office. This proceeds from the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

The magnitude of the poultry industry viewed from the standpoint of national finances is amazing. Poultry and eggs constitute a large and important part of the food supply of this continent. Indirectly the business represents an invested capital of millions of dollars and it is growing at the time. ## "Beyond the Alps."

A Kansas girl graduate who had been given the theme, "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy," promulgated the following: "I don't care a cent whether Italy lies beyond the Alps or in Missouri. I do not expect to set the river on fire with my future career. I am glad that I have a good education, but I am not going to misuse it by writing poetry or essays on the future woman. It will enable me to correct the grammar of any lover I may have should he speak of 'dorks' in my presence or 'seen a man.' It will also come handy when I want to figure out how many pounds of soap a woman can get for three dozen eggs at the grocery. So I do not begrudge the time I spent in acquiring it. But my ambitions do not fly so high. I just want to marry a man who can lick anybody of his weight in the township, who can run an eighty acre farm and who has no female relatives to come around and try to boss the ranch. I will agree to cook dinners for him that won't send him to an early grave and lavish upon him a whole-some affection and to see that his razor has not been used to cut broom wire when he wants to shave. In view of all this I do not care if I get a little rusty on the rule of three and kindred things as the years go by."—Topeka Capital.

Part of the Letter We Read.

"Did you ever think," said an old printer, "that we really notice only the upper halves of the letters? The lower halves are in many cases only the stems, the remainders of ornamental flourishes which have been gradually reduced in size and length and are now meaningless. Take, for instance, the heading of a paper. Cover up with a blank sheet the lower half of the letters, and even if you did not know what they were you would have no difficulty in reading the words. Now, reverse the process and cover the upper half, and if you did not know the words it would be impossible to make out the letters. This fact is even more plainly seen in the case of the Roman letters used for headlines. An L might be mistaken for an I, but nearly all the other letters are so plainly indicated by the shape of the upper half that the lines may be read without difficulty."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Dueling in Old Creole Days.

When dueling was an actual factor in the social order of this country, it had many worthy and notable exponents, including no less distinguished personages than Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson, Alexander Hamilton, De Witt Clinton, Stephen Decatur and others of the same type, but nowhere on this continent was it so much an established institution as in that peculiarly romantic old city of New Orleans. It was woven into the very fabric of the life of the community, and many a crumbling tombstone in the antiquated creole cemeteries bears grim and silent witness to the fact, though to understand the situation more clearly one should breathe, so to speak, the atmosphere of the period.—Louis J. Meader in Century.

A Fish Story.

The latest fish story concerns the herring and sea gull, and it comes from Nanaimo. A boat load of herring, containing about fifteen tons, was left at Johnston's wharf, Nanaimo, during the noon hour while the fishermen went to dinner. During their absence several thousand sea gulls—the chronicler says 10,000—ate all the fish on one side of the boat with such good results that they emptied it, and when the last herring had been removed from that side it was like the last straw that broke the camel's back, for the boat, with all the weight on the other side, upset, spilling all the remaining fish into the water.—Shanghai Mercury.

Devoured by Jackals.

Foreign papers tell a story of a woman at Phillipeville, in Algeria, who was seated by her baby's cradle on the veranda of her house when she was called by her husband. Returning to the veranda after an absence of a few minutes, she found the cradle knocked over and the baby gone. Next day native shepherds discovered in the undergrowth of a wood the bones of a young child and a string of amber beads, which were immediately recognized by the mother as having been on her child's neck. "There is no doubt that the infant was carried off and devoured by jackals," a correspondent adds.

What is an Orator?

The true orator is the man who can make people laugh, cry and feel what he says. In truth, the genuine orator is the man who has humor enough in his soul to bring the smile to the face, pathos enough in his heart to bring the tear to the eye and dignity enough in his bearing to persuade or move men. He is an exponent of the spoken word. He is a pilgrim moving toward the home of the ideal. He is the embodiment of earnestness, enthusiasm and eloquence.—Exchange.

The Appeal Is To You!

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN

For it Cares for Every Sick Child in Ontario whose Parents Cannot Afford to Pay for Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, College street, Toronto, appeals to fathers and mothers of Ontario for funds to maintain the thousand sick children that its walls every year.

The Hospital is not a local institution—but Provincial. The sick child from any place in Ontario who can't afford to pay has the same privileges as the child living in Toronto and is treated free.

The Hospital had last year in its beds and cots 854 patients—331 of these were from 231 places outside of Toronto. The cost

1.37 cts. per patient per day, and there were 198 sick little ones a day in the Hospital. Since its foundation the Hospital has treated 12,120 children. About 5,500 of these were unable to pay and were treated free.

Your money can put golden hinges on the door of the Hospital's mercy. Everybody's dollar may be the Friend in Need to Somebody's child.

Your dollar may be a door of hope to somebody's child. The Hospital pays out dividends of health and happiness to suffering childhood on every dollar that is paid by friends of little children.

If you know of any child in your neighborhood who is sick or crippled or has club feet send the parent's name to the Hospital.

See what can be done for club-foot children. There were 36 like cases last year and hundreds in 31 years.

PLEASE send contributions to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Sec.-Treas., of the Hospital for Sick Children, College Street, Toronto.

MRS. LOUISA CUMMINGS
Who died at Long Beach, California, on July 1st, 1907, and was buried at Campbellford, Ont., on July 13th.
Composed by Mrs. Wm. W. Rosebush, of Detroit, Mich.

Our sister, she has truly left us,
Her face we shall never see more;
She has passed on to a little better shore,
To that other bright happy shore.

We will not mourn, for death is not cruel,
It has only called her there to rest;
She's only gone a while before us,
And we shall meet her with the blest.

Pain has ceased; she has no sorrow;
Death released her from all care;
We shall soon be called to follow,
We'll prepare to meet her there.

Then dear friends, we must not mourn,
We must not sigh for her again,
For when life and toil is over
We are sure to meet again.

IN CONDOLENCE
Your mother has left you, dear children,
Her face you can see here no more;
While travelling this vain world of sorrow,
But you will meet her on that other bright shore.

She has not quite left you, dear children,
She has only just passed on before;
Her spirit still lingers to guide you,
And she bids you not weep any more.

In that bright happy home, over yonder,
She'll be waiting and watching each day,
And when your souls are here ended
You'll be with her forever to stay.

She there is free from all sorrow,
So let every tear dry away,
And if in her footsteps you follow
You'll meet her some glorious bright day.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Wednesday, August 7th, has been proclaimed a civic holiday in the village of Stirling, and all citizens are called upon to observe the same.

The new manse, just north of St. Andrew's Church, is being pushed rapidly forward. The foundation is now completed, and brick for the superstructure is being delivered.

Geo. E. Kennedy, B.A., and A. R. Girdwood, B.A., are two of the examiners of the papers of those who wrote at the recent High School examinations. They left for Toronto on Tuesday, and will be absent about three weeks.

Frank Ryan was arrested on Saturday evening for being drunk and disorderly, and placed in the coop, where he remained until Monday morning. He was brought before Mr. Bird, J. P., and fined $16 and $4 costs, $20 in all. The fine was paid.

A. R. Girdwood, B.A., son of our townsmen, V. R. Girdwood, has been appointed Principal of the High School at North Bay. He has been first assistant there for the past two or three years. We congratulate him on his promotion to the Principalship.

The lawn social under the auspices of the ladies of Trinity Church, Frankford, on Wednesday evening was a decided success. The weather was all that could be desired, and the attendance large. Quite a number from here drove down and spent a very pleasant time.

The Belleville Ontario of Friday last says: "A quiet wedding was solemnized in Christ church yesterday, when Rev. Mr. Blagrove united in marriage Mr. James Warren of Rawdon township, and Miss Edith H. Thompson, of Riga, Sask. The witnesses were Mr. S. Vandervoort and Miss Mollie Vandervoort."

There is talk of having a local option by-law submitted to the ratepayers of this village at the time of the ensuing municipal election in January next. A prominent citizen says that in his opinion such a by-law can be carried if the churches take hold of the matter in earnest. There is a likelihood that some action may be taken in the near future.

The Strawberry Festival held on the grounds of Mr. E. C. Snarr, seventh concession of Rawdon, on the evening of the 10th inst., was a great success in every way. The evening was fine and there was a large number of people present. The proceeds, which were in aid of the public school section, to help pay for improvements, amounted to about $180.

A flowing well is something unusual in this section of country, but one was struck by Mr. Geo. A. Johnson last week while digging for water on his premises. After getting down about thirteen feet a vein of water was struck which soon filled the well and flowed over the top. He had purchased a windmill which he intended erecting to pump water, but thinks he has no use for it now.

The Glorious Twelfth was celebrated by a large gathering at Frankford. Besides the lodges from the vicinity a large number came from the north by the C.O.R., and also lodges from Campbellford. The big attraction was the 48th Highlander's Band from Toronto, which furnished music. They had more rain in the afternoon than here, and for a time it came down in torrents. After parading the streets the crowd went to the Island, a short distance up the river, where games were played, the main interest being centred in a baseball match between Frankford and Belleville teams, in which the former were victorious, winning by a score of 7 to 4.

One of the provisions of the License Law is that any person knowing another to be a habitual drunkard, may have notices served on the hotelkeepers forbidding them to supply such an one with liquor; and any hotelkeeper or other person giving liquor to such a party is liable to a heavy penalty. We learn that there are several persons in the village and vicinity that the hotelkeepers have been given notice not to supply with liquor, yet in some way they manage to obtain it. One of these persons against whom the hotelkeepers have been so warned is Frank Ryan, who caused a disturbance on the streets on Saturday evening last, and was arrested and fined, as noted elsewhere. Now we do not believe the hotelkeepers sold him liquor, but they sold it to some person who gave it to him, and this person is liable to heavy penalty, and may yet have to answer for it in Court, as there is pretty good evidence as to who is the guilty party. There has been considerable of such work going on in the past, and it is time an example was made of some one, and a stop put to the practice. Any person knowing that liquor has been supplied in this way would do well to communicate with the Inspector, Mr. W. J. Allen, Madoc, who will then prosecute. The name of the person giving information will not be made public by the Inspector.

New hay has been sold on the Belleville market at $15 per ton.

In the list of promotions at the Stirling Public School published last week the name of Stanley Kincaid was omitted. He was promoted from Jr. II. to Sr. II.

At the Stirling Cheese Board on Tuesday 895 cheese were offered. All were sold to Mr. M. Bird at 10¢. The Board will meet next Tuesday at 4 o'clock.

The annual Lawn Social given by the ladies of the Presbyterian Church will be held on Mr. F. T. Ward's lawn the evening of Friday, July 26th. Good band music. See posters.

WANTED—Girl for general housework. Apply to Mrs. J. McC. Potts, Stirling.

The county road men have put a coating of broken stone on the road from the town hall eastward for a considerable distance. They have also put on a second coating of finer crushed stone from Mr. M. Bird's corner to the crossing at Mr. J. W. Haight's corner, and are now going farther west.

HELP WANTED.—Young ladies and men wanted. WESTON SHOE CO., Campbellford.

Died at Havelock

On Tuesday night last, at Havelock, the death occurred of Mrs. Fanning, wife of Mr. Wm. Fanning, of the 3rd concession of Rawdon. She was visiting her daughter at Havelock, and on Monday evening was stricken with apoplexy and never regained consciousness. Death taking place about midnight on Tuesday. Her remains were brought to her late home on Wednesday, and the funeral will take place to-morrow (Friday) leaving the house at 10 o'clock a.m. Service will be held in Bethel Church. Mrs. Fanning was in her 54th year, and leaves a sorrowing husband, a son and daughter, and a number of brother and sisters to mourn her loss.

Ho! for the 1000 Islands

The best trip of the year will be the excursion run by the Queen St. Methodist Church, Lindsay, to Thousand Island Park, N.Y., on Saturday, July 27th, to Monday, July 29th, via Belleville. G.T.R. special train will leave Stirling at 8.18 a.m. Fare $1.53, children half price. See large bills.

Charged with Poisoning Cattle

The Belleville Ontario of Monday says: Robert Cowen, a highly respected resident of the township of Bangor, was arrested last week on the charge of poisoning a milk cow and two steers, the property of his neighbor, Joseph Long, by spreading paris green in the pasture field where the cattle were roaming. From a remark he is said to have made at the cheese factory he was arrested on suspicion. He was brought before Magistrate Jarman at Bancroft, and committed to the county goal here, arriving in company with constable Charles Stanyer. The accused denies all knowledge of the offence, and says that he and Long have been on the best of terms always. Cowen is a married man with a family, and is 48 years of age. He has retained Mr. McMahon as counsel, and he came up for election before Judge Deroche to-day, when his trial was fixed for a week from to-day.

Fire at Maynooth

A part of the village of Maynooth was destroyed by fire at an early hour on Tuesday morning of last week. Eight buildings were burned, representing a loss of about $20,000. The village has practically no water supply, and as there was a strong north-west wind blowing it was impossible to check the progress of the flames. Wootton's store and Smith's hotel were reduced to ashes in an incredibly short space of time. Across the street Geo. Weaver's residence, in which the Metropolitan Bank had an office, was soon on fire, and also the house owned and occupied by Simon Rouse. Everything on the north side of the street as far east as Miss Annie George's residence, was cleaned out, and it was only by almost superhuman efforts that the Presbyterian church was saved. It was on fire three times. Father McInerney, who was the first to notice the fire, hitched up his team and drove with all speed to W. G. Gibson's railway camp, about a mile and a quarter away, and gave the alarm. About 200 Bulgarians were soon on the scene, and it was due to their efforts that the village was not wiped out of existence. Doyle's hotel had a close call and it got a slight scorching as it was. Mr. Wootton carried an insurance of $5,000 on his stock, but this will not nearly cover the loss. The contents of Smith's hotel were insured for $1,000. Mr. Weaver had $800 insurance, Miss George $300, and S. Rouse $500. Jas. Stoneburg is a heavy loser. He carried no insurance and lost everything.

The Blairton iron mines of Belmont will in all probability be re-opened in the near future. The mines are owned by Messrs. Pearce of Marmora, and cover about 25 acres.

The Havelock school board are building an addition to the school for a "continuation class" work, or work usually taken up in the first form of a High School, and have engaged Mr. McDougall as teacher. They have offered Miss Buchanan a salary of $400 as Principal of the public school, and the other lady teachers have been offered $240 each. The former principal was getting $700 for doing the same work for which they now offer Miss Buchanan $400.

Mr. Jas. McMullen, sr., is home from Pateboro, where he spent the winter.
On Sunday morning last at Sunday School Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Townsend were presented with an address and a handsome clock by the school. Mrs. Townsend (nee Miss Clara Garrison) has been long associated with many branches of Sabbath School work, and Mr. Townsend has also been a teacher.

Belleville is to have a new industry, a company being about to establish a brass foundry. They do not ask a bonus from the city, which is noted as something unusual.

The County House of Refuge was taken over by the House of Refuge Committee of the County Council on Saturday from Contractor Alford, and a special meeting of the county fathers will probably be held next week.

A despatch from Tweed says that Mr. Arthur Wallace, a respected and well-to-do farmer, died there on Sunday afternoon from the effects of injuries received in a runaway accident on his farm on Friday. He was working on the mower when his team got frightened and ran away, dragging him under the mower and mangle him terribly.

A couple of surveyors in the employ of the Dominion Government have been engaged in the vicinity of Tweed for the past few days locating the highest points in the district. It is the intention of the Government to build a series of towers on the highest points in the country for observation purposes similar to those of the United States coast survey.

The Ontario department of agriculture has sent out circulars to cheese makers instructing them in two or three ways how to use up all their milk without working on Sunday. The cheesemakers claimed that the new Lord's Day Act, in compelling them to quit work on Sunday would entail a great financial loss. The department claims they can both observe the Sabbath and avoid loss.

Mrs. Emma Stolt, of Appleton, Wisconsin.

"A Neighbor advised me to use Peruna. I began to improve at once."

MRS. EMMA STOLT.

Mrs. Emma Stolt, 1069 Oneida St., Appleton, Wis., writes:

"Peruna has done me a great deal of good since I began taking it and I am always glad to speak a good word for it."

"Three years ago I was in a wretched condition with backaches, bearing down pains, and at times was so sore and lame that I could not move about. I had inflammation and irritation, and although I used different remedies they did me no good."

"A neighbor who had been using Peruna advised me to try it, and I am glad that I did. I began to improve as soon as I took it and I felt much better."

"I thank you for your fine remedy. It is certainly a godsend to sick women."

CATARRH OF THE INTERNAL ORGANS.

Miss Theresa Bertles, White Church, Mo., writes: "I suffered with catarrh of the stomach, bowels and internal organs. Everything I ate seemed to hurt me. I never had a passage of the bowels without taking medicine. I was so tired, nervous, and ached all over. I had a pain in my left side, and the least exertion or excitement made me short of breath."

"Now, after taking Peruna for six months, I am as well as I ever was. Peruna has worked wonders for me. I believe Peruna is the best medicine in the world, and I recommend it to my friends."

MY REGULAR PATIENTS

A CHAT WITH A SURGEON ON A BIG OCEAN STEAMER.

The Doctor Meets With Some Very Strange People on a Sea Voyage.

I am rapidly coming to the belief, said a Transatlantic surgeon recently, that the queerest people in the world are those who go about sight-seeing, crossing the ocean twice a year, and "doing" the different countries for their own amusement, and very often, other people's annoyance. I have been a "ship's doctor" now for nearly twelve years, and during that time I have come across queerer patients on board than ever I have met on shore.

It is when they are out at sea and alone on the great waste of waters that nervous voyagers begin to fancy they are ill, and the number of fussy old and young and middle-aged ladies whose nerves I have to quieten during a single trip is often remarkable. Some of these women have been told by palmists and other charlatans that they are destined to lose their lives by drowning, and when the sea gets up a bit and the wind begins to blow they get so nervous that they make themselves ill.

A year ago I had a patient—a lady—who was so firmly convinced that she would never see land again that she had worked herself into a state absolutely dangerous to her health. I did all I could to calm her, gave her drugs, argued with her, and finally, when I began to see that all my efforts were unavailing,

I SENT THE CHAPLAIN TO HER.

He succeeded in accomplishing what I couldn't—talked her into a quieter state of mind and so saved her reason. I afterwards found that there was some cause for her agitation, for, years before, she and her husband had been wrecked in the Stella, and for twenty-four hours each thought the other lost. This was the first time the lady had ventured on the water since, and hence her terror.

As you probably know, doctors who practise on board Atlantic liners are paid by the company, and their services are at the free disposal of any passenger who may be in need of them. But any passenger suffering from a complaint which developed before coming on board is expected to pay for any medical treatment received, the fees being about the same as they would be on shore. Of course, in such cases, the passenger usually kicks on receiving his bill, and grumbles considerably about the "grasping" ways of the company.

Two trips ago, a young man—evidently wealthy, for he had a suite and a valet to wait on him—came on board with his arm in a sling. I learned that the member was still in splints, but that day following the valet informed me that the doctor had knocked at my master's visit. Of course I went, and after the young man had explained his trouble I dressed the arm and

MADE HIM COMFORTABLE.

I told him that it would be best for me to see it each day, as it was still far from healed, and he appeared to be grateful for my attention.

For eight days I attended him, and the day before we docked I sent him a bill for four guineas. He came to my office and expressed his amazement at my

"nervous" in making a charge for services which were free to all on the boat. I drew his attention to a little notice which is printed on the passenger's ticket, and after he had quieted down I talked to him pretty solemnly. At the close of my address I said that if he considered my services had brought him no relief, then I would not press the charge. I thought I knew my man, and so I did, for there and then he "unlimbered," and we parted very good friends.

Have I ever had patients die during a voyage? Well, just a few, and one or two as the results of sea-sickness, in spite of the assertion made by many that mal de mer is invariably an excellent thing for the constitution. As a rule I am not called in for a fit of sea-sickness, but during a trip East three years ago a lady entered my office and declared that her son was in so terrible a state from sea-sickness that she would be glad if I would come and have a look at him. I immediately went and found the young fellow—a delicate-looking lad of about twenty-lying in his berth, a deathly pallor on his cheek. As I entered, so severe a fit of sickness came upon him that I knew, unless it was stopped, he would end by breaking a blood-vessel. I hurried back to my surgery and returned in less than two minutes, but during the interval what I feared had taken place, and

HÆMORRHAGE HAD COMMENCED.

I did what I could, but the bleeding broke out again and again, and before the journey was half over the boy was dead. A similar case—this time a young lady—occurred on the very next voyage.

I had rather an amusing experience last year. An elderly gentleman, who was suffering all the horrors of mal de mer—which, however, in his case was without danger—sent to me, and when I made my appearance he begged and implored me to give him something that would stop the terrible sensation. I gave him various things supposed to reduce the nausea, but they evidently afforded him little relief. He groaned and swore and turned his face to the wall and prayed that the ship might go to the bottom, so that he could enjoy the sensation of being stationary, if only for a moment. Then, turning to me with a look of agony, he told me to fetch the chaplain and the lawyer along, explaining that the latter gentleman was required in order that he might change his will, as he was determined to leave every cent he possessed to be devoted to the search for a certain cure for sea-sickness.

Then, instead of doing as he requested, I sat down beside him and told him all the funny stories I could think of, and he told me about his courage, and finally persuaded him to eat a bunch of grapes. After that he seemed better, managed to conjure up a watery kind of smile at my witisms, and when I left him he began to take a rosier view of life. An hour later I met him on the deck and he confessed that he was beginning to feel as fit as possible. Moreover, he declared that his recovery was entirely due to my society. That this was not mere flattery was proved subsequently, when he presented me with a handsome cheque in payment for my unique "services."

SUMMER COMPLAINTS.

At the first sign of illness during the hot weather give the little ones Baby's Own Tablets, or in a few hours the trouble may be beyond cure. Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine in the world to prevent summer complaints if given occasionally to well children, and will promptly cure these troubles if they come unexpectedly. But the prudent mother will not wait until trouble comes—she will keep her children well through an occasional dose of this medicine. The Tablets ought, therefore to be kept in the house at all times. Mrs. Chas. Warren, Nevis, Sask., says: "My little boy was greatly troubled with his stomach and bowels, but a few doses of Baby's Own Tablets wrought a great change in him. I would not be without the Tablets in the house." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TO RESTORE HOLYROOD.

$40,000 Said to Have Been Guaranteed for the Purpose.

A sum of $40,000, or about $200,000, is said to have been guaranteed for the purpose of restoring the venerable pile of the Abbey Church of the Holy Rood, adjoining the Royal Palace of the same name, a little outside Edinburgh.

Holy Rood dates from the twelfth century. The exact year is uncertain, but 1128 is generally accepted as approximate.

According to the legend King David I., who was hunting in the neighboring forest, was attacked by a stag, which had been brought to bay by the hunting party. He was thrown to the ground by the furious animal and was in imminent danger of death.

Suddenly, says the Rosary Magazine, a cross arose from the ground between the form of the beast and the monarch; and the stag, frightened, fled. The cross remained on the spot. Its material substance was a mystery to those who examined it.

The occurrence was looked upon as miraculous. In gratitude to heaven the King ordered that a shrine should arise on the ground adjacent. He decreed that it be called the Church of the Holy Rood, and gave it in the care of the Canons Regular of St. Augustine.

What remains of the abbey is called the Chapel Royal. It is only a fragment of the old building, but is yet considerable. The portion formed the nave of the great abbey. Its walls are lofty, its windows tall, and its western door of generous proportions. The carving is rich, though not florid.

The tombs within the abbey walls include those of King David I., King James II. (of Scotland), King James V. and his Queen, Magdalen, Henry, Lord Darnley, and many other members of the Scottish nobility. The grave of Riccio is not within the abbey enclosure but in a leading passage leading to the quadrangle of the palace.

KAID WAS IN CANADA

—COMES OF A LONG LINE OF FIGHTING ANCESTORS.

Sultan of Morocco Gave Him 150 Wives for Valued Services to British Court.

Kaid Maclean, the captured commander of the Moroccan forces, for whose safety the British authorities have required an assurance from Morocco, was stationed with the 69th Regiment for some years in Canada. He has relatives near Kingston, in Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island.

Sir Harry Aubrey de Vere Maclean was born at Drimmin, Scotland, in 1848 and is a son of the late Gen. Andrew Maclean, a distinguished soldier. He comes of a long line of fighting ancestors. It is recorded in the history of the clan that, after the battle of Culloden, one of them, lying stricken upon the field, declined to inform the Duke of Cumberland as to the whereabouts of the ill-fated Bonnie Prince Charlie. The duke called upon a young officer to slay the wounded man, but this the officer, who afterwards became immortal as Wolfe, the hero of Quebec, refused to do.

WAS IN CANADA.

Sir Harry began his career in the army in 1869, when he obtained a commission as lieutenant in the 69th Regiment, which was sent to Canada shortly afterwards. The regiment shared in the defence of the frontier during the Fenian invasion of 1870, and he was decorated with a medal by Lord Strathcona in London a few years ago, while undergoing special treatment for wounds received in one of his innumerable skirmishes. Sir Harry's regiment was stationed for some years in Canada, and while he was in Quebec most of the time he was also posted for intervals at Toronto, Brantford and London.

WENT TO MOROCCO.

From Canada he was shifted to Gibraltar, where he had a staff appointment. The Sultan of Morocco was desirous of obtaining a British officer to drill his half savage army, and the position was offered Maclean. The prospect appealed strongly to his martial tastes and love of adventure, and he gladly accepted, resigning in 1876 to enter upon his duties of organizing the sultan's forces. He rapidly rose in favor by his daring, intrepidity and military genius, and became a prime favorite with the late sultan and inspired equal regard and confidence in his successor.

SCOTCH ALL THROUGH.

Maclean, whose headquarters have been at Fez, has maintained a band of 12 pipers, all Moors, in charge of a Scotch band, wearing the proud tartan of the Maclean clan. For some time Major Angus Ogilvy, of the 13th Hussars, was in command of his cavalry. Major Ogilvy was in Canada some years ago, and is known to a number of Canadian military men.

In 1893 Sir Henry visited England for the first time since he had severed his connection with the British army. He was on a special mission for the Sultan, who was anxious to obtain assurance of British support.

GIVEN A GUARD.

So apprehensive was the Oriental potentate that Maclean might be induced to remain at home, that he caused an escort of one hundred armed Moors to accompany him, with the injunction that unless the Englishman should return every man in the detachment would be beheaded. While away the guard never allowed Maclean out of their sight, and his chamber door and the window which he slumbered beneath was Sir Henry in his mission that on his return, the Sultan, as a particular mark of favor, insisted on presenting him with 150 wives.

Sir Henry was the victim of an unhappy marriage. He obtained a divorce from his Spanish wife several years ago, causing considerable of a sensation in London society. He has a son and several brothers in the army.

NEVER NO MORE.

Friend—"Now look here, Nye, when are you going to repay me that liver you borrowed from me last year? I've asked for the return of it eighty-seven times; but remember this, I shan't ask you for it again."

Nye (delightedly)—"What, you won't? You really won't? Well, that's what I call being a real, good pal, and no more. I wish there were more like you. Now, do you think you could possibly lend me a liver?"

With a howl of derision, the creditor replied, completely routed by the Nye artillery.

Doctor—"I don't think it is anything very serious, but you will have to stay in bed at least two weeks." Patient—"But, doctor, do you know that this is a very expensive hotel?" Doctor—"Yes; I am a friend of the proprietor."

Cholera morbus, cramps and kindred complaints annually make their appearance at the same time as the hot weather, green fruit, cucumbers, melons, etc., and many persons are deterred from eating these tempting things, but they need not abstain if they have Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial and take a few drops in water. It cures the cramps and cholera in a remarkable manner. It is sure to check every disturbance of the bowels.

"You have three pairs of glasses, professor?" "Yes; I use one to read with, one to see at a distance, and the third to find the other two."

Yes, indeed, "blood will tell," when blotches and eruptions mark the skin. Weaver's Corale and Weaver's Syrup make short work of all blood and skin troubles.

"My husband has promised to allow me to choose what I want for my birthday." "Oh, then there will be no surprise this year." "Yes, there will. He will be surprised enough when he gets the bill."

Always a Good Friend.—In health and happiness we need no friends, but when pain and prostration come we look for friendly aid from sympathetic hands. These hands can serve us no better than in rubbing in Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, for when the Oil is in the pain is out. It has brought relief to thousands who without it would be indeed friendless.

Friend—"Didn't your husband rave when you showed him the dressmaker's bill?" Wife—"Rather." Friend—"And how did you quiet him?" Wife—"I showed him the milliner's next, and then he became absolutely speechless."

Pale, sickly children should use Mether Graves' Worm Exterminator. Worms are one of the principal causes of suffering in children and should be expelled from the system.

"You young scamp!" roared the old broker, rushing in unexpectedly. "I thought you told me you didn't smoke cigarettes, read 'Deadwood Dick,' or whistle while you worked." "Well!" yawned the office boy, laconically. "And here I come in and catch you doing all three." "Yes; but you don't catch me working."

ITCH. Mange, Prairie Scratches and every form of contagious Itch in human or animals cured in 30 minutes by Wolford's Sanitary Lotion. It never fails. Sold by all druggists.

Heiress—"Which would you rather lose, Jack—or my money?" He—"You sweetheart!" Heiress—"Oh Jack!" He—"I would, because, don't you see, dearest, even if I lost you, I would still have your money to offer large rewards for your recovery, and get you back again." Heiress—"Dear Jack!"

A Tonic for the Debilitated.—Parniee's Vegetable Pills by acting mildly, but thoroughly, on the secretions of the body are a valuable tonic, stimulating the lagging organs to healthful action and restoring them to full vigor. They can be taken in graduated doses and so used that they can be discontinued at any time without return of the ailments which they were used to allay.

One method of dodging popularity is to give your neighbors advice.

SENTENCE SERMONS.
There is no loyalty without love. To defer a right determination is to make a wrong one.
The acid of envy eats out all happiness from the heart.
You cannot get high moral tone out of loose muscular wires.
If you do not know how to let up you do not know how to live.
You can do little for humanity without the saving salt of humor.

PERSONAL.
Diggs—"What salary do you get?" Wiggs—"One hundred and fifty per cent." Diggs—"Per week, per month, or perhaps?"

To Prevent is Better than to Repent. A little medicine in the shape of the wonderful pellets which are known as Parniee's Vegetable Pills, administered at the proper time and with the directions adhered to often prevent a serious attack of sickness and save money which would go to the doctor. In all irregularities of the digestive organs they are an invaluable corrective, and by cleansing the blood they clear the skin of imperfections.

Stranger: "You are the only gentleman in the room." Guest: "In what way, sir?" Stranger: "When I slipped in the dance, and went sprawling on the floor, tearing my fair partner's dress, you were the only one in the room who did not laugh." Guest: "The lady is my wife, and I paid for the dress!"

If You are Nervous and Irritable, take "Ferrovin," the great nerve and blood tonic; you will be a new person by the time you have used a bottle. $1.00 bottles. All dealers.

DARE HE?

OR, A SAD LIFE STORY

CHAPTER XXXV.

Jim's first care on returning to his hotel is to ascertain that the departure for Hammam Rihra has really taken place, and, having been reassured on this point, retreats to his own bedroom to re-examine the terrace, upon which it gives. The sun has long drunk up the rain from the tiles, and the chairs have been set out again. The hotel guests, in all the sociability of their after-lunch mood, are standing and sitting about. The widow Wadman, with great play of eyebrow and lip, is pacing up and down in rich conversation with her habitual victim. Snatches of her alluring talk reach Jim behind his curtain as she comes and goes.

"I think that caged birds ought to be loved!" The prophet was a wise man, was not he? he knew a little about us," etc.

In her usual place, aloof from the rest of the company, Elizabeth is sitting in a clinging white gown of some sweetly stuff. With a dainty white kerchief twisted about her head, and a bundle of many-tinted Eastern stuffs on her knees, she looks like a little Romney. Now and again, as fragments of the widow's siren strains reach her ears, she sees her lips curl up into delighted laughter; but, for the most part, she seems to be looking round rather uneasily, as if seeking something or someone. Can it be himself that she, in her innocence of being observed, is on the watch for? He has no right to be playing the spy on her in any case. It is clear, that, dressed as she is, she cannot be meditating going out. He must not frighten her by any too direct or sudden attentions. In a little while the other occupants of the terrace will drift away, and he will stroll out and join her, and together they will watch the shade of the ficus-tree lengthening over the red flags. But she presently baffles his calculations by rising, and, with her rainbow-tinted pile of brocades clasped in her slender arms, slowly passes into the house. Has she retreated thither for good? and will he have to frame some new flimsy excuse for knocking at her door? But again he is out of his reckoning, for in about a quarter of an hour she re-issues, dressed for walking; and after one more lingering, and, as it seems to him, disappointed glance around her, paces, a solitary little figure, down the hill. He lays his watch before him, and, having counted five minutes on its dial-plate, sets off in pursuit. He overtakes her just as she reaches the point where the lane debouches into the highroad. She stands, looking rather disconsolately, first up the hill, then down it, evidently uncertain which direction to choose.

"You cannot make up your mind?" she says, pausing beside her, and taking off her hat.

"She gives a slight start, and a friendly, pleased smile runs all over her face and up into her eyes—a smile that makes him say to himself confidently that it was he whom her glance had been seeking on the terrace.

"Which do you advise?"

"I advise the town."

He has long known her teachableness, so it is no great surprise to him that she at once turns in the direction counselled.

"As I am going here myself, will you allow me to walk a little way with you?"

He makes the request with respectful audacity; and, after one small troubled look, evidently given to the memory of her father, assents.

They set off down the hill together, the air, sharp after the rain—as sharp, at least, as Algiers' stingless air ever is—bringing the color to Elizabeth's cheeks, as she steps along light-heartedly, scarcely refraining from breaking into a run down the steep incline. Her spirits are so evidently rising at every yard that she hazards his next step.

"I am going to see the Arab town; Miss Strut says that I ought."

"She means you to ask her to show it to you," cries Elizabeth, with a laugh; "but she was quite right—it is delightful; I am sure you will like it."

"You have been there?"

"Yes, once or twice; not half so often"—regretfully—"as I should like to have been."

Dare he speak upon the last innocent hint? But while he is doubting she goes on:

"You must take care not to lose yourself; it is such a puzzling place; all the streets are exactly like each other."

"You do not feel inclined to show me the way about it?"

He throws out the suggestion in a semi-bantering voice so that if it meets with obvious disapproval he may at once withdraw it. She stops suddenly, stock still, and faces him.

"Are you speaking seriously?" It would be very delightful; but do you think I might? Do you think I ought?"

She lifts her eyes, widely opened, like a child's at hearing of some unexpected treat, to his. How astonishingly clear they are! and how curiously guileless! He has not the least doubt that she will sweetly acquiesce in his decision, which ever way it tends; and, for a second, a movement of irritation with her for her pliability crosses his mind. She ought to be able to have an opinion of her own. While he hesitates, she speaks again.

"It is just the afternoon to do something pleasant on," she says wistfully, and yet gaily too. "Oh, how good the air tastes! and how dearly I love the sun!"—lifting her face with sensitive lips, half open, as if to suck in the beams, to the great gold luminous pouring down his warmth through the pepper-trees upon them. "But I will take your advice; I know of old"—with a pretty flattering smile—"that you always give good advice; and you think that I ought—do you really think that I ought?"

He throws conscience to the winds, and although not two hours ago he had professed to Cecilia his inability to do deed upon the propriety or impropriety of any given course of female action, now answers with an almost brutal decisiveness:

"I do not think that there is the smallest doubt about it."

A relieved look crosses her features.

"Then I am sure it is all right," she says, with a joyful surrender of her judgment into his keeping; and so, once again, steps along with her quick feather-light feet at his side.

For the moment she is the happier of the two, since he is not perfectly pleased either with himself or her. It is in vain that he tells himself that it is no babe whom he is beguiling; that, difficult as it is to believe it, those limpid eyes have looked at the sun for seven-and-twenty years. He still has a lingering sense of discomfort at having availed himself for his own purpose, of her docility. And yet, five minutes later, he takes yet further advantage of that quality in her. They have reached the Plateau Souliere, and the stand of fancies that "stationment" there. Jim pauses.

"It is a good distance to the Arab town, I fancy, and very tiring walking when you get there."

"It is as steep as the side of a house; we shall be like flies on a wall," cries she delightedly.

"It would be a pity to be too tired to enjoy it before you got there, would not it?" says he doubtfully, and eyeing her bright slenderness with an air of uncertainty as to her powers of endurance.

"Had not we better—would you mind—our driving there?"

"I am not at all tired," replies she; "I do not feel as if I ever should be tired to-day; but if you think it better—"

Still he looks at her dubiously. To him there appears to be a much greater degree of the compromising in a tele-a-tele drive than in a walk. In the one case the meeting may have been accidental; in the other there can be no mistake as to the deliberate intention. But either this does not strike Elizabeth, or she thinks, "In for a penny, in for a pound;" or, lastly and most probably, having given up her judgment into his keeping, she finds it easier and most natural to acquiesce in whatever he may propose.

The ungenerous thought flashes across him that if this is the principle on which she has guided her life, it is small wonder if she have made shipwreck of it. He halts a fraction, and silently hands her in, and again they are off.

Elizabeth has disclaimed fatigue, and yet the restful position is evidently agreeable to her delicate body; and she thanks him so gratefully for his thought of her that his hard thoughts of her dissolve into remorse, and by-and-by change into an enjoyment almost as entire and uncalculating as her own.

Elizabeth has astonishing powers of enjoying herself. If he had not known that fact before, the afternoon would have revealed it to him.

She must have driven through the French town almost every day since her arrival, and yet its cheerful white-shut-tiled houses, its boulevards of glossy-leaved ficus-trees, its cafes, its crowded streets with their polyglot promenaders, seem to fill her with as lively a pleasure as if she had but just landed from the steamboat that brought her.

The three Spahis, eternally sitting in a row on a bench outside some general officer's quarters, robed in their great red cloaks, with muscled swart heads and long red-leather boots, dimly descried beneath the stately sweep of their mantles, sitting there motionless, solemn and silent as the statues; a venerable Arab, only to be distinguished from Abraham or Isaac by his carrying a vulgar brown umbrella; a short Kabyle seen in back view, with his rope-headed dress, his brown-and-white striped frock, and his bare red legs, striding along, looking exactly like a ludicrous and indecent old woman; a Biskrah water-carrier, posing a great burnished copper pot on his shoulder; two little baggy-troused white ladies waddling along; a dozen of smart blue Turcos. She is enraptured with them all.

They leave their place in the Place de la Cathedrale, and enter upon the mysterious recesses of the Arab town. Up and down endless flights of steps, up street after street—if streets they can be called, that are not wider than a yard in their widest part—and above their heads the rafter-supported houses lean together, letting scarce a glint of daylight drop down upon the dusky path far below.

They pass arched doorways, with pretty designs in plaster—doorways whose doors open inwards upon mysterious interiors—house or court, or mosque or Marabout. All along stand tiny shops, like wild-bee dens, as far as light and open air go, only its tempered light—in reality, only semi-darkness—that enters in front. How can they see to work—plait straw, for instance? as these ebony-black negroes are doing, upon whom they stare in respect upon the ground. The turban, and the red sashes, and the burrows glimmer out of the little dim frontages, whose charming pierced-brass Moorish lamps hang and swing aloft; and tempting piles of dully splendid brocades and bright gold-luminated gauzes gleam from the crowded shelves.

The narrow streetlets are full of un-busy, un-hurrying Easterns, hideous old negroes grinning like monkeys, idle Arabs sauntering along in their lazy grace, draped like Greek statues, sauntering along between the blue-washed walls, that look in their effective variation upon the blinding whiteness as if some of the sky-color had rubbed off upon them.

Jim and Elizabeth have paused, in their leisurely strolling and staring, to look from the straight shadowed alley in which they are standing up a long flight of steps to a low carved doorway, and a bit of starch-blue wall at the top. Down the steep flight a veiled, trousered woman is waddling, her immense pantaloons waddling awkwardly as she descends.

Elizabeth stands still, shaking with laughter at the sight. Jim laughs too.

"There is no expense spared in material there, is there? It would not be a bad dress for a fancy ball. Did you ever go to a fancy ball as a Moorish lady?"

Her laughter lessens, though her face is still alight with mirth.

"I never was at a fancy ball."

"Never?"

"Never; I never was at a ball in my life."

Her laughter is quite dead now.

"Never at any ball in your life!" repeats he, his surprise betraying him into one of those flights back into the past for which she has always showed such repugnance.

"Why, you used to love dancing madly! I remember your dancing like a dervish. What is more, I remember dancing with you."

"Oh, do not remember anything to-day!" cries she, with a sort of written in her voice; "do not let either of us remember anything! Let us have a whole holiday from remembering!"

So, with the dance gone out of their feet, it never quite comes back. They look into an Arab club, where men are squatting, playing with odd-looking cards and drinking muddy coffee. Then a loud noise of jabbering young voices makes them peep in upon an Arab school, where a circle of little Moslems is sitting on the ground, scribbling Arabic on slates; while between the knees of the turbaned master a tiny baby scholar, of three or four, is standing in a lovely dull green coat. Elizabeth strokes the baby-learner's copper cheek with her light hand, and says with a laugh, that it seems odd to see little street boys writing Arabic; but her laughter is no longer the bubbling, irrepressible joy-drunk thing it was before he had indulged in his tactless reminiscences; it is the well-bred, civil, grown-up sound that so often has no inside gladness to match it. In his vexation with himself for the clouding over of his little heaven that he himself has effected, he tries to persuade himself that it is caused by bodily fatigue.

"If I were asked," he says, by-and-by, looking down affectionately at her pallid profile, "I should say that you had about enough of this; your spirit!"—smiling—"is so very much too big for your body that one has to keep an eye upon you."

"It would not be much of a spirit if it were not," replies she, with a pretty air of perfectly sincere disparagement of her own slight proportions; "I know that I look a poor thing, but I am rather a fraud; I do not tire easily; I am not tired now."

"Bored, then?" with a slight accent of pique.

She lifts her sweet look, with a sort of hurry of denial in it.

"Most distinctly not."

"You would like to go on, then?"

"Yes."

"Or back?"

She hesitates, her eyes exploring his with, as he feels, a genuine anxiety in it to discover what his own wishes are, so that her decision may jump with them.

"Yes—perhaps; I have really no choice."

She both looks at her and speaks to her with a streak of exasperation.

"Do you never have a will—a preference of your own?"

It is evidently no unfamiliar thing to her to be addressed with causeless irritability. The recollection of her father's tone in speaking to her flashes back remorsefully upon Jim's memory. Is he himself going to take a leaf out of that book? It would be a relief to him were she to answer him sharply; but to do that is apparently not within her capabilities, though the tender red that tinges her cheek shows that she has felt his snub.

"In this case I really have not," she answers gently; "but I dare say that it was tiresome of me not to speak more decidedly."

"Let us—let us—let us—another swift and apparently quite involuntary glance at him to see that she is not, after all, running counter to his inclinations—"let us go home!"

So they go home. It is near sunset as they drive along the Boulevard de la Republique, the lifting end to so primly a day. At the quay the moored vessels lie, their masts and spars making a dark design against an ineffable evening sky of mother-of-pearl and translucent pink. The sea, which to-day has not been of sapphire, but of "watchet-blue," pierced and shot with white, now copies exactly the heavens. It, too, shades from opal to translucent pink. How many changes of rainbow there are in the wardrobe of the great wet mother!

ASLEEP FOR A YEAR.

In the French hamlet of Recoules, not far from Rodez, there is a girl of fifteen who has lain in an unbroken sleep from June of last year. She is the daughter of a farmer, the eldest of four children, who all enjoyed good health until the spring of 1906, when the eldest developed stomach troubles which necessitated her being kept in bed, and she took less and less nourishment, until on June 1 she fell into a sleep from which she has never awoken. Her case has been studied by seven doctors.

"It doesn't, necessarily follow that a man is any good just because he's as good as his word."

It was just such a day when Betty made the acquaintance of her Other Self. Many and many a time she had climbed the narrow stairs to the attic. So often had she rummaged through the old trunks and furniture that she could have named everything there. That is, almost everything, for one of the windows there was a great chest, inside of which she had never peeped. The big, rusty lock seemed to mock her whenever she tugged at it—sometimes so strongly that she felt sure it must give way.

One day she went on with her search. Soon she came upon an old leather-covered diary. Opening it, she started on finding her own name on the flyleaf.

Betty's heart beat quickly as she sat down in her grandfather's armchair and began to read the curious old diary. Reading from the very beginning, she saw this entry:

"May 1, 1796—Aunt Priscilla says it is wicked for me to keep anything secret. I must tell Uncle Richard everything. I am sure he will be glad to hear of it. I must write them down. Last time, when I was dreaming in church, I thought that the minister and the people grew wings and flew away. It was splendid, and I didn't go along with them. But when I wrote about the dream in my other diary, Aunt Priscilla said it was nonsense and not to do it for a rainy day, and that it was wicked."

ON THE FARM.

UP-TO-DATE DAIRYING.

Clean Milkers and Clean Milking.—The stable should be provided with brushes readily attached to the milking stools or accompanying them. The milkers should be encouraged to use these brushes before milking and if such milkers are naturally cleanly, they should also be encouraged to dampen the udders before beginning to milk.

If the milkers are not naturally orderly, systematic and cleanly, discharge them and either get clean milkers or quit the business. It is impossible to make a filthy man clean by any set of rules or by any amount of possible supervision. Though they should brush a foot in a morning, what with a pebble, yet will not his foolishness depart from him."

The milk is received in pails washed in this way. They are first rinsed off in tepid water; then wash in water too hot for the hand and containing some cleansing powder or sal soda, the washing being done by brushes rather than cloths. They are then rinsed with boiling water and steamed if possible, otherwise taken from the rinsing water, the loose drops shaken off and allowed to dry without wiping.

The milk is strained through two or three thicknesses of cheese cloth which pieces are washed and scalded or boiled between successive hours of milking.

After straining, the milk is either aerated, cooled and sent to the factory or it is run through the separator.

Use of Hand Separator.—The hand separator bids fair to revolutionize the dairy industry. By the use of this labor and butter saver, the farmer can take practically all of the fat from the milk and can do it at the time of milking while the milk is warm. The skim-milk is then ready for the calves or pigs.

Who then will buy a separator? He that has four or more cows and wants to make all the butter possible from them at the least cost.

Why shall he buy? Because the amount of fat a separator saves over the cold deep setting will not only pay the interest on the first cost of the machine but will actually pay for the machine in a few years, if the number of cows is large enough to warrant. Because, too, the skim-milk is not taken into the house at all, but is fed warm to the young stock.

Again, if the cream is delivered to a creamery to be made into butter, the milk does not have to be hauled to the factory and back again. It is kept separate, uncontaminated with skimmilk from other courses and is fed before souring.

An examination of the records of pigs officially condemned as tubercular at the Chicago stock yards shows that the great bulk of tuberculous pigs come from the dairy districts and undoubtedly got the disease from drinking unpasteurized skimmilk returned from the factory. By separating the milk at home the cow owner avoids this source of infection for his young stock.

What Sort of Separator Shall Cow Owners Buy?—The one that will skim the largest amount of milk the cleanest in a given time with the least force to run it. Separators vary widely in capacity. Some of the hand machines can separate only 250 pounds an hour, while others will run through eight or ten hundred pounds. Other things being equal the larger machines are the more economical.

Separating milk is a slow job at best. It takes from one to two hours a day and this multiplied by the number of days in the year grows to a very perceptible share of the working time of the season.

Again it takes no longer to wash and care for a large machine than a small one. Finally no one should intend to remain a dairymaid with two or three cows. His ambition ought to be to increase the size of his herd until he is curing all the cows his farm can support. The larger machine will not have to be exchanged when the number of cows increases. The separator should have capacity, skim clean, be durable, simple in construction, easily cleaned and easy of separation.

Separators' Location is Important.—The care of the separator is not a hard problem if the location is right, the foundation good and the essentials in the way of accessories are convenient.

One thing required is pure air. A cow stable will do, because the air cannot be kept pure. Although it is handy to have the separator right there so you can pour the milk from the pail into which it is drawn, through a strainer at the top of the separator can, still such a practice is rightly forbidden in the stable itself. The separator must be placed where the air is always pure.

The room where the separator is must be free from dust, hence the woodshed is forbidden unless a part of it be partitioned off and well floored so that it can be kept clean and sweet.

The floor of the separator room has better be made of concrete since milk is bound to be spilled over at some time and must be washed up with abundance of water. This demands a tight, sound floor and good drainage. A cement floor is slippery and cold, but it can be kept much sweeter than a wooden floor.

The room must be arranged to exclude flies. The separator must be kept spotlessly clean, and this cannot be done in a room to which flies are admitted. Screens to windows and doors are necessary, with an occasional use of insect powder to kill off such flies as steal in with the milkers.

The room ought to be where it can be kept cool and yet where the sunlight can have free range to kill the bacteria. It is not to be understood that the separator is to be set off into a world of its own where nothing but pure milk enters and only angels can attend it. It is quite possible to build a room as an integral part of the barn itself, or as part of the house, where all the requirements are fully met. Pure air, kept pure, free from dust and fairly cool with sunlight, are the essentials.

Why Betty Forgot to be Lonely

N O, BETTY didn't mind being called "old-fashioned." Of course, she was "old-fashioned." Aunt Jane told her so every day, so it must be true, although Aunt Jane did say people were "odd" mostly when they didn't do things her way. You know they say you're "old-fashioned" when you see things that other people can't see, when you dream such beautiful dreams, and when you play nice games with what Aunt Jane would call the people of your imagination—though to you they're real girls and boys, just the same.

Oh, it's nice to be "old-fashioned," especially when you live in a big farmhouse, with the nearest neighbor a mile away. It keeps you from growing lonely.

But, in spite of all your imagination, sometimes you get a wee bit lonesome. At least Betty did, until she found her Other Self. Let me tell you how this came about.

Betty liked rainy days. Sounds funny, doesn't it? Not that she didn't enjoy being out-of-doors, but next to swaying in the branches of her favorite tree in the orchard, she liked to be up in the big, roomy attic, listening to the rain-drops pattering on the roof. Somehow it made her feel sort of sad—and you know a nice to feel that way sometimes.

Tisn't that you're altogether sad, for your heart that makes you feel almost happy and yet a little bit afraid, as though some strange person you would like to meet were near, yet you were afraid to meet her.

ANOTHER BETTY

Alien Convicts to be Deported

Something unique in the history of prisons in Canada is about to take place in connection with the Kingston penitentiary. It is the deportation of foreigners whence they came. A beginning is to be made in a few days with a prisoner named Harrison, who hails from the United States. This order has come from the Ottawa Justice Department, and is the application of the new law regarding undesirable immigrants. He has served only a portion of his term and must now return to his native land. The landing place for him is to be Detroit, where he will be handed over to the American authorities. Another prisoner will be deported shortly from the prison in a similar position. They are being looked over and listed by the local authorities, and it is likely that the taxpayers of Canada will be greatly relieved by the new policy, for the law applies to jails and all other prisons as well as to penitentiaries.

Prospectors state that the district between Larder Lake and Abitibi is all a gold country. The distance between the two points is about twenty-four miles. Gold has been found in both places.

Hon. H. S. Blake, on laying the cornerstone of a new Anglican church in Toronto, said: "We hear people talk about keeping the Sabbath rationally, while in reality they are kicking both feet through it, and are not keeping it at all. Pay no heed to those who only understand carnal things, and yet who would give a 'rational' interpretation of the Scripture. We know not any part of the Bible that is not inspired. It is God's word, and so simple that any one can understand it."

Constipation

Bad sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, coarse all-weather bread will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man, and this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The bark of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to the very firm Bark, Solid Extract of Prunes, etc., this same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct Constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Laxative, is now made at the most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Bowel Complaint, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No grilling, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Laxative is put up in beautiful lithographed metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

Susy's Opinion of Her Father.

Before Susy began the biography she felt full a remark now and then concerning her character which showed that she had it under observation. In the record which we kept of the children's sayings there is an instance of this. She was twelve years old at the time. We had established a rule that each member of the family must bring a fact to breakfast—a fact drawn from a book or from any other source; any fact would answer. Susy's first contribution was in substance as follows: Two great exiles and former opponents in war met, in Ephesus, Scipio and Hannibal. Scipio asked Hannibal to name the greatest general the world had produced. "Alexander," he explained why. "And the next greatest?" "Pyrrhus," and he explained why. "But where do you place yourself, then?"

"If I had conquered you, I would place myself before the others." Susy's grave comment was: "That attracted me. It was just like papa, he is so frank about his books."

So frank in admiring them, she meant.—From "Mark Twain's Autobiography" in North American Review.

Impossible.

A year or so ago an American student in Berlin was attending a lecture in a room drowsily close through lack of ventilation. To keep awake he began whispering to a German at his side the story of Mark Twain about the man who lived all his life in a chronic fear of fresh air. The relatives of this man, as is well known, decided after his death to have his remains cremated, and the climax of the story occurs when the undertaker, opening the door of the oven to see whether incineration was complete, was appalled to hear the corpse speak out and request him to close the door and shut off the draft. The American sprung the joke as effectively as he could, but never a smile was his reward. His German friend remained for several moments in a perplexed study; then he leaned over to the American and said: "But how could that be? The man was dead!"—Harper's Weekly.

Power of Falling Water.

It is perfectly well known to every one that water constantly dropping upon a stone will wear it away, and there is a trite old proverb regarding this fact. The force of a single drop of water falling from a height is not great, but the results of this tiny blow when it is many times repeated are astounding. There is a story of one poor wretch who was bound with his back to a stone wall and had a stream of water "of the bligness of a man's finger" directed on to his bare head, the water falling from a height of about eighteen feet. The receptacle from which this apparently harmless stream trickled was a barrel holding only twenty gallons, but before the water had more than half run out the man was dead, with a hole in his skull which exposed the brain.—Popular Mechanics.

All She Had.

In the absence of his wife and the illness of the servant Mr. Taylor undertook to help three-year-old Marjory to dress. He had succeeded in getting her arms in the sleeves and through the armholes of her gowns and had buttoned her into them. Then he told her to put on her shoes herself, and he would button them. He soon discovered that she was vainly striving to put a left shoe on her right foot. "Why, Marjory," he said impatiently, "don't you know any better than that? You are putting your shoes on the wrong feet."

"Dey's all de foots I dot, papa," replied Marjory tearfully.—Youth's Companion.

Spider Talk.

(In the kindergarten during a natural history lesson.) Teacher—So you see one of the differences between us and animals is that we can talk. Little Boy of three—Spiders can talk. Teacher—No, dear; spiders are very clever little insects, but they can't talk. Little Boy—Well, then, how did the spider say, "Will you come into my parlor?"

Disappointed Hopes.

"You can't rake up anything against that candidate." "Well, I happen to know he is in love with a married woman." "Do you? Oh, who is she?" "His wife."—Baltimore American.

Not to Be Fooled.

A resident of a New England town who was noted for his great kindness to animals viewed the first horse car with dismay. "It's sheer cruelty, that's what it is," he insisted, and the plenitude of convenience or necessity had no influence upon him.

"I'd walk to Boston and back before I'd add a pound's weight to what those poor creatures have to drag," he declared, and no persuasion could induce him to ride in a street car dragged by overworked, tired horses. When electricity was applied and the cars went smoothly along without the horses, his son said:

"Now, father, you can ride on the street cars without worrying about horses. You can go into Boston at your ease now."

"James," said the old man, "you always rush at conclusions. You don't study into things as I do. Don't I read in the papers about every car having to have so much horsepower? And don't I know well enough what that means?" And the old gentleman sighed. "It simply means, my son, that the poor horses are being worked just as hard and just as many hours, only we don't see 'em."

"Those power houses could tell tales, I reckon. No, I've no more use for street cars now than I ever had, and for the same reason."—Youth's Companion.

Barber's Hair Cut.

"Wished I had time to go out and get my hair cut," remarked a barber as he removed part of the latter from the customer's lips with his second finger. "Time to go out and get it cut?" repeated the man in the chair, with the emphasis on "out." "Are you like the man that won't eat in his own restaurant? Aren't you willing to trust one of your own men to cut your hair?"

"Oh, I'd trust them, all right!" said the barber. "It isn't that, but you hardly ever see a barber getting his hair cut in his own place. The other barbers all like to go home promptly at quitting time, and if one of us gets work done during the day there is sure to be a rush about that time, and it makes a customer 'sore' if he has to wait with two barbers right here and not waiting on him. He doesn't like to wait around while one barber cuts another barber's hair."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Impression.

Uncle Rufus Rank—Uh, well, sah, tell yo' what's a fact, thank—e I 'loved 'twuz muh wife! Yo' see, I was uh-gittin' home dess a little bit antiquated fum de lodge o' de Cullud Knights and Shivyileers, and muh nach'l s'p'cion was dat de lady had got tired o' waitin' and come to meet me. If I'd organized dat 'twuz a catamount dat had me by de back, I reggin I'd uh-be'n skeered plumb to death; but, thinkin' to muhself dat 'twuz nobody but muh wife, I dess breshed de varmint aside, acawadin' to muh custom, and come uh-bogin' along home, happy in muh ignance.—Puck.

The Gloved Gambler.

An American who visited Monte Carlo was telling of an incident there. "In one of the gold rooms," he said, "a gentleman in lavender gloves was playing in wonderful luck, winning nearly every stake. As a great stack of plaques—you know those beautiful, big gold pieces called plaques—was pushed to him in the croupier I heard a young lady whisper in his ear:

"It is very odd, monsieur, to wear gloves at play. What do you do it for? Luck?"

"The fortunate player smiled grimly. "Not at all," he replied. "I promised my wife on her deathbed never again to touch a card."

Traveling Sand Hills.

On the coast of Pomerania there are large tracts of sand heaped up by the wind, hundreds of yards in breadth and from 60 to 120 feet high, and these hills, propelled by the wind, move steadily in an easterly direction. The speed at which these great hills travel is from thirty-nine to fifty-six feet a year. Pine woods, which sometimes come in their line of march, cannot stop them and are completely destroyed. The branches are rotted off by the sand, and nothing is left of the trees but the bare stems, which after a few years wither and die.

A Crowd Is Not Company.

But little do men perceive what solitude is and how far it extendeth, for a crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal where there is no love.—Bacon's Essay on "Friendship."

A Good Point.

Prospective Purchaser—I like the looks of this automobile, but suppose I should run over some one and—Salesman—The springs are so easy, sir, you'd scarcely be jarred at all.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Playing Railroad.

Irate Parent—Here! What is all this racket? Bobby—Please, papa, we are playing a train of cars, and I am the locomotive, irate Parent—You are the locomotive, eh? Well, I think I'll just switch you.

Well Acquainted.

Magistrate—Stay! I cannot allow you to address the bench in this familiar manner. Prisoner—Beg your honor's pardon, but you and me has met so often we seems like old friends.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy.—Ruskin.

The Force of Habit.

"Do I snore?" "I should say so. That's why I can't use an alarm clock. I can't hear 'em. My snore drowns the best of 'em. And, speaking of the force of habit—I put up once at a crowded hotel where I had to double up with an acquaintance. I told him I snored a few, but he didn't mind, he said, because his wife was a star in that line, and he had a 'system' to beat it."

"I'll just tap you on the shoulder every time you begin to snore," he explained. "That'll stop you without waking you, and after a little I'll drop off myself."

"It worked like a charm; I felt his taps for a time, but finally off I went on a dream of $10,000 salary and 10 per cent commission. Well, sir, when I awoke in the morning there was that chap tapping away at my shoulder regular as clockwork, and he sound asleep. Been at it all night, don't you see? Force of habit."

And he beamed indulgently on the silent party.—New York Globe.

The Bachelor Maid's Keys.

"Do I enjoy the freedom of a latch-key?" exclaimed the bachelor maid bitterly. "Look at that bunch—holding aloft a ring full of keys. 'Fifteen, and I have to carry all of them all the time. This one is the key to the studio building, this to my own studio, this to my club, this to my lamp at the club, this to my desk, this to the secret drawer of the desk, this to a trunk, this to another, this to my letter box, this to my sewing machine—oh, yes, the woman who comes to clean my studio would do her annual sewing there if I didn't—this to the piano—to keep the woman from using it, of course—this—positively I forget what it is for, but I know I need it often. I'm simply worn out fugging around a wrist bag big enough to hold them all. I assure you, my dear, that if you ever hear I have committed matrimony you may tell all my friends I needed a man to carry my keys for me."—New York Sun.

Greater Than the Nation.

There is a certain congressman who, whatever authority he may hold in the councils of state, is of comparatively minor importance in his own household. Indeed, it has been unkindly intimated that his wife is "the whole thing" in their establishment. Representative and Mrs. Blank had been to Baltimore one afternoon. When they left the train at Washington on their return Mrs. Blank discovered that her umbrella, which had been entrusted to the care of her husband, was missing.

"Where's my umbrella?" she demanded. "I'm afraid I've forgotten it, my dear," meekly answered the congressman. "It must still be in the train." "In the train?" snorted the lady. "And to think that the affairs of the nation are entrusted to a man who doesn't know enough to take care of a woman's umbrella!"—Success.

The Mystery of Death.

Oh, death, how bitter is the thought of thee! How speedy thy approach! How stealthy thy steps! How universal thy sway! The powerful cannot escape thee; the wise know not how to avoid thee; the strong have no strength to oppose thee; the rich cannot bribe thee with their treasure. Thou art a hammer that always strikes, a sword that is never dull, a net into which all fall, a prison into which all must enter, a sea on which all must venture, a penalty which all must suffer, a tribute which all must pay. Oh, death, death! Implacable enemy to the human race! Why didst thou enter into the world?—Luis de Granada.

Made Sure It Was Used.

An old farmer and his wife, noted for their niggardliness, had a custom of allowing the servant only one match to light the fire with each morning.

One morning the match failed to kindle, so the servant went to their bedroom door and asked for another one.

A whispered consultation was held between the two, then audibly the wife said:

"Will you risk her w' another one, John?"

"I doot we'll hae tae risk her, Janet," replied John, "but be sure an' seek a sight o' the aine she got last night."—Glasgow Times.

One Ring and Another.

"I wonder when 'the ring' first became connected with fighting?" said the follower of pugilism. "Oh," replied Henpeck, "I suppose it dates back to the beginning of the Christian religion." "What's that? What has pugilism to do with religion?" "Oh, I thought you were speaking of the wedding ring."—Philadelphia Press.

The Doctor's Aim.

Some frivolous person has remarked that illness was like a struggle between two people and that the doctor resembled the third man, who intervened to separate them with a club. Sometimes he hit the disease on the head and sometimes the patient.—Hospital.

Intermission.

He yelled at the top of his voice for two hours and then stopped.

"Well," said his mother, "are you going to be good? Have you finished crying?"

"No," said Tommy, "I have not finished; I'm only resting."

Forcing Business.

Coster (irritated through lack of trade)—Buy a box o' cough lozenges, 'ang yo'! Hustlers—I haven't got a cough. Coster—Well, fight me an' buy some stuff for black eyes.—London Tit-Bits.

Wellman's Corners

The Women's Institute held their monthly meeting at the residence of Mrs. W. W. Dracup on the afternoon of Thursday, July 18th. There was not as large an attendance as there has been at some of our meetings, owing to the fact that there was sickness in the families of several of the ladies who belong to the society. Your correspondent was not able to be present, but heard that it was one of the best meetings we have ever had. Miss Wootton, the new President, occupied the chair. Mrs. Nix gave a paper on "How to save time," which was followed by discussion. Mrs. W. Dracup followed with a talk on "Cold dishes for hot days." The meeting was enlivened by music by Misses Iva Reid and Nellie Totton and Mrs. W. Dracup. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. B. Totton on Aug. 15th, and may I be there to hear.

Mr. T. Thompson, formerly of this place, but now a resident of Norwood, was married on July 10 to Miss Bertha Searight, of Norwood. Miss S. Thompson, sister of the groom was bridesmaid, and Mr. J. Marks, groomsmen. We heartily wish Mr. and Mrs. Thompson a long and prosperous life. Miss Brown of Oshawa, a former teacher here, is spending her vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Thos. Snarr. Mrs. W. S. Dracup, who has been very ill, is slightly better. Mrs. Burrell Fanning is also better. Master Vernon Matthews has a relapse after his attack of scarlet fever, and is very ill. Mrs. Kennedy and Miss Florence Pounder, of Toronto, are visiting relatives here and in Campbellford. The big lawn social will be held next month. The Orangemen intend taking charge of it again this year. The 27th is spoken of as the date, but that may possibly be changed.

Anson News

Miss Myrtle Reid, of Foxboro, is the guest of Mrs. A. Bailey. Miss Vita Bailey gave a social evening to a number of her friends. Miss Mildred Rowe, of Picton, who has been visiting Miss Eva Eggleton, returned to her home on Tuesday. Miss Muriel Cummings, of Foxboro is visiting at Mrs. A. McMullen's. Miss Nettie Huble has been visiting friends at Wooler and Frankford. Miss Ella Faulkner spent Tuesday at Mrs. A. Bailey's. Mrs. Wannamaker and little sister Muriel, have been visiting at Mrs. H. Hanna's. Miss Annie Lawrence, of Sidney Crossing, is visiting Mrs. J. Huble. Mrs. (Rev.) W. H. Stevens and son, of Kemptonville, are guests of Mrs. John Huble. Mr. W. Weaver had the misfortune to meet an automobile, which frightened his horses, causing them to upset the wagon. Mr. Weaver sustained an ankle and sustained other injuries which will confine him to the house all summer. The occupants of the car sped on and left the injured man to help himself as best he could. Miss Feeny, of Toronto, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. R. Hoar. Mrs. R. Hoar has been ill for a number of days, but is now improving. Miss Essie Smith is visiting friends in Peterboro. Mr. Lorne Wellman has organized a football team. Mrs. Nancy McConnell and Mr. E. D. McConnell are visiting relatives in Guelph.

Spring Brook.

Court Spring Brook, I. O. F. held their annual church parade last Sunday. A very appropriate discourse was given by the pastor. Berry picking, cherry picking, and picking each other is now the order of the day, but the latter has no set time nor season—it is like Tennyson's brook. The Women's Institute meets at Mrs. T. C. McConnell's on Wednesday, July 24th. The Epworth League of this place intend to eclipse all former efforts in a social to be held on the evening of Aug. 16th. A brass band will be secured to enliven the evening with music. A number of novelties will be introduced. No pains will be spared to make this the event of the season. For particulars see bills.

The Doctor Away from Home When Most Needed

People are often very much disappointed to find that the family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like cramp colic and cholera morbus require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape much pain and suffering and all risk. Buy it now, it may save life. For sale by J. S. Morton.

Great Engineering Venture

Immense Bridge Now Being Built Over St. Lawrence

Very few Canadians are aware of the tremendous character of the operations which are now being carried out in the construction of the gigantic cantilever bridge over the St. Lawrence river, some six and a half miles west of Quebec City.

This bridge—in some respects the most remarkable in the world—will have a total length of 3,800 feet. In addition to the sub-structure of a couple of main piers, the bridge will consist of two 500-foot side spans, extending from the anchor piers to the main piers of the towers; two 562½ feet cantilever arms, reaching out over the river, and carrying between them a central suspended span measuring 675 feet between centres of end piers. This span is one of the most striking features of the bridge, and illustrates well its huge proportions, for it is longer than any simple pin-connected truss span that has yet been erected. Ordinarily, such a span would be supported on masonry towers, and it would form, say, the main channel span of some river crossing; but in this case its abutments are the end piers of two giant arms, each reaching out over half a thousand feet from its point of support.

The cantilever arms and the central span together form a channel span of 1,800 feet in length, and thus furnish the world's record for maximum span of all existing bridges in general, and for the cantilever type in particular. The main spans of the Forth Bridge—hitherto the giant amongst bridge structures—are 1,700 feet long, or 90 feet shorter than the span of the Quebec bridge. As, however, the Forth bridge has two spans of the dimensions stated, it is well to remember that it will be 2,080 feet longer from end to end than its Canadian rival.

Diamonds in Canada

Rich Field in the World may be Developed in Great North Land

According to the opinion of scientists and experts northern Canada is destined to become the greatest diamond producing country in the world. Dr. Ami, a distinguished member of the Canadian Geographical Survey Department, states that it is his firm conviction that a diamond field, probably the richest in the world, will, after railway communication has been established, be developed in the great north land. At different points important finds have been made by prospecting parties, and the fact that vari-colored natural carbon gems, white, yellow and black, have been found scattered over a wide area is held to indicate that they have been carried along by glacial drifts from some point further north. That point, wherever it may be, whether in Ontario territory or Quebec territory, it is impossible at present to say, would be the mother bed.

Dr. Ami regards the discoveries that have been made as of immense importance. The Tiffanys and other great jewellery houses have sent representatives over the regions in which the diamonds have been found, and the reports they have submitted are regarded as conclusive. Nothing can be done, however, until transportation facilities are developed, and in the meantime very little is being said about what is likely to prove the world's greatest diamond field, as the firms do not want to disclose the exact nature of the information they have obtained at considerable cost, until they are in a position to take advantage of it themselves.

Steamship Disaster

As the result of a midnight collision between the steamer Columbia and the steam lumber schooner San Pedro, in a fog off the California coast, only 160 lives are reported saved out of a crew and passenger list of 267. Most of the people of the Columbia were below in their bunks when the accident occurred, and five minutes after the vessel sank with a terrible hole torn in her side. Survivors escaped in life boats and were picked up by passing steamers.

Take the Postmaster's Word for it

Mr. F. M. Hamilton, postmaster at Cherryvale, Ind., keeps also a stock of general merchandise and patent medicines. He says: "Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is standard here in its line. It never fails to give satisfaction and we could hardly afford to be without it." For sale by J. S. Morton.

LONDON A CITY OF CALAMITY

Terrible Disasters in 1881, 1883, 1898 and Now That of 1907.

TALES OF THE DISASTER.

MISS Ethel Earle, one of the girls who was caught in the falling ruin of floors and walls in the terrible disaster at London on Tuesday of last week, but who was extricated, is one of the patients in the hospital. In conversation with a reporter she described her experience.

DEATH OF CLARA MULLIN.

"I was standing near the centre of the Brewster store with Libbie Smith and May Harrington, when, without any warning at all, there was a splitting crash and a roar that sounded like an explosion, and the walls of the building seemed to be sliding westward. I remember crying out, 'Libbie, we will never get out of this alive.' I took about two steps and was then hemmed in by the ruin. Libbie ran to me and we placed our arms around one another, and the debris seemed to surround us in a minute. It was the most frightful experience I ever went through, and I tell you that the ordinary person has no idea of how it feels to be caught in a trap like that. One reads of a tragedy like the San Francisco earthquake, but cannot begin to realize it, unless they have an experience like mine. Poor Clara Mullin was standing near us, and after the walls had fallen I could hear her moaning where she lay. She must have been in great pain, for we heard her sobbing and crying, and yet we could not move to do anything to assist her. Not long after her moans ceased, and instinctively we knew that the poor girl was dead.

"We were hemmed in on all sides. We lay in perfect darkness. We might have been five or fifty feet under heavy walls, bricks and beams for all we knew, for we could hear nothing. It seemed like eternity before help came. I wonder my hair is not grey."

Miss Libbie Smith, who is a stenographer, was injured internally, but she worked with the instinct of one to whom life is dear and death is not far distant, to retain her senses after the crash.

ESCAPED SUFFOCATION.

"If it had not been for the fact that my right arm was free and uninjured, I would, undoubtedly, have choked and suffocated after the accident," she said. "It came without a moment's warning. Ethel Earle and I were not far apart when it seemed to me that the whole building shivered. Then there was a deafening roar and clatter and the building seemed to crumble up. It was a most terrifying moment. The next thing I knew I was swept off my feet and was caught fast in a mass of debris. A dense, choking dust rose from around me and a stream of dust and what seemed like ashes began to rain down around from the ruins above. In a short time this filled my ears and got through my hair. I got my right arm free and I warded off the stuff as it trickled down from entering my mouth and nostrils. Otherwise I should have been suffocated."

PRAYED TO DIE.

"While my plight seemed most desperate, I shall never forget one terrible part of it. Where I lay I could hear the moans of Frank Smith, manager of the store, who was afterwards taken out dead. The poor fellow was not more than half a man left away, it seemed, and I heard him moan and cry as I never before heard anyone. He prayed repeatedly that he might die and have his terrible sufferings ended. I heard him say finally, 'O, my God, let me die.' It seemed more like a prayer of resignation than anything else, although I knew that his injuries must have been terrible from the agony in his voice. I heard no more from him, and he must have died soon after.

IN A TRAP.

"No words can begin to picture the horror of this time. To be alive, yet hemmed in by solid substances that seemed as if no human force could ever move them, sends the blood to the heart in a sickening feeling of fear. One would do anything, I think, in a time like that, to save his life, but there is added to that the cries of others badly hurt, it is terrible.

"I wonder my hair is not grey. It is difficult for me here in this cool place, surrounded with attentive doctors and kind and merciful nurses, to realize that I am not still in the wreck. If I go to sleep I awake with a start and a cry. In my fancy the walls have just fallen again."

FULL INVESTIGATION DEMANDED.

By common consent it is admitted that there must be a thorough investigation into the cause of the disaster and the responsible parties brought to book.

What was the immediate cause of the collapse is still a matter of surmise, and the ultimate verdict must be based upon the expert testimony which will be adduced at the inquiry. At first the supposition was that the inner portion of the Crystal Hall gave way, carrying with it the outer portion, which crashed into and demolished the Brewster store. Another theory is now advanced that it was the outer portion of the building fronting on the alley which first gave way, and this opinion is firmly held by City Engineer Graydon. Six windows were being inserted in the wall facing the alley, and the suggestion is made that the supports were altogether inadequate. This, however, is a point which will have to be cleared up at the inquiry, and although in certain quarters blame is being attached to certain individuals, the bulk of the citizens are still holding their breath until they have obtained proper grounds upon which to base their verdict.

PREVIOUS DISASTERS IN LONDON.

London, Ontario, seems to be a city of terrible tragedies. It is only a little over nine years ago since the collapse of a platform at the city hall killed 23 people and injured over one hundred others. A meeting in celebration of a municipal election was in progress, without the slightest warning, the platform and the floor of the hall gave way, precipitating about 150 persons to the floor below. Near the platform stood a large iron safe, which going down with the floor, added its terrible crushing weight to the falling timbers, and pinned fast the unfortunate victims, who might otherwise have had a chance of escaping. The crash occurred immediately over the City Engineer's office, and more than 200 people were precipitated into the funnel-shaped death trap, with the safe and a heavy steam coil falling on top of them. Groans from the dying and agonizing cries from the injured, mingled in an appalling and never to be forgotten chorus. Numerous thrilling escapes were recorded.

FLOOD CLAIMED 22.

It was the flood that caused the historic disaster preceding that. On May 10 and 11, 1883, the Thames overflowed its banks, and twenty-two people were drowned. They were chiefly residents of the west of London.

WHOLE FAMILIES WIPE OUT.

But the greatest tragedy of all—a tragedy which it is hoped will never be duplicated—occurred in 1881. It happened in the midst of merriment and thoughtless mirth of the celebration of the Queen's Birthday, May 24. Five hundred excursionists were returning on a steamer "Victoria" on the River Thames. Carrying a load far in excess of her capacity, the steamer collapsed and 187 of the excursionists were drowned in shallow water. Struggling women and helpless children went to watery graves, and whole families were wiped out in that brief but agonizing catastrophe.

UNDER TERRIBLE SHADOW.

And now comes the great calamity of 1907 with its toll of victims again well up in double figures. No sooner is one tragedy almost forgotten than another occurs. Truly the shadow of calamity seems to perpetually haunt this otherwise beautiful Canadian city.

WIFE'S PATIENCE GONE.

Pours Gasoline on Erring Husband and Lights It.

A despatch from Vancouver says: R. Hebblethwaite, a character well known about town and figuring frequently in the Police Court, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness and failure to provide for his wife and children, and is in the hospital brooding on a foretaste of fiery torment. He came home drunk, and, failing to get into the house, went to sleep in the back yard. His wife heard him, went out and read him a lecture, which he never heard. Becoming incensed at his failure to answer, she poured a can of gasoline over him, set fire to his clothes and left him. Hebblethwaite, waking speedily, ran yelling about the yard until neighbors in night clothes appeared with blankets and smothered the flames. He was badly burned and was removed to the hospital, where he will be confined for some time, but will probably recover. Meanwhile the wife lays another charge of drunkenness, and when he is able to leave the hospital he must go to jail. The Attorney-General's department was notified of the wife's action, but refused to prosecute unless he makes complaint.

STEAMSHIP COLLISION.

One Hundred and Fifty of the Columbia's Passengers Drowned.

A despatch from San Francisco says: The eastwise passenger steamer Columbia, northbound, for Portland, Ore., was wrecked and the great majority of her passengers were drowned, last Saturday evening. These figures show the extent of the tragedy:—

Cabin passengers ..... 163
Stowaways ..... 21
Crew ..... 60

Reported saved ..... 98
Unaccounted for ..... 151

The Columbia left here last Saturday morning with a heavy passenger list and much freight. At midnight she was steaming along slowly off Point Delgado in the Elbow, when, without warning, from sight completely. Suddenly out of the fog loomed the dark hull of the San Pedro, southbound, which was evidently out of her course. Whistles were blown and frantic efforts made by the helmsmen of each vessel, but they were of no avail. The San Pedro struck the big steamer on the port bow, tearing an immense hole in her side, through which the water rushed in great volume.

Alarms were sounded throughout the big ship, and the terrified passengers scrambled from their rooms in an effort to escape. But time was too short to aid the life-savers. The vessel sank within eleven minutes after the collision. A life raft was launched with several passengers on board, but only a few of the entire number aboard were saved on it. Most of the passengers were asleep and never knew that the vessel was wrecked. Only the fact that the San Pedro was lumber laden prevented her from sharing the same fate, as the water poured in her hold.

From midnight, when the boats struck, the survivors drifted into the fog-covered sea until daybreak Sunday, when the vapor raised and they were sighted by the steamer George W. Elder. She immediately took the half dead survivors aboard from the rigging and lumber of the San Pedro.

The San Pedro was then deserted and the elder searched the ocean for boats and rafts. As she proceeded, the survivors were found. The Elder returned and took the San Pedro in tow for Eureka, where they arrived Monday afternoon.

SHOT HIS WIFE DEAD.

North Ontario County Farmer Used Gun With Awful Effect.

A despatch from Sunderland, Ont., says: Adam Lodwick, of Valentyn, aged 42, miles west of this place, shot and killed his wife at an early hour on Saturday morning. It seems Lodwick had been in a low state of health during the last few months, and while his wife was in bed with a four-weeks-old infant in her arms, he procured a shot gun and loaded it with buckshot. He then took his wife's face and literally blew off the top of her head. Strange to say, the baby was not injured. T. H. Glendinning, J.P., and County Constable Davidson, of Sunderland, were telephoned for, and on arriving found Lodwick in an unconscious condition, seated in an armchair. Dr. Blanchard was sent for, and after a few hours Lodwick recovered sufficiently to acknowledge taking the entire contents of a bottle, which the doctor found to be a preparation he had left for the man for his nerves, with which he had been troubled. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. Philip St. John, a highly-respected farmer of Valentyn, and leaves a family of five to mourn her terrible death.

COUNTERFEITERS CONFESS.

Five of the Lindsay Prisoners Plead Guilty.

A despatch from Lindsay says: Five members of the counterfeiting band under arrest here pleaded guilty before Magistrates Jackson and Moore at the Court House on Monday afternoon, and were remanded until Friday for sentence. Charles Burke, Robert Logie, John Eveleigh, Richard Wynn and Archibald Boyeau, all admitted their guilt. Inspector Rogers went on the stand and told of the confessions made by Boyeau and Logie, revealing an organized conspiracy to manufacture and dispose of counterfeit Bank bills. Logie's confession included complicity in the counterfeiting of the Bank of Montreal and Dominion Bank bills three years ago, and his statement directly implicates both George Miller and John Gestling, the remaining two of the accused.

KINGSTON LADY SHOT.

Miss Caidenhead Killed by U. S. Soldier at the Soo.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: Miss Elizabeth Caidenhead of Kingston, was accidentally shot in the Michigan Soo on Monday by one of the guards at Fort Brady, who was pursuing an escaping prisoner. The deceased lady, at the time of the accident, was accompanied by her brother, George Caidenhead, of the Canadian Soo, and his daughter, Katie of Strathroy, all of whom were returning from viewing the fort building. The ball entered Miss Caidenhead's head in the ear and came out over the eye. Several persons were passing the street leading to the fort at the time of the accident. The guard has been placed under arrest. Mr. G. Caidenhead already has taken proceedings in an action against the United States Government for damages.

BLOOD WAS DRAWN.

Montreal Recorder Imposes a Heavy Fine on Horse-beater.

A despatch from Montreal says: Fifteen dollars or one month was the penalty given by Recorder Dupuis on Wednesday morning in the case of Ovidius Ross charged with cruelly beating his horse. The case was one of peculiar interest in view of Recorder Dupuis recent decisions about cruelty to animals. In this instance there was the testimony of an eye witness and blood had actually flowed from the sides of the animal.

CRIPPLE PLUNGED TO DEATH

"Tell My Friends That I Have Gone to Glory."

A despatch from Niagara Falls, N.Y., says: People who had on Thursday evening gathered in Prospect Park and in Victoria Park, were startled at 7.40 o'clock to see the body of a man come dancing down the rapids of the American channel and plunge over the American Falls. As the man came sweeping along with the currents and waves it looked as though he was waving farewell to those on shore, but it is likely that the waves gave the motion they felt was a human effort to say farewell.

This latest suicide is known to have entered the bridge between the mainland and Green Island from the island end. He walked out to the second bay on a crutch and a cane, and there he climbed over the wall of the bridge and dropped into the rapids. He left his crutch and cane behind, also a note which reads: "Tell my friends that I have gone to glory." This note as well as the crutch, bears the initials "J.D." and no doubt they will be a great help in identifying the man. Inquiry at the hotels does not reveal that any of the guests are missing, nor do any of them report having a guest who was lame.

The body made the awful plunge over the brink about 20 feet out from Prospect Point, and when it was announced in the park that a human being was plunging down the rapids toward the Falls there was a hurrying of many to this point to witness the terrible plunge to eternity. The rush was impulsive on the part of some, and many were saddened by the sight. Superintendent Perry has the articles left behind.

GASOLINE TANK EXPLODES.

Fatal Accident at Yonge Street Dock, Toronto.

A despatch from Toronto says: A startling accident—one of the most shocking in the history of Toronto—occurred on Friday shortly after noon, in which, with the first stroke of her propellers to send her on her way to her cruising grounds off the island, Mr. Amelius Jarvis' pleasure yacht, "Sitarah" was suddenly shaken by an explosion of gasoline, and in the fire which followed, one woman, Mrs. V. Backensten, unable to escape, was mangled and burnt beyond recognition; another, Mrs. Lena Johnston, was so terribly burned that she now lies at death's door; a man, one of the crew, had his arm fractured in two places and narrowly escaped death in the flames; two little children were also burned, one of whom had his collarbone broken, and the yacht itself to escape destruction by the flames, had to be scuttled where she lay.

FLAMES ENVELOP BOY.

A despatch from Cornwall says: Harlan Cubley, the 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cubley, of Massena, N. Y., was fatally burned on Friday by a gasoline explosion while with his parents on their way down the Grass River to Stonehouse Point, east of Cornwall, where they intended camping. They were in a steam yacht, at the stern of which was a demijohn of gasoline they were taking to a friend. The receptacle must have leaked and the fluid ran to the fire under the boiler, where it ignited. In a minute there was an explosion and the boy, who was seated at the stern, was blown into the air, and landed in a boat, where he was enveloped in flames. Mr. Cubley shouted to him to jump overboard and took him ashore, where Mrs. Cubley had beached the yacht.

The boy was very badly burned, but his recovery was hoped for. He died, however, after suffering four days.

IMMIGRATION INTO CANADA.

Returns for May Show an Increase of Twenty-three Per Cent.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The total immigration into Canada for the month of May was 55,677, as compared with 37,191 for May of last year, an increase of 8,486, or 23 per cent. The immigration through ocean ports was 38,755 and from the United States 6,922. The total immigration into Canada from the 1st of July, 1906, to the 31st of May, 1907, was 214,395, and for the same period of the fiscal year 1906-07 it was 161,741, an increase of 52,654. The immigration into Canada for the five months of this calendar year was 131,776, as compared with 106,133 for the same months of 1906, an increase of 25,643.

Venezuela has intimated that it will refuse to pay the $2,000,000 debt to its Belgian creditors. This decision is contrary to the finding of The Hague Tribunal, and the Belgian Government is doing its utmost to induce Venezuela to carry out The Hague verdict.

NEW DEPOT FOR OTTAWA.

Plans for Million Dollar Station and Hotel are Filed.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Plans for the new Grand Trunk station and million-dollar hotel in Ottawa have been filed with the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. The plans contemplate a terminal station on the site of the present Central Station to cost one-quarter of a million. The station will be a long shape and will be surmounted by a large dome. The hotel will be just to the north of the station, abutting the east bank of the canal. The building is planned in a semi-gothic style, and will overlook Major Hill Park and Sappers Bridge. No room is left for a lawn, and a single line of track leads under an archway of the hotel out to the C.P.R. line running over the Inter-provincial bridge to Hull.

WANTS GUNBOAT NOW.

United States Asks Permission to Station One at Rochester.

A despatch from Washington says: Permission has been asked by the American State Department of the British Government to station the little gunboat Sandoval, now assigned to the use of the naval militia at New York, at Rochester for the benefit of the militia at New York, at Rochester for the benefit of the militia on Lake Ontario.

CHILD IMPALED ON HAYFORK.

Terrible Accident to a Four-year-old Daughter of Southwold Farmer.

A despatch from St. Thomas says: The four-year-old daughter of James Jones, of Southwold, was terribly injured on Saturday. The child was caught in the hooks of a hayfork. One of the prongs, after entering the back, passed completely through the body. The child is in a critical condition.

NEW BUILDING FOR MCGILL.

Will Replace Engineering Structure Recently Destroyed by Fire.

A despatch from Montreal says: Plans have been completed for the construction of the new engineering building at McGill University, to take the place of the one destroyed by fire on April 4. A building permit was granted to the McGill authorities on Wednesday. The new structure, which will be one of the finest of its kind on the continent, will be fireproof, and it is estimated that the cost will be in the vicinity of $275,000.

ONLY ONE BROKE PAROLE.

Two Hundred and Ninety-nine Prisoners Kept Faith.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Mr. Archibald, parole officer of the Department of Justice, says: Of the three hundred prisoners allowed out on parole last year only one broke faith and had to have the privilege cancelled.

TRAINS COLLIDE, MANY PERISH

Thirty Persons Killed on the Pere Marquette Railroad.

A despatch from Salem, Michigan, says: Thirty persons were killed and nearly all of them more or less injured and crazed with fright. There was a stampede, the terror-stricken people fighting to get out of the doors and windows, while from the pile of wreckage came the cries of those who were pinned down by the weight of the mangled bodies of broken bones and mangled flesh and with no hope of being extricated until a wrecking train arrived from Detroit.

The fear that the pile of wreckage, in which many persons' bodies were buried, would be buried in the night, suffering from the weight of the wreckage, and that the survivors to the work of rescue, a work in which they were assisted by the farmers in the vicinity. With their bare hands or with improvised tools they set to work to raise the heavy timbers, under which many were pinned down. The wreckage was released until when the wrecking train arrived nearly 20 bodies had been extricated, besides several wounded people. The dead were nearly all crushed beyond recognition, and their clothing was literally torn off them.

SHOT BY HER YOUNG SON

A New Brunswick Woman Very Seriously Wounded.

A despatch from Moncton, N.B., says: Shot by a revolver in the hands of her five-year-old son, Mrs. Sanford Anderson of Edgell's Landing, near Hillsboro, was on Wednesday so seriously injured that she may die. She was operated on but her condition is serious. Mrs. Anderson, who is in a delicate state of health, was sitting at a desk in which her husband kept a loaded revolver.

In securing writing material she left the drawer containing the revolver open, and her little son took the revolver out. His mother did not notice him at first, but turned and saw him, and reached to take it. The little fellow pulled the trigger and the bullet entered his mother's abdomen. A Moncton physician was summoned, and there are hopes of Mrs. Anderson's recovery.

DARE HE?

"If I had as many gowns as the Mediterranean," how she would like to be! she said, smiling. "It is the first time she had spoken since they had set off on their return drive. She is lying back, with her hands carefully shielding in her lap a few little crockery pots that she has bought of a fat Turk for some children at her hotel. Her face looks tired; and yet over its small area is spread an expression of content that makes his heart warm. Is it only the pagan of sky and ocean that has called forth that look of real, if passing, happiness on the features of her who is always so tremulously sensitive an instrument for all influences of beauty and grandeur to play upon? Has his own neighborhood anything to say to it? Before he can give himself an answer to this anxious question, she speaks again.

"You do not mind my not talking to you, do you?" she asks, half apologetically, and yet with a confidence in his sympathy that still further quickens the beats of his already not very still heart. "No, I am sure you do not. Some how it is a great gift—you always feel in time with one, and one does not chatter most when one is most greatly pleased, does one?—a, what a treat you have given me!"

As she speaks, her humid eyes travel from his face to where, beyond the long Atlas range, delicately toothed and cut out, rises the gold-washed snow of the Kabyle mountains, that retire majestically invisible on dull days, and only come out, cadenced and regal, when the great sun rides in pomp. Above their heads wild plumes of deep rose, that it seems ridiculous to call clouds, tuff the sky.

Jim's look has followed his companion's; the chins of both are in the air; the cheerful, at a glance, of the boyward is lost upon them. They see neither the Frenchmen nor plump Frenchwomen drinking coffee outside the cafes, nor the idle indigènes leaning draped against the sea-wall. (Never does that industrious race seem to attempt any severer exertion.)

"Thought was not; in enjoyment it expired."

But it is brought back to life with a jump.

"Arretez! arretez!" cries a female voice. "Jim! Jim! do you not see us? Arretez! arretez!"

Obedient to his ears, Burgoyne's eyes make one bound from the heavenly spectacle down to earth, and alight upon the Wilson's carriage, which, going in the same direction as himself, has just been brought to a standstill alongside of his, by the sudden appearance of a beautiful yellow-jacketed native coachman.

It is, of course, Cecilia's voice that has apostrophized him, but oh, portent! does his vision, so lately recalled from the skyward bowers, play him false? or is it really the moribund Sybilla, stretched beside her, with only two instead of three cushions under her back, with a bonnet on her head—he did not even know that she possessed a bonnet—and with a color in her cheek and a lustre in her eye that may owe their origin either to the freshness of the evening air, or to the invigorating properties of the conversation of the very ordinary-looking young man seated opposite to her?

In a second Jim has leapt out of his own vehicle, and gone to the side of the other. It is a perfectly futile impulse that leads him to do so. Not all the leaping in the world from her side now can alter the fact that he has been driving lately with Elizabeth Le Marchant, and that the two sisters have seen him so doing; but yet he has an instinct of preservation towards, and shielding of her, that leads him to adopt this useless course of action. It is Cecilia who has summoned him, and yet, when he reaches her side, she does not seem to have anything particular to say to him. Sybilla is the one to address him.

"A miracle! a miracle! I know you are saying to yourself," cries she, in a sprightly voice; "and well you may! This is the miracle-monger!" indicating with a still brighter far her vis-a-vis.

"Dr. Crump, let me present to you Mr. Burgoyne—Jim, our Jim, whom I have so often talked to you about."

The person thus apostrophized responds by a florid bow, and an over-galant asseveration that any person introduced to his acquaintance by Mrs. Le Marchant needs no further recommendation.

"It is an experiment, of course; there is no use in pretending that it is not an experiment," continues she, with a slight release into languor; "but—lowering her voice a little—"they wished me to make the effort."

It is a favorite allocation of Sybilla's that any course of action towards which she is inclined is adopted solely under the pressure of urgent wishes on the part of her family, and she has long known, and been experienced by her peculiarity, but at present she may say what she pleases; he hears no word of it for his ear is prickled to catch the sentences that Cecilia is leaning over the carriage-side to shoot at Elizabeth.

"Oh, Miss Le Marchant! is it you? I beg your pardon, I did not recognize you at the first moment. One does not recognize people—does one?—when one is not expecting to see them?"—is an intended sting lurking in this implication? "How are you? How do you like Algeria? I hope Mrs. Le Marchant is well. What a long time it is since we met! I hope we shall see something of you."

(No, evidently no sting was meant. Cecilia with all her faults, is really a good soul, and he will take her to heart the hand play next Tuesday.)

There seems to him to be a slight falter in the tone with which Elizabeth responds, and her voice sounds curiously small and low; but that may be merely owing to its flute quality, following upon and contrasting the other's powerful organ.

It is not till the two parties have again separated, and that she is once more seated by her side in the fiacre, that he dares steal a look at her face to see how plainly written on it are the traces of vexation caused by a meeting which has produced in his own breast such acute annoyance. Good heavens! it is even worse than he had expected. Down the cheek nearest to him two good-sized tears are unmistakably trickling. No doubt the consciousness of the mysterious story attaching to her past makes her smartly aware of how doubly discreet her own conduct should be—makes her bitterly repent of her present indiscretion.

He is a trait-landed man, and it seems to him as if there were something gravely compromising to her in this tele-drive with himself, in the known absence of her parents at Hammam Rihra. Why was he fool enough this morning to admit to Cecilia that they had gone thither? He had no business to have led her into temptation, and she had no business to have fallen into it. Remorse and irritation give a tartness to his tone as he says:

"After all, I do not think you need take it so much to heart."

"Take what to heart?" she asks, in unaffected surprise, turning her full face, and her blue eyes, each with one hot rain-drop dimming its slate-blue upon him. "Oh, I see!—a sudden enlightenment coming to her with an instant's spring to a carnation—I see what you mean; but you are mistaken—I—it had not occurred to me; I was only thinking—only remembering that the last time I saw her was at—Vallombrosa."

Vallombrosa. Is he never to hear the last of Vallombrosa?

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The latest whispering left on Jim's fancy is that it is the golden rule of Elizabeth Le Marchant's life to comply with any and every request that is made to her; moreover, that in her mind the boundary line which parts the permitted from the unpermitted is so clearly defined, as did she belong to the naked hypothesis makes his stratagem lead to a jump, he should wish it to be. If, on the other hand, the sun shining and the leaf-shadows dancing on the trellised balcony-wall, he invite her to some fresh junket, he is sure that she will readily and joyfully acquiesce; that her spirits will go up like rockets at the prospect; and that her own anxiety will be that she may be sure to hit in her choice upon the form of dissipation most congenial to him. He will therefore not invite her. He will have a greater care for her reputation than apparently she has for herself. Not until the return of her parents, not until the difficulties of intercourse with her are centupled and the pleasure minimized, will he again seek her.

To put himself beyond the reach of temptation, he sets off immediately after breakfast on a long walking expedition, which he means to occupy the whole of the daylight hours. He wanders about the great plain of the Metidje; he visits a Kabyle village, with its hovels covering its hideous fat-fleshed cacti; later on in the afternoon he finds himself in the little French hamlet of Biernandais, and finally drops in upon the Jardin d'essai, the delightful botanic garden which is one of the many blessings for which Algerian France has to thank the much-vindictive Napoleon III.

It is difficult to even the reddest Republican to think of the date of that ruler as he walks down the avenue of gigantic palms, that lead, straight as a die, to where, like a deep-blue gem far away, the Mediterranean shows

On the forefinger of an aidman, Jim walks along beneath the huge date-palms that give him a creak in the neck to gaze up at ere he can perceive their towering head of waving plumes far up against the blue. They remind him of the picture of the mission of the missionaries in a palm hat. Is he the missionary, and is this inky negro in a black bonnet, scarcely distinguishable from her face, his one catechumen?

Alternating with the date are superb fan-palms, of which it is difficult to realize that it is their stunted, puny brothers which, anxiously tended, guided, caressed, drag out a languid existence in the London drawing-rooms. Among their Titian fans lie their mighty fruit, like a bunch of grapes, a yard and a half long, strung upon ropes of yellow worsted.

Halfway down its length the main avenue is intersected by a splendid allée of bamboos, which lean their smooth-leaved stems and their luxuriant leaves towards each other across the dimmed interspace, and unite in a pointed Gothic arch of living green.

Jim paces objectively down the long arcade, stopping now and again to pick up a fragment of the peeled bark that looks so strangely like a poppy root with a mother-of-pearl glaze upon it.

He pulls it off, and as if to find the secret of some forgotten race written upon its shining surface; but he reads only a secret there, it is only his own, which, after all, is not much of a secret. He merely sees written there that it is too early to go home yet; that there is no security that Elizabeth may not still be sitting on the terrace, sitting away with her gold thimble and her colored silks. The sun, it is true, has left the garden, but he departs thence over early. It will be safer to stay away yet for an hour or so.

Thus musing, he retraces his steps, and explores a new direction, sauntering down a rose-alley, where, climbing immoderately high up tall palms, seeming as if they would strangle them with their long bowery arms, rose-trees wave far above him in the still air; and upon them, though it is still but the month of January, when people are skating, blue-nosed in England, creamy tea-roses show their pale-yellow hearts, fair and frequent, on the upturned boughs, rioting in licensed liberty above his head. The walk ends in a circle of gigantic magnolias, which take hands round a square fountain-basin. Each huge trunk is, as it were, a little commonwealth of trees rolled into one, instead of a single tree. Beneath them benches stand. Upon one he sits, leaning back, with a French bonnet on his second head, and a French thing female and slender, something with its little white profile, how white it looks in this deceiving light—lifted, although white, yet smiling, animated, and talking to a man beside it.

He is so drowsy and kicked his heels, and runs the risk of contracting a spiteful Southern chill, in order to avoid Elizabeth; and he has succeeded in running straight into her arms.

He does not at the first glance recognize her companion, but a second look shows him that he is one of the inmates of the hotel—a French vicomte; and though Jim knows that he is both a consumptive and the father of a family, that knowledge does not under the rising in his breast of the jealous and censorious thought that he has detected Elizabeth in throwing a great deal more than the necessary modicum of amiability into her manner to him.

As Jim comes into sight, the Frenchman clicks his heels, doubles up his body, lifts his hat, and walks away. It is evident at all events, that their meeting was a casual one; and the reflection brings with it a feeling of relief, coupled with a feeling of shame at his own rooted readiness to suspect her, on any or no evidence, which yet, on the other hand, is not strong enough, when she turns her sweet bright look towards him, to hinder the thought that it is scarcely, if at all, sweeter or brighter than the one which he had caught her squandering on the casual table d'hôte acquaintance who has just quitted her.

"You, too!" she says; "why, the whole hotel seems to be emptied out into these gardens; the widow Wadman is buying violets—mark if they do not appear upon Uncle Toby at dinner to-night. The vicomte—"

Yes, I saw you engaged in animated dialogue with him," interrupts Jim, with slight acrimony; "but I had no idea that you were such a flirt."

"Had not you?" rejoins she innocently. "He was telling me about his English governess, what a treasure she is—her face dimpling mischievously—and how wonderfully pure her accent. So it is—pure Cockney. You should hear the little vicomte talk of the baby and the pipers."

He regards her small pleasantry only with an absent air, and she speaks again—rather wistfully, it might be said—"Have you been on another expedition?"

"No, not on an expedition; only a walk. If—yielding to the temptation of putting a question which no one would have judged more severely than he, had he been put by anyone else—"If I had invited you to do me the honor of making another excursion with me to-day, do you think that you would have consented?"

As he speaks, he departs yet further from the line of conduct he has marked out for himself by sitting down on the bench at her side.

Her eyes are fixed upon the soaring date-palms, which stand, instead of a water-jet, in the middle of the fountain-basin, and on which the last year's dead plumes hang splayed and ready to fall off, in contrast to this year's verdant vigor.

"Is not that rather a tantalizing question when you did not ask me?" inquires she, with soft sarcasm. "Yes, I suspect; but I was so very happy yesterday; and although you told me that other night—swallowing a sigh—"that you supposed I must love my own society, in point of fact, I do not think I do."

After all, the sun is not quite gone; there are flashes of light in the verdant glades, and green reflections in the water.

"And, yet," says Jim thoughtfully, "you seem to have a good deal of it; I suppose, in your position, it is unavoidable."

He had meant an allusion to her situation as had third to her uxorious parents; but the little girl's eye has risen a picture of the little French hamlet of Biernandais he had seen studying his grammar with the door shut upon its loneliness; but almost before the words have left his lips, he sees how different, of how true, a construction they may be capable.

He snatches a glance of real terror at her, to see whether she has made that erroneous, yet all too plausible application—a glance which confirms his worst fears. She has turned as white as the pocket-handkerchief, which she is passing over her trembling lips.

"Yes," she says in a hollow whisper; "you are right. In my position it is not avoidable, and it is cowardly of me not to accept it as such."

"I mean—"

But she does not suffer him to finish his uttered explanation.

"It is cold," she says, rising. I will go home."

He does not attempt to accompany or follow her.

HOW HE PROVED IT.

"I knew you were a fool before I married you!"

"I presume my proposing to you satisfied you on that point?"

ENOUGH OF HIS OWN.

Prospective Suitor—"Sir, I love your daughter."

Her Father—"Well, don't come to me with your troubles."

A Message for the Czar

"Landlord, can I have a sledge from here to convey me to the nearest railway station?"

The speaker was a man of somewhat severe and forbidding aspect, who had just entered the inn of a Russian village.

"I fear not, sir," said the landlord.

"Why? Didn't I see a good-sized sledge in the yard as I came in, all ready for a journey?"

"Yes," said the landlord, "and it is going the right way for the railway, but it is engaged."

"Then surely whoever has engaged it can find room for me?" inquired the stranger.

The landlord smiled.

"I fear no one would be welcome," said he. "The fact is young Ivan Dobry—a young man well known here—has secured it to take him and his bride, and a stranger might not be welcome."

"Pshaw! They will wait a driver for any case, and surely sleighing along these roads does not offer much chance for lovers' conversation. They might find room for me."

"Well, you can ask them," said the landlord. "Come this way." He led the way along a narrow passage, and knocked at a door. Almost before he had any time for response he threw it open, and the stranger entered.

A young man and young woman were in the room, and they looked round when the door was opened.

The stranger made a bow that would have done credit to a Frenchman, and the first words were suggestive of French influence.

"A thousand pardons for this intrusion, but I desire to ask a favor. It is of the utmost importance that I shall reach the railway without any delay, and there only appears to be the sledge you have hired available for the journey. Can you find room for me?"

The bridegroom looked doubtful, and the bride flashed a glance at him which plainly meant a negative. The stranger read the meaning in their faces, and before the young man had time to answer he shut the door on the landlord, who was lingering near, and, advancing into the room, he said in a low tone:

"I will explain the urgency of the case. As you may know, there is an important State ceremony in Moscow in three days' time, and at all costs I must be there. I am the bearer of a message for the Czar, and I must deliver it in person."

The young man sprang to his feet and saluted.

"In that case, sir, our sledge is at your service. We thought of starting in an hour. Will that be convenient?"

"I will be ready," said the stranger, as he withdrew. He was not a word of the secret I have entrusted to you."

So it came to pass that four human beings drawn by two horses started out on their journey an hour later. The stranger brought nothing with him except a small handbag, presumably holding his dispatches, for he carried it in his hand all the time. He sat silent at the rear of the sledge, while the young people conversed as well as the condition of the road would allow.

After they had covered a number of miles they came to a very wild and forsaken part of the country, where a mere track served as a road through snow-covered desolation. At some distance to the right of the road there was a forest, the edge of which made an abrupt line of dark hue against the whiteness of the snow-covered ground. It seemed as if Nature had schemed to give an effect of utter desolation.

Even the young bride and bridegroom shared in the depression, for they became silent as the sledge reached this part, and watched the frowning edge of the forest, without finding any inspiration for a continuance of their conversation.

Then suddenly from somewhere out of the depths of the wood there came a sharp, shrill, and menacing sound, and instantly the horses plunged with such violence as to almost unsettle the occupants of the sledge. Then the sledge settled down to run at a greatly increased pace.

"What was that, Ivan?" said the girl, clasping her husband's arm. "Was it the cry of a wolf?"

"Yes," he replied. "It is surprising that any wolves should be so near us as this, but the severe weather may have driven a few farther this way than usual. But have no fear. There will not be many. Not enough to—"

As if to mock his words, he was interrupted by a repetition of the sound, but this time with the answer of a chorus. Again the horses plunged, and the driver applied his whip. There was no need for whip, however. The animals knew his words, he was not, and they broke into a gallop, which made it difficult for the occupants of the sledge to keep their seats.

A few seconds of tense silence followed, and then they could see a dark shadow coming out from the forest, and spreading out from the line of trees like a quantity of spilled milk. It grew larger and larger, and then separated from the trees and came hastening towards them over the snow.

Ivan drew his breath with a sharp hissing sound. He knew what that dark patch meant, and he would see what terrible was the danger which threatened.

It was a large pack of wolves, evidently forced away from their usual haunts by extremes of hunger, and, coming from the side as they did, almost able to cut off the sledge as it went on its course.

Soon the ominous dark patch began to take definite shape. Something of the form of the wolves could be discerned, and their numbers estimated. Ivan reached down to the bottom of the sledge, and then suddenly drew himself up with a half-suppressed cry of dismay.

"What is it?" asked the girl quickly. For a few seconds he did not answer, and then, as she insisted, he replied:

"I have not brought my gun. I am unarmed."

For a few more seconds he stared helplessly at the approaching wolves, and then, rousing himself as if with an effort, he touched the stranger on the arm.

"Sir," he shouted, for it was necessary to shout, with the wind whistling round their ears and the sound of sledge and hoofs—"sir, are you armed? Have you a revolver or pistol with you?"

The stranger looked at him with something very much like a smile.

"No, sir," he replied. "Like the majority of my countrymen, I am unarmed."

The wolves almost cut them off. They reached the track at a point the sledge had left only a few seconds before, and chased the full horror of the situation was evident to the fugitives. They could plainly see the hideous, hungry ghoul, those gaunt forms, those cruel eyes, and, above all, the awful look of determination, as if they were absolutely certain of their prey, however the chase might be.

The horses were straining themselves to the utmost, and for a while it seemed that the wolves gained very little; but Ivan saw no hope of escape. He knew the slaying power of wolves, and he knew that the horses could not possibly maintain their speed. The wolves were in such numbers that even a gun would have been of little value, and he was absolutely unarmed.

Worse still, he knew that little more than a mile ahead there was a long hill, which would inevitably check the speed of the horses, strain how they might, and that would be the end.

It seemed a long time before the end was reached, although in reality it was only a few minutes. The sledge slowed its speed as the hill was reached, and simultaneously there came to the wolves a movement throughout the pack of wolves, as if they knew that the prey was theirs. Rapidly they drew nearer in their final rush.

Then for the first time the stranger, who had been regarding the enemy with the same kind of half-smile with which he had answered Ivan's question, roused himself up. He glanced ahead in the long slope in front of them, and then called out sharply:

"Driver, is there any chance of our escaping?"

"There was no reply. Either the driver did not hear, or he was too terrified to understand the question."

"Driver," called the stranger, more imperatively, "do you hear me? Is there any chance of our escaping?"

The driver cast a frightened glance over his shoulder and said: "No. Heaven help us! There is none."

"Then I will save you on one condition," said the stranger. "Do you hear me, all of you? I will save you on one condition. You must swear to me by the most sacred oath you know never to tell anyone how I do it. Will you swear? Swear that you will tell no one how I saved you. Be quick! There is no time to waste."

"I swear!" said the driver, but hardly knowing what he said.

As if in a dream the young man and his bride repeated the words "I swear!"

In a moment the stranger fastened his handbag, and drew from thence a spherical object the size of a cricket-ball.

"Lean right forward," he shouted. "Keep down as low as possible. Now for a test."

With the last words he threw the ball of steel into the midst of the oncoming wolves.

There was a vivid flash, a deafening report, and the animals were hurled in every direction, as if some demoniac force had been let loose among them. Some were blown to pieces, many were killed, and still more wounded by that awful explosion. Closely packed as they were, a large number had been within the death-dealing circle. Those that were unhurt stopped for a moment, as if stunned by the force of the enemy which had attacked them. Then the instinct of hunger triumphed, and after the manner of their kind they fell furiously on the dead and the wounded.

The sledge reached the top of the hill, and quickened its pace as it began its descent. The horses still did their best, and the driver urged them on for some time before he realized that the chase had been abandoned.

The young girl was gazing back in the direction from whence they had come, half dazed by the terror through which she had passed. It all seemed like a dream to her, until she was suddenly aroused by the stranger. He did not say a word, but he seemed to be leaning upon her more and more heavily, until at last his head was almost pillowed on her lap.

Then, as she caught sight of the deadly pallor of his face, she instantly divined the truth.

"You are hurt!" she exclaimed, bending over him.

"Yes," he gasped faintly; "our deliverance has cost me."

"Courage," said Ivan, trying to raise him to a more comfortable position. "We will soon have help for you."

"It is useless," said the stranger still more faintly. "Pain has gone, and I shall be dead in a few minutes."

There was silence for a short time, and as they watched the face of the stricken man they felt that what he said was true.

"But the message," said the girl, with a sudden recollection. "What can we do? The message for the Czar that you had to deliver!"

Something almost like a smile appeared on the face of the dying man. He just heard his whispering voice say: "I give it to the wolves."—Pearson's Weekly.

ON THE FARM

PASTURING HOGS.

I often think of the loss that is sustained by many of our farmers when their hogs, thus necessitating the feeding of more expensive foods during the season when they could, with very little expense be kept in a thriving condition on pastures.

The hog is a pasture lover. With pastures he thrives, keeps healthy and pays a premium for the grain which he consumes; while without it he degenerates, gets out of condition, and becomes an easy mark for disease. It is the men who raise hogs without pastures that usually tell all manner of hard luck stories. Their hogs are small, the sows are weak, and the pigs are feeble.

Feeding hogs without pasture means selling grain at a poor market. It is a great mistake to shut up growing hogs in a close pen without exercise and their health. The longer the feed is kept on pasture the better, for the hog can lose time he will have to be kept in the pen.

Prof. Geo. E. Day, one of the highest authorities on swine in Canada, has the following to say in regard to some of the most common crops that are grown for green feed for pigs.

Rape—This is an exceptionally valuable food for swine, and may be pastured or cut and fed to the pigs in the pens. For fattening hogs, best results were obtained by the Ontario Agricultural College from feeding crop two-thirds meal ration and all the rape hogs would eat. The hogs were kept in pens with small outside yards, and the rape was cut and carried to them. This method of feeding gave more economical gains than fattening on pasture, and the bacon was of unusually good quality.

For breeding sows, however, rape is preferable, owing to the fact that the animals receive, when on rape pasture, mature sows require little other food, but young growing sows require a moderate meal ration in addition to the rape.

Vetches—Hogs will eat vetches even more readily than rape, but the vetches do not furnish so much food per acre. Vetches are ready for pasture a little earlier than rape and if a part of the pasture lot is sown with vetches early in the spring it can be sown with rape after the vetches have been eaten off, and thus the ground will raise two pasture crops during the one season. Vetches may also be used as a soiling crop as described under rape.

Hay Vetch—The seed of this crop is very expensive. There is no doubt, however, that it makes an excellent pasture crop for swine. If not pastured too closely, it grows up quickly when the hogs are removed. For early spring pasture, it should be sown during the latter part of August, so that it can make a considerable growth the preceding fall. About one and one-half bushels of seed per acre are required.

Green Rye—Fall sown rye will make a very early spring pasture, and after it has been cut, the ground may be sown with some other crop for rape. It has not a very high feeding value and its main recommendation is the fact that it gives early pasture.

Red Clover—This crop is best suited for pasture, and the hogs should be given a large range or the clover will likely be killed out. It is especially useful for breeding sows. If it is used, two pastures are necessary, one to seed down while the other is being pastured and so on back and forth from year to year.

For a short order hog pasture my own experience is that a heavy seeding of a mixture of the seed of rape and oats is a good combination of seeds to sow, especially on land where clover does not thrive. Experiments conducted at the various experiment stations in Canada and the United States indicate that from sixty to eighty pounds of grain will feed a hog on clover pasture than one hundred pounds of grain without pasture.

Hogs can be grown so much cheaper on pasture than there is no money in the hog that is fed all summer from the pen.

RULES FOR SHEEP DIPPING.

The best time for dipping is from one to three months after shearing. The sheep should not be overheated, or thirsty at the time of dipping.

If the sun is very hot it is better to have the dipping pen in shade. If the night is cold, the dipping should always be stopped soon enough to allow the sheep time to dry before sunset.

See that the preparation is properly mixed and the correct quantity of water added. Don't guess at it.

Never hurt them in dipping. Always take care that every sheep is kept in the bath the full time—never less than one minute nor more than two minutes.

Have the bath well and regularly stirred up from the bottom always before beginning to dip, and whenever any stoppage occurs.

Never allow droppings from the sheep to fall on anything they are likely to eat. If rain comes on before they are dry, keep them off pasture until after it has ceased.

When dipping twice allow an interval of not less than 12, or more than 18, days between the dipping.

Unweaned lambs should be kept apart from dipped ewes for a few hours after dipping.

GOOD STOCK PAYS.

One of the greatest mistakes, and the most common, among our farmers is the notion that because they have an inferior mare they should breed her to a common scrub horse because the service fee is low. In this way you are sure to get an inferior colt. But if you pay $5 or $10 more and breed to a first-class horse you stand a show of getting a colt that will develop into a horse that will sell for double what the inferior one would get for your scrub. The difference in service fee is a small matter, and it costs no more to raise a good colt than a poor one.

Clean Seeds vs. Weeds

The fact that over 300 farmers of Ontario are growing a field of grain to compete in the special prizes given by the Ontario Department of Agriculture means much for the question of clean seeds. It will be remembered that the government limited their grants to the first ten fair associations sending in their applications, so that we have over 10,000 acres of grain being grown in Ontario for its cleanliness and good sample. Some places have chosen to grow oats, others peas, others goose wheat, others Manchuria barley. Just how the oat crop will pan out will be interesting to hear.

The pea crop has had an exceptional year, and no doubt some very favorable yields and samples will be seen at the local fairs and at the Canadian National and Guelph Winter Fair.

Because it puts a premium on clean fields, the move is a most commendable one. Weeds are becoming more troublesome in Ontario. Each year sees a harder fight put up against them. The sow-thistle is a most persistent and deceiving weed. It spreads quickly, grows easily, and chokes out all grain where found. Even the model farm has its hands full with the pest. Twitch grass, mustard, wild oats and rag weed are all too common. If the farmer of to-day has not the trouble and hardship of breaking the virgin soil, he has to earn his living by the sweat of his brow in another but just as exacting way. It is a fight with weeds and some of the enemies seem to have seven devils in them, so persistent are they in their growth. But vigilance and work will overcome them.

Vaccination for Blackleg and Anthrax in Cattle

The disease known as Blackleg in cattle, although entirely unknown in many extensive agricultural sections of Canada, and not at all wide spread in any district or province, annually causes quite extensive losses to cattle raisers. Anthrax, which is quite a different disease, although frequently confused with Blackleg in the minds of many cattle raisers, is also the cause of serious loss of stock. The former disease almost entirely confined to cattle under 3 years and is generally fatal. The latter attacks other classes of farm animals, and the human subject is not exempt from its infection, which generally results seriously.

By the aid of science cattle raisers are now enabled to protect their stock against these maladies. As the human family is vaccinated against small pox, in the same manner cattle are rendered immune from blackleg and anthrax. The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa through the Health of Animals Branch is now in a position to supply preventive vaccine for each of these diseases at the nominal cost of five cents per dose. Until recently, by special arrangement with extensive manufacturers in the United States, these products were secured at a reduced cost, and were placed in the hands of Canadian cattle raisers at ten cents per dose for blackleg vaccine and fourteen cents per dose for anthrax vaccine. It is due to the fact that these preparations are now being made at the Biological Laboratory in connection with the Health of Animals Branch that they can be supplied at five cents per dose.

The vaccine for blackleg may be administered by any intelligent person by means of an instrument supplied by the Department at fifty cents.

Anthrax vaccine, which is also supplied at five cents per dose, is more difficult to administer, requiring a qualified veterinarian to treat an animal.

Cattle raisers who have fear of an attack of either blackleg or anthrax would do well to apply to the Veterinary Director General at Ottawa for the proper preventive treatment.

The Training of Children

The editor of the Ladies' Home Journal never said a truer thing than when he stated in a recent number that what we needed in America was not so many lessons about the training of children as lessons about the training of parents. Give us well trained parents and well trained children will follow as a consequence.

The training of children is easily the most important work in the world, and yet how ignorant and lazy and careless we parents are about applying its most simple principles.

Education should fit the child for life by moulding its character in moral morality. And by the inculcation of the principles of patriotism and good citizenship. What matters it whether the child has knowledge of a few trifling facts more or less as long as it emerges from the school with the knowledge and inclination to do what is right, and the capacity to become a moral, intelligent and patriotic citizen?

Don't scowl; it spoils faces. Before you know it, your scowl will resemble a small railroad map. There is a grand trunk line from your cowl to the bridge of your nose, intersected by parallel lines running east and west, and, oh, how much older you look like it! Scowling is a habit which steals upon us unawares. We frown when the light is too strong, and when it is too weak. We tie our brows in a knot when we are thinking, and knit them even more tightly when we cannot think. There is no denying there are plenty of things to scowl about; but why scowl? What good will it do? Better cultivate an even temper and maintain a cheerful countenance.

How Local Option Works

In the village of Winchester all bars were closed on May 1st as a result of Local Option being passed in January. One of the large hotels was immediately started as a temperance boarding house. It receives more trade than the house did previously. Commercial men all report that they receive as good a service and some report a better service than formerly. The temperance shareholders are running the house at a profit, and rates are the same as before. A few days ago a case of liquor was brought into town, but before it had reached the central part of the village it was detected. The temperance house and livery refused to allow the man having it to drive on their property. The outcome was that the liquor is now in the hands of the temperance party awaiting the owner to prove his property, but the owner, as yet, fails to appear. Business in all lines is progressing favorably. The liquor supporters, who were formerly the autocrats of the village, have now sunk into oblivion, and peace and a higher standard of moral life now prevail. The plea that no bars cause the business of a place to go down is shown to be without foundation. Mismanagement will always cause failure, but Local Option where properly followed up by the temperance party afterwards is always sure to produce the best results.

He's a Backslider

When John Watson of Montague was serving a sentence in the county gaol recently on a charge of threatening to shoot a constable in the discharge of his duty, he experienced a change of heart. Whether it was his associations with Paddy McMahon or the fatherly influence of Governor Ketcheson that brought about the change we are unable to say, but at all events when he returned to Bancroft he had assumed a clerical appearance, and at once proceeded to evangelize the heathen up in Montague. He refused to look upon the wine when it was red, and it is said that he could "lead in prayer" in a manner that would bring tears to the eyes of the hardest sinner. However he appears to have fallen from grace, and on Saturday last in the police court he was convicted on a charge of stealing a quantity of timber from Mr. A. Riddell. Watson, it appears, had disposed of the timber some time ago to Mr. Riddell, and later on traded part of it to Mr. W. G. Gibson in payment for a horse. He was fined $5 and costs and ordered to reimburse the complainant for the timber illegally taken.

There is another serious charge hanging over Watson's head which will be ventilated in the police court. The complainant is Gilbert Woodcock, who has just returned from an enforced visit to Castle Ketcheson. He alleges that during his absence Watson was altogether too attentive to his wife, and the harmony of his home was disturbed. With a flood of tears rolling down his cheeks that threatened to engulf the magistrate, Woodcock told his tale of woe and asked for speedy justice.—Bancroft Times.

Man's Unwisdom

The simplest and plainest laws of health are outraged every hour of the day by the average man. Did Adam smoke? Did Eve wear corsets? Did Solomon chew tobacco? Did Ruth chew gum? Did the children of Israel make for a beer garden after crossing the Red sea? Did Rebecca eat gumdrops and ice cream, and call for soda water? Adam was the first and was made perfect from head to heel. How long would he remain so after eating a mince pie before going to bed? Suppose he had slept in a bedroom five by seven, with the windows down, the door shut, and two dogs under the bed? Suppose Eve had laced herself up in a corset, put on tight shoes, sat up all hours of the night eating her fill of trash, and sizzled her hair. When you come to look at the way a man misbehaves himself, you can only wonder he ever lived to get there. Verily, the average man behaves as if he were little better than a fool.

The Toronto Word's trip to London voting contest for the most popular ladies in Toronto, Hamilton and the Province, closed on Monday, and the eleven successful candidates are given a free trip to London and return. The party, with an escort from the World staff will leave Toronto on Aug. 1st, and the return trip will be made so as to bring the ladies home 22 days after leaving Toronto. The expenses of the party throughout are paid by the World. The names of the ladies are: Miss McGregor, Miss Vandemark, Miss Hodgson, Miss Virtue, Miss Skene, Miss Stephenson, of Toronto; Miss Board, of Hamilton; Miss Allin, Whitby; Miss Thompson, Peterboro; Miss Richardson, Oshawa; Miss Flanagan, Kingston.

The Conscientious Cow

The old cow walked by the dairy shed and, in her rumbling way, she said: "I'm feeling about as fine as silk. But I'd like a drink of my own good milk." And, looking around, she presently saw a pail standing beside the door. It was buttermilk, about two days old. But the aged dame hadn't been told. She only remarked: "It's mean to bilk an Indian cow of her own good milk." And she took a drink, and she looked surprised. And she walked away and that cow surprised. And she said in astonishment mixed with pain: "To judge by the flavor of that there milk, I can't be feeling as fine as silk. I must be bilious, I'll bet a hat. When I get to giving down milk like that."

Piles get quick and certain relief from Dr. Shoop's Magic Ointment. Please note it is made alone for Piles, and its action is purely local. Itching, painful, protruding or blind piles disappear like magic by its use. Large nickel-enclosed glass jar 50c. Sold by J. S. Morton.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of the News-Argus.

DEAR SIR,—I take up the quill to sound a note of warning to my brother farmers concerning the greatest and worst pest that ever struck this part of the country, which is the sow thistle. Doubtless some do not need to be warned, while there are others who do. I have had two years' experience with it, and I know whereof I speak. This pest propagates itself both by root and seed, and anyone who has it should take every means to extirpate it in justice to the farming community, for line fences or any other fence won't stop it. If they do not they will be sorry only once, and that will be as long as they live, for when it once gets possession of the ground it has complete possession, for it crowds everything else out. They should be very cautious, and not let a stalk of it go to seed. A word to the wise is sufficient.

ROBERT TOTTEN.

Wellman's Corners, July 15, 1907.

Fasted 61 Days

For the first time in sixty-one days George E. Hufford, a lawyer, of Chicago, joined his family at the breakfast table on Monday. For all of two months Mr. Hufford listened to the tinkling of the breakfast, luncheon and dinner bell with stern resistance and determination, and contented himself with a glass of water.

He undertook the long fast to cure himself of chronic stomach and throat trouble, catarrh, biliousness and nervousness, and claims these ailments have been routed by his long refrain from eating. Mr. Hufford's weight has decreased from 194 pounds to 159 pounds. He is forty years old, and was formerly an attorney of Austin, Texas.

Nuggets

A little warm cheer does more than a lot of cold cash.

The most empty life is one that thinks only of itself.

People who sow no joy are first to complain that they reap none.

Many a good deed has died in intention for lack of a little appreciation.

Whatever is gained at the cost of character gets on the wrong side of the ledger.

There are a million ways of spelling love and none of them confined to letters.

You are sure to be disappointed in the inventory of your blessings if you count only your gains.

You determine the blessings you will receive by the size of the door at which your benefits go out.

Farm improvements are being made all over the country. New buildings, fences, and better accommodations.

The Salvation Army is negotiating for the purchase in New Ontario of ten townships, or 230,000 acres, at 25 cents an acre. Senator Cox is said to be their financial backer.

The acreage planted to sugar beets east of Toronto this year is not nearly so large as last year. No doubt the action of the companies about shipping time has had its effect. You can't fool farmers the second time.

F. W. Hodson has sold his big farm at Columbus, Ont., to George Foster and Son, who have been tenants of the farm for some time. Latterly the farm has been fitted up and made one of the most convenient places in the province. Glen Hodson, as it is called, adjoins the farms of Hon. John Dryden and Charles Calder, M.P.P.

The Methodist Church is grappling with a tremendous problem in China. The whole of West China, with a population of ten millions, has been assigned to the Canadian Methodists exclusively. A few months ago there were just ten missionaries in this immense field. Recently this force was doubled by the sending out of a party of young Canadians, mostly college men. Now Dr. Sutherland announces that ten or twelve more missionaries will be sent in the near future.

A leading newspaper recently stated that people drink "because they like to." In the light of the remarks made by Sir Frederick Treves, who asserted that alcohol was a "virulent poison," this is really the only excuse the moderate drinker has for continuing to indulge in the use of stimulants. Sir Victor Horsley says that science is dead against the use of alcohol, and, seeing that nine-tenths of the crimes committed in the United Kingdom are traced to the use of drink, and that 32 per cent. of the lunacy of this country is due to the same cause, one wonders why people still persist in their loyalty to King Bung.—Belfast Witness.

One of the drawbacks with which the Church has to contend is the tendency to endeavor to raise money as a contribution to religious or benevolent causes by questionable means. This really deadens the nerve of true Christian benevolence, and places giving on a wrong basis, while it taints the enterprise thus supported. Far better to give a smaller sum outright, as a willing and thankful offering, than to bring discredit upon the result of a desperate and unworthy attempt to raise money by questionable means in the name of religious benevolence.

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my book on either Dyspepsia, the Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are merely symptoms of a deeper disease. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. Heart and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weak these nerves and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its name. No other remedy even claims to treat the inside nerves. Also for bloating, biliousness, nervousness or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write for a free sample and free book. Dr. Shoop, Rte. 1, N.Y. The Restorative is sold by J. S. Morton.

CATS' WHISKERS.

These Sensitive Organs Are a Relic of Jungle Days.

It is perhaps not generally known that a cat's power of discernment, especially at night, is due almost as much to his whiskers as to his eyes. To any one who goes to a menagerie and looks at the giant cat of the forest—the lion and his like—the purpose of these vibrissae, as science names the hairs that project from the muzzle and from above the eyes, is evident enough.

They are delicate organs of touch, wonderful mechanisms of warning. Each one grows from a follicle, or gland, nerved to exquisite sensibility. Its slightest contact with any obstacle is distinctly felt by the animal, though the half itself is tough and insensitive. Those exaggerated whiskers on the muzzle often project to each side of the animal so far that from point to point they stretch to just the width of his body.

Imagine, now, a lion stealing through a jungle at night, tracking his prey, where the stir of a twig gives alarm. His long hairs indicate through the nicest nerves any object that may be in his velvet path. A touch stops him short before pushing through some close thicket where the rustling leaves and boughs would tell aloud his presence. Wherever his head may be thrust without a warning from the vibrissae there his body may pass noiselessly, and it is their aid, in conjunction with the soft cushions of his feet, that enables him to travel as silently as the snake.

How to Become an Artist.

Holman Hunt began his art labors when at the age of four he cut off a lock of his own hair to make a paint brush. It is rather a serious matter for the young artist rightly to choose some picturesque and as far as possible inadequate means of beginning his career. We all know the story of Benjamin West and the cat's tail. Allston, being a colorist, is supposed to have squeezed the luscious hues from flowers to make his paints. As there are probably many young artists contemplating a career, why not suggest a few new ways of beginning?

Make a brush from popper's shaving brush, from mummer's hairbrush, from uncle's chin whiskers, from auntie's false front.

No doubt the reason there are few great artists nowadays is that it is so hard to avoid ready made paint brushes. They are thrust upon children in the public schools. How can we hope for a Benjamin West with brushes a drug on the market?—Phillip L. Hale in Boston Herald.

A Dog Detective.

In 1829 a peasant was found murdered in a wood in the department of the Loire, France, with his dog sitting near the body. No clew could at first be gained as to the perpetrators of the crime, and the victim's widow continued to live in the same cottage, accompanied always by the faithful dog. In February, 1837, two men, apparently travelers, stopped at the house, requesting shelter from the storm, which was then granted, but no sooner had the dog seen them than he flew at them with great fury and would not be pacified. As they were quitting the house one of them said to the other, "That rascally dog has not forgotten us." This raised the suspicion of the widow, who overheard it, and she applied to the gendarmes in the neighborhood, who followed and arrested the men. After a long examination one of the criminals confessed.—Ralph Neville, in Outing Magazine.

A New Phase of Biology.

A widow recently came from Albany to live with relatives in Brooklyn. Her new neighbors discovered that she was given to romancing about small matters. On her own behalf she claimed to take the "poetic view" of life. But one of her neighbors was inclined to use a "shorter and more ugly word" in describing the trait. Among other things the woman from Albany stated that her late husband was a biologist in the state's service, presumably at Albany. Later on it was learned that he really had been in the state's service, doing time at Sing Sing for a small forgery.

A professor's wife came to the rescue. "Biologist is the poetic term, all right," she said. "My husband tells me a biologist is a student of cell life."—Brooklyn Eagle.

For that Dandruff

There is one thing that will cure it—Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is a regular scalp-medicine. It quickly destroys the germs which cause this disease. The unhealthy scalp becomes healthy. The dandruff disappears, had to disappear. A healthy scalp means a great deal to you—healthy hair, no dandruff, no pimples, no eruptions.

The best kind of a testimonial—"Sold for over sixty years."

St. George and the Dragon.

Other nations besides England have fought under the banner of St. George, and other knightly orders as well as that of the Garter have been instituted in his honor. He was the guardian saint of Sicily, Aragon, Valencia, Genoa, Malta and Barcelona; a Venetian order of St. George was created in 1200, a Spanish in 1317, an Austrian in 1470, a Genoese in 1472 and a Roman in 1492. More modern orders bearing his name are those of Bavaria (1729), Russia (1767) and Hanover (1839). The device of St. George slaying the dragon forms part of the arms of the czar and appears on several Russian coins. The conjecture that this was owing to the presentation of the Garter by Elizabeth to Ivan Vassilievich has no foundation in fact, for Chancellor, the first outspoken Englishman to visit Russia, speaks of a dispatch sent in 1554 from Ivan Vassilievich to Queen Mary, the seal of which "was much like the broad seal of England, having on one side the image of a man on horseback in complete harness fighting with a dragon."—London Chronicle.

Queer Positions of Hearts.

There is one curious fact which not everybody notices about the common, finger-long, green caterpillars of our larger moths. Their hearts, instead of being in front, are at the back of the body and extend along the entire length of the animal. One can see the heart distinctly through the thin skin and can watch its slow beat, which starts at the tail and moves forward to the head. Hearts of this sort reaching from head to tail are not at all uncommon in the simpler creatures. The earthworm has one, and so have most worms, caterpillars and other crawling things. Hearts in the middle of the back also are quite as frequent as those in what seems to us to be the natural place. Many animals, the lobster for example, and the crayfish and the crab, which have short hearts like those of the beasts and birds, nevertheless have them placed just under the shell in what, in ourselves, would be the small of the back.—St. Nicholas.

One Source of News.

For many years a certain New York paper received society and club gossip from a man whose identity was concealed by a clever ruse. Even his checks were made out to his wife in her maiden name. He furnished information about the doings and wrangles in various clubs—little stories involving people whose names are known by reputation to practically all readers of newspaper columns. He is said to have averaged an income of about $10 a week—not much, but enough to buy hats, gloves and canes. He was a most immaculate and apparently prosperous person. It is needless to say that he has never been suspected of this small traffic. A wealthy relative died and left him independent. When some such man furnishes the clew to a detectable scandal he has done a stroke of business that will keep him in small luxuries for months to come.—Whitman Bennett in Bohemian.

Not So Daft After All.

Daft Tam, as he was called, wandering through the village one day, got severely bitten by the village inn dog. Proceeding to the inn, he showed the mistress what he "dawg" had done. She was much alarmed, and putting a half crown into Tam's hand, said: "Awa ta the doctor noo an' pay him wi' the half crown." Tam eyed the coin, saying: "I dinna think I'll bother wi' the doctor, but jist keep the siller." "For my sake gang ta him, or else foll gang daft." "Hoots, wumman; ye're bletherin. Daft folk canna gang daft twice."—Dundee Advertiser.

Pat Took the Prize.

An Englishman, an Irishman and a Scotchman were one day arguing as to which of the three countries possessed the fastest trains. "Well," said the Englishman, "I've been in one of our trains, and the telegraph poles have been like a hedge." "I've seen the milestones appear like tombstones," said the Scot. "I've seen 'jabsers' said Pat. "I was one day in a train in my country, and we passed a field of turnips and a field of carrots, and a field of cabbage and parsley, then a pond of water, and we were going that quick I thought it was broth!"

Pepys on Shakespeare.

Pepys' Diary, 1659-1660, commenting on Shakespeare's plays, says of "Midsummer Night's Dream," "It is the most insipid, ridiculous play I ever saw in my life," and upon reading "Othello, Moor of Venice," which I have hitherto esteemed a mighty good play, but having lately read the 'Adventures of Five Hours,' it seems a mean thing."

Just a Suggestion.

"Oh, my!" exclaimed the excited woman who had mislaid her husband. "I'm looking for a small man with one eye." "Well, ma'am," replied the polite shopwalker, "if he's a very small man maybe you'd better use both eyes."

A Thoughtful Wife.

"Why did you tell your husband that there would be three parts to the concert? There are only two." "Yes, I know, but he will be so pleased when it leaves off sooner than he expects."—Fleegende Blatter.

The Appeal Is To You!

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN

For it Cares for Every Sick Child in Ontario whose Parents Cannot Afford to Pay for Treatment.

The Hospital for Sick Children, College street, Toronto, appeals to fathers and mothers of Ontario for funds to maintain the thousand sick children that it nurses within its walls every year.

The Hospital is not a local institution—but Provincial. The sick child from any place in Ontario who can't afford to pay has the same privileges as the child living in Toronto and is treated free.

The Hospital had last year in its beds and cots 858 patients—331 of these were from 231 places outside of Toronto. The cost is 1.37 cts. per patient per day, and there were 138 sick little ones in the Hospital.

Since its foundation the Hospital has treated 12,120 children. About 8,600 of these were unable to pay and were treated free.

Your money can put golden hinges on the door of the Hospital's mercy. Every body's dollar makes a difference to the Friend in Need to Somebody's child.

Your dollar may be a door of hope to somebody's child. The Hospital pays out dividends of health and happiness to suffering children on every dollar that is paid by friends of little children.

If you know of any child in your neighborhood who is sick or crippled or has club feet send the parent's name to the Hospital.

See what can be done for club-foot children. There were 36 like cases last year and hundreds in 31 years.

The Quarterly Meeting service on Rawdon Circuit will be held at Mount Pleasant on Sunday, Aug. 4th, commencing at 10 o'clock a.m.

The Garden Party at St. Thomas' Church, eighth line Rawdon, last week was well attended, and a success in every way. The sum of $85 was realized.

The sermon on Sunday morning, July 28th, in the Methodist church, will be for the children. Parents of the congregation are requested to give special encouragement to the children to attend.

At the Stirling cheese board on Tuesday 800 boxes were offered. The sales were—M. Bird 880 and Cook 215, all at 10c. The balance was unsold. The board will meet as usual next Tuesday.

A special meeting of the County Council was held in Belleville on Tuesday. The principal business was the formal taking over of the new House of Refuge, which has been completed by the contractor, Mr. Alford.

Mrs. C. F. Stickle met with an accident last week which caused serious injuries. In getting out of a buggy after a drive she in some way fell, breaking one arm, and receiving other injuries which have confined her to the house since. We hope to hear of her speedy recovery.

There are many complaints about the unfair paper set for those who wrote at the recent examinations in the High Schools. The greatest protest is made against the ancient history, chemistry, and physics papers. On this account it is said there will be a large number who will fail to secure a pass.

The members of Wellman's L. O. L.
No. 172, will attend divine service in the grove at Wellman's Corners on Sunday Aug. 11th. A procession will be formed at the Orange Hall at 2 p.m., and proceed to Mr. T. Hubble's grove, where Rev. Bro. W. H. Stevens will address the gathering. The public are cordially invited.

During the thunderstorm on Wednesday forenoon lightning struck the barn of Mrs. Wm. Shaw, Front street west, but fortunately did not set it on fire.
The lightning struck the corner of the building, slivering a board, and then followed a wire clothes line attached to a large apple tree, scoring it in three places, and thence on to a post by the roadside.

Mr. S. Holden has purchased the property on the south side of Front street which belonged to Mr. John Ralph. He also the two lots to the west.
He intends fitting up the large metal covered building on the Ralph lot for his store, and will put a stone foundation with cellar under the building, as well as a plate glass front, and will remove his store there as soon as completed. It is probable that next year he will erect a residence on the corner lot.

Ho! for the 1000 Islands

The best trip of the year will be the excursion run by the Queen St. Methodist Church, Lindsay, to Thousand Island Park, N. Y., on Saturday, July 27th, to

Stirling School Board

A special meeting of the Stirling Board of Education was held on Friday evening, 19th inst, at the office of the Secretary.

Members present—C. W. Thompson,
chairman, Dr. Alger, F. T. Ward, Dr.
Bissonnette, W. S. Martin, J. S. Morton, Dr. Faulkner, Dr. Walt, J. Doak.
Moved by Dr. Faulkner, seconded by Mr. Ward, that the clause in the minutes of last meeting, which was an adjourned one of the regular meeting, wherein it states the meeting was to take place on July 18th, be corrected to proper date, which was to be the 19th.
—Carried.

The contract for the heating and ventilation of the Public School was considered clause by clause.

Moved by Dr. Faulkner, seconded by Dr. Bissonnette, that this Board accept the tender of the Peace Foundry Co. for the installation of such a furnace and equipment as mentioned in the specifications, completing in full chimneys and all openings for our Public School, to be completed by Sept. 12th, 1907, and to provide for change of air not less than three times per hour in each room, all of the labor to be performed by the Company excepting the cement floor in the basement, which this Board is to provide; payments to be made as may be agreed upon by the following Committee—Mr. Martin, Dr. Walt, Secretary and mover.—Carried.

The Committee reported one-third when material was on the grounds, one-third when the contract is completed and the balance on Jan. 1st, 1908.

Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Mr. Martin, that our Public School be changed to a three teacher school instead of a four teacher school.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Ward, seconded by Dr.
Alger, that Miss Skitch be notified that she will be engaged as first assistant at the salary of $350 for the first year, with an increase each year thereafter of $25 until the maximum of $400 is reached.

Moved by Dr. Walt, seconded by Mr.
Ward, that the Secretary be authorized to engage Miss Ella Faulkner for the primary department at a salary of $400, and if unsuccessful to advertise for a teacher of experience at the same salary.
—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Martin, seconded by Mr. Ward, that the Finance Committee report of estimates for the coming year be presented to this Board for approval.
—Carried.

Moved and seconded that this Board adjourn until Monday night, 22nd inst.

Minutes of a special meeting held on July 22nd, at the office of the Secretary.
Members present—C. W. Thompson,
chairman, M. Bird, F. T. Ward, Dr.
Bissonnette, W. S. Martin, Dr. Faulkner and J. S. Morton.

The Finance Committee made their report for the ensuing year, which was presented before the Board.

Moved by Mr. Morton, seconded by Dr. Faulkner, that the report of the Finance Committee be adopted as presented, and that the same be forwarded to the Municipal Council.—Carried.

Moved by Dr. Faulkner, seconded by Mr. Martin, that the disposal of the furnaces in the Public School and other materials not in use be left to Property Committee.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Martin seconded by Dr. Walt, that the matter of tenders for cement basement of Public School be left to a Committee composed of the Chairman, Dr. Faulkner, Dr. Walt, F.
T. Ward, J. S. Morton, Dr. Bissonnette, and Dr. Alger with power to act, and that they meet at 8 o'clock, on July 28th, at the office of the Secretary.

On motion the Board adjourned.

G. G. THRASHER, Sec.-Treas.

Fatal Accident Near Tweed

A fatal accident occurred at the sul-phite mines near Tweed on Monday evening. The victim was Joseph Chambers, engineer. The unfortunate man had just finished his day's work, and had shut off steam. Chambers put his head and shoulders between the spokes of the flywheel in order to reach a bolt which needed tightening. The weight of his body on the spoke of the flywheel was sufficient to turn the wheel slightly, and there being some steam still in the cylinder, the flywheel made a quick revolution, and caught him between the flywheel and the crank shaft.
He was so badly injured that he died in a few minutes. He leaves a widow and eight children.

Burglars Captured

The Bancroft Times says: The two men who created so much excitement here recently by shooting at Constable Steenburg and his assistant when they attempted to arrest them were captured at Depot Harbor, Parry Sound District, last week. The senior member of the gang, who kept in the background here, was also taken into custody, and is said to be doing time in the Kingston penitentiary already.

Last week a message was received here asking for a description of the men, which was forwarded, and yesterday
Constable Stanyer received photographs of the two younger men. These were positively identified by Constable Steenburg and others.

The Miracle of the Growing Corn

It is up level with the fence to-day.
A few days more and the posts and wires will be out of sight. A fortnight hence a man and horse could be hidden in its dense masses. Stalks there are even now with the size and strength of young saplings, and the waving leaves are as an army with banners appearing over the distant hill top.

There is a delicate beauty in the luxuriance of the clematis, and fragrance is in the breath of the rose, but nowhere does Nature show such stupendous power as in the miracle of the growing corn.—Weekly Sun.

"Making a newspaper is a soft snap."
You often hear that. It reminds me of the deacon who once said: "Preaching is as easy as rolling off a log." On Saturday the parson was taken sick, and the deacon was asked to preach on Sunday. Certainly he would. He went into the pulpit, and went through the opening exercises. Then opening the Bible he gave out his text, "Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" Then he looked at it and read it again. Then he waited for the spirit to grab his mind and start on the sermon. Not a grab. He took his glasses off, and polished them up, read the passage over again, waited a moment, then said, "I don't know why;
let us pray." Most anybody can make a newspaper that way. The right thing for every moral or Christian man is to help make a newspaper. Take it, pay for it, put your "ad" into its columns, and pay for that on time.

Reforming a Reformer.

The doctor examined the child's arm, and laughed.

"Why, Lawton," he said, "judging from your lugubrious expression, a person would be justified in suspecting something serious."

"And it is—"

"Nothing at all. Merely a slight discoloration of the outer skin, the result of a blow, or—yes, there are two distinct marks. Someone has been pinching the child—viciously, I should say. Have a straight talk with her nurse, and don't allow your parental feelings to magnify the matter."

Lawton gave a sigh of evident relief. "There is no probability of it being a permanent disfigurement?" he questioned.

"None whatever!"

"Of future developments?"

"Absolutely none!"

Picking the little mite up in his arms, he kissed her fondly, and left the room. Outside a tiny governess-car was waiting, and a nurse-maid relieved him of his charge. Then he returned.

"Don't you think I had better examine you—professionally?" said the doctor.

Lawton gave a start.

"No queer pains in the head, melancholic symptoms, or—"

"None whatever! I'm as sound as a bell!"

"Then, for goodness' sake, explain yourself! A man doesn't come to a surgery, even if it is that of his friend, with gloomy forebodings of complications arising from a slight bruise, unless his liver is out of order."

"It's Maud—my wife!" was the reply.

"She left me two days ago—"

The doctor sprang to his feet, but Lawton waved him to his seat, and continued:

"And came back last night, after I had indicated that mark upon the little kid's arm. Ugh! I feel quite a brute!"

"You see," he proceeded, "some time ago she became acquainted with a Miss Tarter, and got acquainted with the Women's Rights Question."

"And you objected, naturally?"

"No, not then; but later I thought it was occupying her attention too much, and suggested it would be better if she left the rights alone. Maud flared up in an instant, and declared I was wrong in treating such a serious matter so lightly. 'Women ought to have a vote,' she said; so I offered to give her mine—told her I would vote any way she wanted, if that would satisfy her."

"But it didn't. She rattled off something to the effect that she wouldn't rest until every woman in the country had one; so I went out—to the club."

"The posters came out last week, and—well, I'll leave you to guess my surprise when I saw Maud was announced as one of the local speakers."

"Have you seen it?" she questioned proudly, when I landed home. 'They have put my name next to Miss Tarter, and she is one of the leaders—from London, you know.'"

"Seen it, my dear?" I retorted. "It's the talk of the town! The pavement before each poster is crowded with an enthusiastic, excited mob, and dirty little gutter-snipes are already making chalk-marks round your name!"

"She flushed, and the tears came into her eyes."

"Miss Tarter said I must expect ridicule," she replied huskily; "but I didn't think you would be the first to give it. I thought you would be proud!"

"But, my dear girl, I persisted, 'you have never had any experience as a public speaker, and will probably cry your pretty eyes out if you are interrupted, or—what is more likely—howled down!'"

"She dashed the tears away and faced me defiantly."

"An organized opposition already," she said coolly, "led by you."

"Further argument was useless, so I strode down to the club. The next day other martyrs were waiting, some with despair, and others with something like murder expressing itself upon their faces."

"Congratulations your wife for me, old man," said one. "She is the only woman of the local crowd who dare speak. The rest of them—my better half included—are contented to support her by their presence on the platform, looking pretty in new dresses made specially for the occasion—dresses, perforce, we masculine oppressors must pay for!"

"I propose we put them all under lock and key!" shouted Jones.

"And give them a good advertisement!" sneered another. "Howl them down!"

for the moment I half regretted the course I was taking. But the arrival of the rest of the conspirators put an end to that."

"When we reached the hall it appeared packed to excess, but as we had reserved front-seat tickets, the struggling crowd didn't trouble us. We paraded the front and waited."

"Presently a cab rolled up to the side entrance, and Jones announced 'No. 1.' Others followed in rapid succession, until six cabs stood in line, and six jehus stood grinning on the pavement."

"Then it was that we sent the captain to reconnoitre."

"You're right in the front row," he reported, a moment later, "the hall-keeper is ours. Enter by the side entrance."

"Hastily discarding our overcoats, we obeyed instructions. As we were and in evening-dress, our entrance created something like a sensation, and made the ladies on the platform glance at each other uneasily. Individually, I suppose, they didn't fear us, but collectively we seemed to startle them."

"Ten minutes passed, and the chair-woman ended her remarks. A half-hearted cheer announced the appearance of the great London leader. She stepped forward with grim determination, opened her mouth, and then—"

"Captain Turner was standing at the side entrance with an expression of sublime innocence upon his face, and beside him two nurse-maids, each carrying a young child. After a momentary hesitation, they attempted to ascend the platform, but the hall-keeper prevented them. I recognized Kiddie's nurse, and nerved myself for the ordeal. The captain was blandly pointing us out to the nervous, glaring girls, and a moment later they were crossing the hall. Though acting upon instructions, their nervousness made the incident appear magnificently real, and the audience roared when Jones and I, each with a despairing look towards the stage, took the children, and sat down."

"Miss Tarter looked first bewildered and then indignant. As the laughter died away she commenced to speak, but not for long. Two more nurse-maids appeared; the same attempt to reach their respective mistresses was made, and two more despairing fathers stood up to receive their children."

"By this time the crowd had seen through the joke, and fairly shrieked with laughter; and although Miss Tarter still held forth indignantly, it was impossible to understand what she said."

"A moment later the last two maids appeared, and six unhappy fathers, presumably acknowledging the supremacy of woman, were struggling manfully with six started little kiddies."

"The uproar was deafening, and the ladies on the platform looked like fainting. They glanced at us with pathetically appealing eyes; but we wouldn't relent, and held the children in the awkward, idiotic manner fellows do when unaccustomed to the task."

"For at least ten minutes we were subjected to a torrent of sarcastic suggestions for the management of children, and I began to tire of it. The peals of laughter, rising and falling at each witicism, got wearying, and, worse still, Kiddie had hopelessly disfigured the spotless whiteness of my shirt-front, and I didn't like it. The other fellows were rolling down their faces. Jones's youngest was scrambling somewhere round his neck, and treating his father's confused efforts to dislodge him as a good joke. To make matters worse, the ladies on the platform—our wives—began to laugh."

"With one accord we looked towards the door, and prepared for immediate flight; but the captain saved the situation. Stirling nonchalantly across the hall, he passed before us."

"Pinch the beggars!" he whispered. "For a moment we hesitated. Pinch Kiddie! I shuddered; but it had to be done."

"Instantly six little miles stopped struggling, and gazed at their unhappy fathers with regretful, wondering eyes. Another second, and little mouths contracted, and little lungs gave vent to a cry of agony, heard above the ironical laughter. I saw Maud's face flush with indignation, and pinched again—I really had to. Simultaneously Kiddie recognized her, and a pathetic wail for 'Mummiel' ensued. A battle royal waged on the platform; the waiters, cries of terror, and the maternal instincts of mothers struggling against the desire for votes—and won!"

"Maud, ever the leader, gave way first. She rushed down the steps and fairly smothered Kiddie with kisses, and the rest following, the meeting ended in a fiasco."

"I left the hall hurriedly and sneaked away to the club. Later, I went home, to find a note from Maud, saying she had gone away until I apologized. Yesterday, however, she returned, and, contrary to my expectations, kissed me affectionately, and then actually laughed."

"And that, doctor, is the reason why I called with Kiddie. Maud has noticed those bruises, and, although she suspects the cause, it would simplify matters if you were to tell her that nervous excitement sometimes causes an involuntary contraction of the digital extremities; or if you would put it in Latin would be better. You will? Thanks! Good-night!"—London Answers.

GERMANY'S RULERS.

Germany is ruled by one emperor, four kings, six grand dukes, seven princes and one simple count. These sovereigns occupy very different degrees of importance, even in the eyes of their own immediate subjects, but in one degree or another they all enjoy the dignities and privileges of kingship, and all have to face some of the responsibilities of state. Every one of them has a capital and a court of his own. Some of the capitals are very proud cities, but they are all very proud. Among them are places with populations of 11,000, 9,000, 6,000, and 5,000. Arolsen, the capital of the principality of Waldeck-Pyrmont, has only 2,620 inhabitants. The entire population of the principality of Lichtenstein, the smallest of them all, is about 9,500 souls. The capital is Vaduz, with 1,120 inhabitants.

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL

FINAL PLANS FOR THE GREAT WATERWAY FOR SHIPS.

A 21 Foot Canal From the Great Lakes to the St. Lawrence — the Cost $105,000,000.

Many thousands of years ago the Great Lakes are supposed to have discharged their waters through the French River, Lake Nipissing and the Mattawa, Ottawa and St. Lawrence rivers into the Atlantic. This is the very route that Champlain followed when he reached the inland seas and gazed over their vast expanse.

Over this route for centuries passed the traffic between the Canada of the early days and the western outposts of the Hudson's Bay Company, and this is to be the route of the Georgian Bay Canal, which Canada now proposes to build and which will be by far the shortest waterway between the lakes and the ocean.

The project has been in the air for years, but not till now has it taken definite shape. Many questions have been involved and among them, the form the canal should take. Should it be a four-foot canal for canalboats of large size, or a twenty foot ship canal or a tidalwater ocean steamer proposition, so that great ocean freighters might load at lake ports and unload in Europe?

All the questions have now been answered. For two years the Georgian Bay Canal Commission of Canada has been studying every phase of the enterprise and is now preparing the plans for the building of the canal.

IT IS TO BE A SHIP CANAL.

providing a continuous and easily navigable waterway, with a minimum depth of twenty-one feet, from Georgian Bay to tidewater. The cost is estimated at about $105,000,000.

The fact is, there is very little canal to build. Some long stretches in the rivers must be canalized at large expense and about thirty miles of rocky barrier and a few mud and sandwast to receive their children.

This will be the nearest approach to a straight line route between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic for which nature has provided facilities. It will make a water channel between the Soo Canal and Montreal 350 miles shorter than by way of the Welland Canal, the line of least resistance between the Lakes and the ocean.

Not a dollar will have to be spent on the route from the Soo Canal, the great gateway into Lake Superior, to the mouth of the French River, on the shore of Georgian Bay. The route will hug the Canadian coast, passing through the North Channel, landlocked because the long island of Great Manitoulin is a bulwark against the waves of Lake Huron. Thus a deep and protected channel from on old fifteen miles wide is provided from the Soo to the French River, a distance of 160 miles.

From the French River the waters of Lake Nipissing to Georgian Bay, the lake stretches for 100 miles, and above the bay. At low water the French River carries some 10,000 cubic feet of water a second out of Lake Nipissing, and there will be forty-six miles of canalization on this river, with three short rock cuts.

THROUGH THE RAPIDS.

East of the lake is the divide, which is only about two miles wide and a few feet above Nipissing. Then the descent begins through two small lakes and the Mattawa River, which drops 150 feet into the broad bosom of the stately Ottawa. This river, obstructed by some stretches of rapids and banks of sawdust, is otherwise broad and deep and will carry the Lake fleet to the St. Lawrence a little above Montreal.

Producers and shippers in States of the Union bordering the Lakes have taken a great interest in this project because it promises to give them the shortest and cheapest water route to the Atlantic. Not a few Western railroad men have been in hearty sympathy with the enterprise.

J. J. Hill of the Great Northern Railroad said a while ago that the Georgian Bay Canal would be the most popular enterprise that the Canadian Government would have to carry out in many years. When it is completed, he said, we shall see the grain business from Chicago to St. Louis, and the far west grain grows in the Platte Valley taking this route to the sea. Only thirty-two miles of actual canal would have to be dug, and for the remainder of the distance existing water channels could be used, with considerable dredging here and there.

He said that the distance from Chicago or Duluth to Montreal by this route would be a little shorter than the Lake routes now in use between these ports and Buffalo.

When the Georgian Bay Canal is completed, he predicted that grain would be carried between Chicago or Duluth and deep water at Montreal.

FOR 2½ CENTS A BUSHEL.

and refrigerator ships drawing 12 feet or twenty feet of water could load or unload from the packing houses at Chicago and sail to any port in the world during the season of open water of about 200 days. The St. Lawrence is open water for 180 days.

It is thought that the plans proposed by the Canadian commission will enable powerful whaleback steamers, 280 to 300 feet long, to carry in their holds and in towed barges about 12,000 tons of cargo at an average speed of about twelve miles an hour and that the time between Chicago and Montreal will be about 103 hours. The time between Chicago and New York by the Lakes and improved Erie Canal route is estimated at 124 hours. The distance between Montreal and London is 2,200 miles and between New York and London 3,130 miles.

It is expected that the new canal will have a wonderful influence upon the development of the Ottawa River. It is estimated that with the completion of the canal the water power available along the river will be almost as great as that of Niagara, and for electrical purposes it will be far superior to Niagara.

The distance between the new canal and the St. Lawrence is estimated to be about 50 miles.

miles, while the Ottawa River affords water power along 400 miles at convenient distances. With so much cheap power available and with its great resources of iron ore and timber the Ottawa Valley is expected to develop into one of the great manufacturing centres of the continent.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

A growing faith will shatter many forms. Dishonest thinking does not lead to holy living.

If takes a strong man to stop doing weak things. The religion that produces no sunshine is moonshine of things.

Half of success is in seeing the significance of small things. You must master your own moods before you can master men.

To set a child's face toward gladness is to incline him to God. A greedy hand never gathered enough to feed its needy heart.

Faith is not built by failing to take fair account of all the facts. Salvation often means making man over according to one's pattern.

Red letters are not made by looking on the bright side of things. Many a preacher says he is seeking souls when he is chasing statistics.

The possession of the vocabulary of virtue often is mistaken for its practice. You cannot weed folks to the good by a frosty smile at the church door.

Convert preachers to absolute sincerity and you can convert people from their sins. It's easy to build ideal castles if you'll let the contract for the roads to them to others.

A lot of Sunday religion would put up a better front if it was backed up by weekday reality.

When your faith is an advertisement of failures it's no use talking of the glory of your faith. Start in with a splurge, end with a dirge.

There is little to admire in the man who despises the good. The important thing about a sermon is not the impression it makes on the hearer but the impression you give to it.

You cannot have good society with bad men, but you can have bad society with good men if they fail in their social obligations.

The man who has robbed his brother of a dollar imagines that the angels hold their breath in admiration when he gives the church a dime.

SHIP BUILDING COMBINE

GREATEST AMALGAMATION IN THE WORLD.

British Firms Unite to Form Trust — Will Probably Remain at Belfast.

The greatest organization of its kind in the world, the amalgamation of the shipbuilding and engineering firms of Harland & Wolff, of Belfast and John Brown & Co., of Sheffield and Clydebank will shortly come into being in London.

The new concern will be a practically self-contained shipbuilding firm. It will produce early all its own material, and will save the extra profits which other firms have to pay to the firms that supply them.

Messrs. Harland & Wolff already have the largest single shipbuilding yard in the world and important engineering works at Belfast. They are also engaged now in equipping extra works at Southampton, where it has been announced repairs are to be made. The buildings alone at Southampton will cost $150,000, and $5,000,000 worth of plant will be installed.

MORE THAN 32,000 MEN.

Messrs. John Brown & Co. have extensive shipbuilding works at Clydebank, great iron industries, engineering shops and ordnance works at Sheffield, and they also own mines, from which the new concern will draw its supply of coal. They make armor plate and the forms of steel which enter into the construction of modern ships.

The combination will employ more than 32,000 men and will pay about $11,750,000 a year in wages. Messrs. Harland & Wolff now employ 19,000 men at Belfast, while Messrs. John Brown & Co. employ at all their works about 16,000. Messrs. Harland & Wolff pay about $5,500,000 a year in wages, while Messrs. John Brown & Co.'s annual wages bill is about $6,250,000. It is expected that before long their figures will be largely increased by the combined firm.

SOUTHAMPTON HOPES.

The announcement of the amalgamation has created excitement in all the towns concerned. Southampton, where Harland & Wolff are building repairing yards, is particularly jubilant, because it professes to see in the amalgamation hope that the new concern will transfer its main yards from Belfast to Southampton.

It is known that Harland & Wolff have been negotiating unsuccessfully with the Belfast harbor commissioners for more space for the erection of repairing yards and a graving dock. In fact, the establishment of the yard at Southampton is simply a device to force directly upon their failure to agree with the commissioners.

It is extremely unlikely, however, that the new firm will abandon the yards at Belfast, which were equipped only two or three years ago with an immense electric plant and a great quantity of new machinery. Belfast also affords them a plentiful supply of reliable and skilled labor at cheaper rates than other shipbuilding centres.

An interesting feature of the amalgamation is the influence which it may have on the Atlantic shipping situation. Messrs. Harland & Wolff have built all the ships for the White Star line, while John Brown & Co. have built for the Cunard line. The combined line has been the only line of importance which refused to join the Morgan combine, while the White Star line has been the backbone of it.

When it comes to rapid transit a train of thought sets the pace.

BABIES IN LONDON BARS

PHASE OF THE DRINK EPISTOLY GIVES ALARM IN ENGLAND.

Movement to Prevent Children from Drinking in Saloons—Alcoholism Among Women.

Physicians by no means agree in regard to the action of alcohol on the human system. In the London Lancet a few weeks ago a number of the best known British physicians published a manifesto, expressing their opinion that in certain circumstances, and when used with due discretion, alcohol was beneficial to man, writes a correspondent.

This statement came somewhat as a bombshell and has given rise to an acrimonious discussion among some of the leaders of the medical world. It may be asserted nevertheless that the trend of scientific opinion is in favor of total abstinence from alcohol, and that authorities now hold the view that there are few cases of disease in which the employment of alcohol is serviceable.

At any rate, opinions are altogether unanimous that excess of alcohol is injurious to man in the highest degree and that much of the physical and moral degeneracy of the present day is due to the abuse of spirit drinking.

Unfortunately Great Britain occupies an unenviable position so far as the consumption of alcoholic beverages is concerned. Perhaps the people of this country are not so greatly addicted to strong drinks as was formerly the case, but the situation in this respect is still melancholy.

The report of Dr. Braithwaite, inspector of inebriate homes for a part of England, which was issued a few weeks ago, affords a striking confirmation of this statement. To such homes are committed for a term of years, those persons who have shown themselves to be incorrigible drunkards. Individuals, too, who are conscious that they lack the self-control necessary to keep them from drink, can commit themselves to these homes.

THE REPORT OF DR. BRAITHWAITE.

testified that drunkenness was lamentably common in Great Britain and that on the whole the vice exhibited few if any signs of decrease. The most pitiful and in many respects the most sinister and ominous part of the report was that which referred to the female inmates of inebriate homes.

Female inmates at the time the report was issued outnumbered male inmates in the proportion of more than three to one. Further, it was shown that alcoholism began at a much earlier age than formerly and that many of the members of the female sex who had been sent to reformatories were but girls. The fact that it is far more difficult to reclaim a woman from her drunken habits than it is to reclaim a man is too well known to need emphasis here.

Persons who have had considerable experience in the poorer localities of London as well as in the tenement districts of New York and in the workmen's sections of other American cities and who are therefore able to give a comparative opinion in respect to American saloons and British public houses say unhesitatingly that in all respects the saloon on the other side of the Atlantic is superior to the British public house. It is cleaner and it seldom, if ever, presents the grimy appearance which characterizes the ordinary public house in the poorer districts on England's side of the water.

The best time to view the London public house in all its glory, or its shame, is on a Saturday night. Both men and women are there more or less well supplied with money, which a large number of them freely distribute at the particular public houses which they affect. Such a place is crowded to suffocation with a motley and it must be said a generally uncleanly throng of men and women and even of boys and girls.

THE SO-CALLED PRIVATE BARS.

are a distinctive and a peculiarly objectionable feature of the London public house. The bars are merely narrow boarded partitions opening to a common counter and afford excellent facilities for the sale of liquor to some extent shielded from the public gaze.

The ventilation of these bars is inadequate, indeed execrable; the heat is very great, as the poor insist that the temperature should be high and proper sanitary arrangements are conspicuous by their absence. The result is that the atmosphere is stuffy and almost suffocating, which combined with the crowded state of the bars is especially conducive to the contracting and the spread of disease.

English women, and perhaps London women more than women in any other part of the country, are probably the only members of their sex in the world who will shamelessly and unblushingly stand at the bar of a public house and drink.

It is not only women of the lower classes, coster girls and factory workers, but even those who may be termed entirely respectable women think it no shame to drink and gossip in the public house. In fact, the private bar has come to be generally regarded as a convenient place in which cronies of the female sex may foregather to exchange the local news and scandal, while at the same time they may refresh themselves with the beverage they prefer.

It goes without saying that women who drink must neglect their children and home duties. Unlike the man, who often has perforce to keep sober for fear of losing his work, the woman is under no supervision. She may neglect and starve her children and in many instances not be interfered with.

The degeneration of the British race, concerning which so much is heard now-days, is due to city life and the vices which such life brings in its train, and among these vices is conspicuous.

For a long time little or no notice was taken by the lay or the medical press or by medical men of the increasing habit of public drinking by British women. Now and then an outspoken person would declaim against the evil, but his voice was as one "crying in the wilderness," and seemed as if people were afraid and ashamed to lay bare such a blot, and the subject was ignored.

Latterly the question has become so serious that it has absolutely thrust itself upon the attention of public and scientific men. The latest phase of the matter has been a series of articles by G. R. Sims contributed to the London Tribune.

The articles of Mr. Sims were written in popular style, somewhat sensational, maybe, but achieved their object. Widespread notice was aroused, and the ultimate result was that a meeting was convened, at which were present the chief members of the medical profession and men drawn from public life and the learned professions.

The meeting was held at this meeting in the articles of Mr. Sims it was that infantile mortality was immensely increased by the custom among the poorer classes of British society of mothers taking infants in arms into public houses, and actually giving these little ones strong drink. As Sir Lauder Brunton, one of the best known London physicians, said at the meeting:

"My experience as physician at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, reaching over several hundred thousand cases, has shown me that the ordinary rule which obtains is: Mother, a bit and sup; baby, a bit and sup; generally the sup consists of gin and water, and the result is that this process of slow poisoning destroys the child, one would say body and mind were it not that very often the body is destroyed before the mind has time to develop."

The meeting decided that steps should be taken to induce legislation to prevent children, and especially infants in arms, FROM ENTERING A PUBLIC HOUSE.

It is a satisfactory sign that public opinion in England has so far been aroused as to clamor for legal methods to put an end to children entering public houses. The evil will be only scotched, not killed, as the custom continues to prevail of women drinking in public houses, just so long will the harmful effects of the habit be exhibited in the rising generation.

A writer in the London Lancet of about a year ago put the situation in a nutshell when he said: "The drunken woman whose duties are supposed to be domestic is a particular curse to the community, because she has not the check upon her that is applied in the case of a man by the ordinary discipline of labor, and because her children suffer in an appalling way physically and morally."

The assertion may be made that drunkenness is common among a certain part of the female population of London and of other large British cities, and that this form of drinking is almost the greatest curse which exists in Great Britain. Although the theory is no longer held that the alcoholic habit can be transmitted from parents to children, yet it is known that the children of drunken parents are invariably of a high strung, nervous, neurotic disposition, predisposed to the use of alcohol and peculiarly susceptible to its injurious action.

The hopeful phase of the situation is that the leaders of thought in all the professions in England have become alive to the menace involved in the drinking habits of some of the women and will use their best efforts to stop the evil.

BEGGARS ON VESUVIUS.

Rich Harvests Reaped From Tourists as Result of Last Year's Eruption.

Since the last eruption of Mount Vesuvius the volcano has been extremely profitable to the beggars that infest Naples and its vicinity. They are fleeing the visitors to Boscorease and Ottaviano, the two places laid waste by the lava flow last year.

Huddled about groups which might have been possessed by a skillful stage manager, the population of Boscorease awaits the arrival of the strangers. Men, women and children, shrieking and howling, begin to depict the terrors of the catastrophe of 1906.

Emotional women are moved and immediately contribute. Those who do not give freely are so beset by the weeping and complaining natives that they are finally convinced that it would be heartless not to help those who have suffered so deeply. Every day the beggars make a highly profitable haul in spite of the fact that not one of them ever lost a penny at Boscorease until after the eruption.

At Ottaviano the same appeal is made to the sympathies of the visitors and often by the same impostors. Here the beggars have made a sort of gypsy camp where they cook beans in the hot lava and lead their visitors to the lava flow.

This old man was very rich," says the chief of the beggars. "His house, his fields, his fortune are under this lava. Worst of all his sufferings was to see his wife swept alive under the flowing lava."

At these words all the beggars begin to howl and wail as if a cold wind were blowing from the north. Many of the visitors contribute liberally to the fund that soon accumulates in the old man's open palm. Some return to Naples profoundly touched by the sight.

They would be consoled by the fact, did they but know it, that not a person was killed at the explosion last year either in Boscorease or in Ottaviano. The beggars are nevertheless earning a fortune out of the sympathetic travelers who journey there to see the lava fields.

It is strange how seldom a woman cries at those times when you most expect she is going to.

Marriage is sometimes a failure, because a man is unable to think of the right excuse at the right time.

Mother—"Mercy, child, how do you get your hands so dirty? You never saw mine as dirty as that!" Child—"No; but I guess grandma did!"

DETROIT'S WOMAN DIVER

MISS BAKER FOLLOWS HER FATHER'S PROFESSION.

On Her Initial Descent She Recovered a Diamond Ring from the Cabin of a Barge.

Detroit's girl diver, Miss Francis Baker, is regarded as a protégée by all the sailors of the Great Lakes. She is twenty-one years of age, and has laid up a comfortable bank account by following her hazardous calling. Her first professional work was when she raised $20,000 worth of copper from the ship of W. H. Stevens, which was in eight feet of water in Lake Erie several years ago.

Miss Baker's father, Capt. H. W. Baker, was a captain of divers, and from the first time she was allowed to go down to the river alone, she used to watch her father's wrecking ship leave the dock and long to go with him. The ambition to become a diver matured in her as she grew older, and she deplored the fate which had condemned her to be a girl.

At last her desire to become a diver overcame the objections of her friends, and she began making work for trips with her father. She soon became his inseparable companion. She made a study of every part of the machinery connected in any way with diving, and in time learned to command the wrecking boat with great skill and assurance.

HER FIRST DESCENT.

Her first descent was in Lake Huron, where a big wooden barge had gone down, and before the wrecking steamer had reached the spot where the barge had sunk, the owner spoke to Miss Baker, regretting the loss of a diamond ring which was in the cabin.

Miss Baker immediately offered to recover it for him, as she had been planning for some time to make her first descent upon the first favorable opportunity. When everything was made ready for her to descend, her own father manned the compressed air apparatus, which meant life or death to her as she calmly walked down the ship's ladder and without a moment's hesitation disappeared under the water.

In describing the sensations of the initial trip she said that the feeling at the outset was as if some great creature with a thousand arms was pressing her gently but firmly on all sides, and as if in a few minutes her breath would be cut off entirely, but she was far from frightened and continued her descent until the shadow of the sunken barge loomed up before her. She had a strange feeling of buoyancy, and the twenty pounds of lead attached to her feet seemed no heavier than leather soles as she followed her companion to the walls of the sunken ship and with his aid climbed over them.

UNDAUNTED BY PAIN.

At this point she experienced severe pains in her head and felt as if her nose were going to bleed, but, still undaunted, she reached the cabin of the barge, where she entered, and with the aid of the electric light at her belt, sought out the corner of the cabin, which contained a small stand, upon which was the tiny box containing the much-desired diamond ring.

In her haste to reach it she stumbled and fell, and for a moment was consumed by a terrible fear, as the pressure of the water together with breathing the compressed air, had now become almost overpowering; but she quickly gained her self-control, and with the box in her hand returned to the deck of the wrecking.

As a reward of this exploit Miss Baker was presented with the diamond ring she had recovered, and it is now in her possession. The ring marked the beginning of her fortune, as she had proved that she could live under the water, and to be able to do this means a person is worth anywhere from $50 to $200 a day to a wrecking company. As ninety-nine out of every 100 men who descend into the waters of the lake will in a few minutes begin to suffer from bleeding at the nose, head-splitting pains and suffocation, that is why all good divers from one end of the Great Lakes to the other may be counted on one's fingers and toes.

SUMMER AILMENTS.

Can Best Be Relieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

In summer your blood gets thin and watery. You feel simply wretched—tired, worn out, your nerves are irritable, your whole system is out of gear. There is just one medicine can furnish this summer feeling. Just one medicine that will give you strength and vim to endure the fag of even the hottest days—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have helped thousands. Perhaps your neighbors have already told you they have helped them. They're the medicine that makes that pure, rich, red blood that everyone needs for good health—they never fail to do that. Mrs. J. A. Carriere, the popular stewardess of the National Poultry Organization, Quebec, says: "For two years I was a constant sufferer from general debility. The least work fatigued me and sometimes I could not work at all. I could not raise my hand above my head without feeling pains in all my muscles. I was very weak and sometimes became dizzy that I would fall unless I could lean against something for support. While in this condition I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so and by the time I had taken ten boxes I was in perfect health and am now able to look after all my duties without the least fatigue. When I began taking the Pills I was a great sufferer—to-day I feel as if I never was ill—thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills strike right at the root of anemia, debility, rheumatism, indigestion, the secret ills of women and growing girls, etc., when they make new blood—they do just that one thing, but they do it well—good blood always brings good health. Get it by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GREATEST SHIP IN WORLD

THE LUSITANIA IS A PALACE OF LUXURY.

Monster Canarder Now Being Completed on the Clyde Beats all Others.

four immense funnels, two tall masts, and a great dark hull alive inside and out with men is all that the public has been allowed to see of the great new Canarder Lusitania, now receiving the finishing touches in the tidal basin at Messrs. John Brown and Company's shipyard on the Clyde.

Astonishing secrecy is being maintained in Glasgow and on the Clyde about the interior arrangements of this wonderful boat. The secrecy is ascribed in part to the fear lest rival companies should learn too much, and also to the fact that on the stocks near her lies the new turbine cruiser, the Indefatigable.

The new liner is a record-breaker in many respects. She is the largest, longest, broadest, and fastest passenger vessel afloat. She was built specially to win the Atlantic record back from Germany. During her passage down the Clyde the river will be closed to navigation. In order to accommodate her, the approach to the Liverpool landing stage will have to be deepened.

She has a length of 785 feet, gross tonnage 32,500, and 25 knots.

The hull is 728 feet long, the Kaiser Wilhelm II. 684 feet. The Great Eastern was 680 feet, so it is easily seen that she has lots to spare over her rivals in size.

In addition to the anxiety about getting the Lusitania to the sea, the builders and engineers are faced with a problem of great importance in connection with her propulsion. Recent experiences with turbine-propelled boats have led to the belief that the strain upon the four propellers of the Lusitania will prove a very serious matter when this ship, with its gross tonnage of 32,500, is forced at twenty-five knots an hour. The water-turbine propellers of the turbines will tend to keep this huge bulk down in the water, thus preventing pitching, but putting at the same time an immense stress on the propellers. To safeguard against mishap to the latter is now the problem worrying the engineers. They hope to overcome it by altering the pitch of the propellers before the ship goes on her trials.

For the first-class passengers nothing will be spared. Each gets 50 per cent. more room than in the older boats. They can choose between dining in a large in a lovely white and gold Empire salon or table d'hôte in a staid mahogany dining room. The fireplaces will, except in bad weather, be kept burning with cheerful hearths. The windows will be shaped and curtained as in a private house. Lifts will take the passengers from one deck to another.

The passenger will not even be asked to take a lift. He can call up "Central" on the telephone and be switched on to the purser or the barber, the wine merchant or the newspaper shop.

For the millionaires the staterooms are to be as beautiful as the skill of the first decorators in the world can make them. In the regal rooms, as they are to be called, there will be two bedrooms, a dining room, reception room and bathroom, just such a suite as would be found at Claridge's. The rooms are all 10½ feet high and furnished in land fashion. The bedsteads are of brass, without a suggestion of the bunk about them. The broadened settees under the windows might be window seats in Park lane. The walls are hung with delicate papers, and the dressing tables are in Sheraton style.

All washing arrangements in the thirty-six staterooms on the Lusitania are concealed in small dressing rooms, opening out of the bedrooms. Every electrical device will be found in these rooms tending to comfort. Even the sheets will be warmed with electric bedwarmers. The bathrooms will include Turkish and vapor baths, needle baths, and several kinds of medicated baths. There will be a nursery for children and a gymnasium for athletes. The lounge will be lined with satinwood.

Aboard she will show lights from 1,900 windows. At least 5,000 electric lamps will light her rooms and corridors. Her population will number 3,150, of whom 800 will compose the crew. She will have accommodation for 550 first-class passengers, 500 second-class, and 1,300 third-class.

WHEN EGGS GET OLD.

Advanced Age Means Much to Them, No Doubt.

When does an egg cease to be an egg—that is a thoroughly quiet and desirable egg? This question seems to be handled with skill by a gentleman in England. His observations will interest Canadians for they have long been students of the evolutionary process of eggs. Mr. Edward Brown, secretary of the National Poultry Organization, was recently talking to a representative of The London Daily News.

"The value of an egg is determined by its age," he continued. "That may be said to be of the nature of an axiom." The enunciation of the great truth that the egg lies at the root of the egg industry has been rendered necessary by a proposal to introduce legislation for the stamping of foreign eggs.

"English eggs do not need protection of this kind," continued Mr. Brown. "The demand is enormously in excess of the supply, and the wholesale price for the best quality has advanced by nearly thirty-six cents per great hundred during the last three or four years. 'But if the demand for first-class eggs is to be maintained we must have a large supply of second-class eggs.'"

"A poor man buys some cheap eggs. He doesn't like them very much, but he buys more because they are cheap and nourishing. He gets the taste for eggs. He buys better eggs, so that his better taste, and finally he won't put up with anything less dainty than his first laid."

Saves

Labor—Time—Linen, Too

on these lines, Mr. Brown has a whole armory of technical facts to oppose to the suggested legislation. One of the most striking is that the less sand- or stamped-about certain English eggs the better. They rub shells in the grocer's shop with that abhorred thing, an egg without an adhesive.

"Large quantities of British eggs are three weeks old before they are marketed," said the expert. "They cannot possibly compete with French eggs, and are a good deal worse than some Italian and Austrian. Then why brand them as English and thus ruin the reputation of the English egg?"

A further argument is that Australian eggs would have to be marked "Australia," i. e., as being some seven weeks old. The British public would flatter itself to consume them. Yet by means of careful selection and the most modern method of refrigeration Australian eggs can be placed on the English market in excellent condition.

"In a lesser degree the same argument would apply to the products of our other colonies."

THE WONDERS OF FARMING BY IRRIGATION.

While Wall Street has been busy watering stocks and breaking its clients, the West has been busy watering land and making farmers rich. Water is a mighty bad thing in stocks, and a mighty good thing in irrigation ditches, ready to turn on and off at will.

The average man who has never studied the subject thinks that the need of irrigation is a misfortune. The fact is, that the country where irrigation is possible is fortunate. Wherever irrigation is possible it is profitable. The Eastern farmer "fertilizes" his land. The Western farmer "irrigates" his. If the Eastern farmer could irrigate he would cease to fertilize much less. But irrigation is possible only in a comparatively few favored localities. There are large irrigated tracts in California, Utah, Washington, Colorado and some other States. In Canada irrigation is successfully practised in the fertile valleys of British Columbia, and over a large area in Southern Alberta, where we have the greatest irrigation proposition of modern times.

The peculiar feature of our Canadian irrigation operations is that the sun furnishes the water. The supply is drawn from the main range of the Rocky Mountains. As the season advances, the snow melts higher and higher up the mountains, and thus a constant, unfailing supply of water is furnished to the rivers which fill the irrigation ditches during the spring and summer months to fertilize the crops. Owing to the inexhaustible supply of water coming from the mountains it is unnecessary to build storage dams or reservoirs. The farmer on irrigated land is thus assured that in the very driest season he will have all the water he cares to use, and as the ground is rich and the climate favorable he has no anxiety about his crops.

Irrigation is most favorable to intensive farming operations—getting the maximum of crops from the minimum of acreage. Although large irrigated farms, from a quarter section upwards, are now the order of the day, the tendency will doubtless be towards more limited holdings. As land becomes more valuable farmers will sell off part of their holdings at good profits and confine their efforts on more intensified scale to smaller acreage. Such, at any rate, has been the history of irrigated farming in the United States, where there have sprung up closely settled and prosperous dairying, fruit-growing and mixed farming communities. These have become the natural centres for cheese, butter and condensed milk factories, beet sugar factories and other kindred industries, which naturally locate where the population is densest and the productive capacity of the land the greatest.

Of the 2,768,243 acres of woodlands in the United Kingdom, England's share is 1,715,473, and is increasing at the rate of about 4,000 acres a year. This is a thing, as a timber famine is said to be rapidly approaching.

The number of British horses bred is falling off at the rate of nearly four thousand a year.

SEVEN STYLES OF DINNET.

Englishman Won a Bet About Typical National Dinners.

A rather curious bet between an Englishman and an American has just been made public. It was won last week by the former. The Englishman made a wager that he would give in London seven dinners typical of seven different countries on as many nights.

The continuous feed began with a real English meal, with turtle soup, meat roasted before a fire and good English cheese. On the next night a French dinner in true Parisian style was given, and this was followed by a German repast, with kalbsbraten and Kaiserschmarrn.

Then an Italian dinner was given, with minestrone, friolo misto and macaroni. A Russian dinner preceded by a zabouska and followed by sturgeon took place on the next night, and then a real old-fashioned American dinner of okra soup, Maryland chicken, stuffed peppers and sweet corn. Finally as a wind-up of the week of "fine confused feeding," an Indian dinner was partaken of, with shirwa, several curries and milkhaw.

Both men survived the ordeal, and the American gladly paid up for what he called an "experience."

"Is Well to Know a Good Thing," said Mrs. Surface to Mrs. Knowwell, when they met in the street. "Why, where have you been for a week back?" "Oh, just down to the store for a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil," said Mrs. Surface, who hates puns, walked on. But she remembered, and when she contracted a week back there was another customer for Electric Oil.

"Why is it called pin-money?" "Because it goes where pins go." "Where is that?" "Nobody knows."

Weak and Pale Women foolishly keep their way when by the use of "Ferro-China," the best tonic, they could very quickly recover their health and strength. Try it.

"I suppose you expect a tip, waiter?" "Yes, sir." "Well, it's always the unexpected that happens. Good-evening!"

Cholera and all summer complaints are so quick in their action that the cold hand of death is upon the victims before they are aware that danger is near. If attacked do not delay in getting the proper medicine. Try a dose of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and you will get immediate relief. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to effect a cure.

Never judge a man by the patches on his clothes. Perhaps he had to buy spring outfits for a wife and seven daughters.

Are You Satisfied Where You Are?

If not, and you think of changing your location, you will make a mistake if you do not investigate the opportunity for money-making offered in farming on irrigated land.

SOME PEOPLE who have not gone into the merits and advantages of irrigation imagine that the farmer on an irrigated farm deserves sympathy. He doesn't. His irrigated land, in a country where conditions for plant growth are otherwise ideal, ensures him good crops EVERY YEAR. Owing to climatic conditions he never suffers the drawback of a wet season, and irrigation prevents the possibility of a dry season. Modern irrigation transforms farming from an uncertainty into a certainty.

The average price of irrigated land in the United States is about three times the price of non-irrigated lands. In Southern Alberta the difference is at present very slight, but as settlement proceeds these irrigation lands will increase very rapidly in value.

A careful study of its advantages will convince any practical agriculturist that farming by means of irrigation is the most attractive proposition ever put upon the Canadian market.

Long courtships, he said should be avoided.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys, surely point to weak kidney Nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and govern and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Bright's or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommend and sell.

CURIOUS DECEPTIONS.

The Way Our Senses Are Liable to Play Us False.

Our senses deceive us curiously at times. A flash of lightning lights up the ground for only one-millionth of a second, yet it seems to us to last ever so much longer. What happens is that the impression remains in the eye or the retina for about one-eighth of a second, or 124,000 times as long as the flash lasts. If on a dark night a train speeding along at sixty miles an hour is lit up by a lightning flash it appears stationary, yet in the eighth of a second during which we seem to see it the train travels eleven feet. But we really only see it during one-millionth of a second, and in that time it travels only one-hundredth of an inch.

When a man's leg is cut off, if the stump be irritated he feels the pain in his toes. This curious deception is the same as any one can practice on himself by striking his elbow on the table, when he feels the pain in his fingers. Of course in both cases the pain is felt in the brain.

We do not actually perceive different distances with the eye, but judge them from various indications. When our judgment is at fault we are deceived. If you see a person in a fog, for instance, he seems to be much bigger than usual. The same thing happens when you see men or cattle on the top of a hill against the horizon in twilight. In both cases you judge them to be farther away than they really are, and consequently they appear uncommonly large.

A STUBBORN LOVER.

He Lay Firm and Conquered the Bride's Close Fisted Father.

I remember, says a writer on Irish Life, the marriage of the daughter of a well to do shopkeeper in the town of Galway. The father of the bride was considered to be decidedly close fisted. The bridegroom, as well as I remember, was of a station somewhat superior to that of the family he proposed to marry himself with. The wedding day came, but when the bridegroom assembled at the chapel the bridegroom failed to appear. After waiting long and vainly for the laggard the emissaries were dispatched to his abode to hasten his coming. They found him snugly ensconced in bed.

"Sorra foot do I stir out of this," said the prospective benedict, "unless the fortune's doubled."

For an hour and more intermediaries ran backward and forward between the chapel and the bridegroom's dwelling, striving to make terms, while the bride waited at the altar with such patience as she could muster. The bridegroom, however, stood, or rather lay, firm, and at last the father, unwilling that his daughter should be put to shame in the sight of all Galway by returning to her father's house unwed, gave way and promised to double the fortune as demanded, whereupon the bridegroom got up, dressed himself and went to church to be married.

Largest Crater on the Earth.

The volcano Aso-san, in southern Japan, on the island of Kiushu, possesses the largest crater known on the earth. It is about fourteen miles across in one direction, by ten or eleven in the other, and is surrounded by walls of an average height of 200 feet. Although the volcano is still active, its eruptions consist only of ashes and dust. Indeed, a range of volcanic mountains, evidently of subsequent formation, extends directly across the old crater. In these particulars Aso-san resembles some of the craters of the moon, where a long history of successive and gradually enfeebled outbreaks of volcanic force is graphically represented.

All He Could Think Of.

While driving along a country road a man saw the roof of a farmer's house ablaze. He gesticulated and called to the farmer's wife, who was calmly standing in the doorway:

"Your house is afire!"

"What?" she replied.

"I say, your house is afire!"

"What did I say? I'm a little deaf!"

"Your house is afire!" again yelled the man at the top of his lungs.

"Oh, is that all?" calmly replied the woman.

"It's all I can think of just now," responded the man in a rather weak voice as he drove on.—Exchange.

Toad as Assistant Gardener.

By actual inspection of a big fat toad's stomach it was found to contain not less than fifty large graveny worms, fifty-five potato bugs, sixty sowbugs, forty angleworms and thirty cabbage worms, with, by way of seasoning, numerous flies and mosquitoes. Now multiply this, and I think you will appreciate the value of an army of toads on your premises, or any number required, according to the services that may reasonably be expected from one toad.

The Woman in Business.

She handed in a check payable to Susan H. Smith. The cashier, who was a German, noticed that she had indorsed it Susan Smith and gave it back with a polite "You had forgotten the 'H'." Overcome with confusion, she murmured, "Excuse me," and wrote below the indorsement, "Age twenty-three."—Lippincott's.

IN QUEST OF AN HEIR.

The Great Napoleon and What Might Have Been.

Had Josephine borne Napoleon and heir the history of France and indeed all Europe must have been very different. In the hours of triumph after Wagram Napoleon realized that had the young German fanatic who had come to attempt his life been successful in his mission one thrust from that vulgar kitchen knife which the lad concealed would have shattered all the glories whose fashioning had caused such rivers of blood to flow. He resolved upon the divorce of Josephine. He would take as his wife a princess, and found a dynasty. Whom should he marry? Should it be a princess of the Russian royal house or a princess of another? He slept in the palace of the man whom he had but newly conquered, the emperor of Austria, and slept, as fate would have it, in the very room in which the heir for whom he prayed was destined to die. Under the roof of the son of the Caesars he resolved to marry that man's daughter. A little while earlier she had heard that the tide of battle had turned against the French and had written to her father: "We have heard with great joy that Napoleon was present at the battle which was lost. If he would only lose his head as well!"

The writer of the words became, ten months after the French troops entered Vienna as conquerors, the bride of the man whose death she now wished. She was the granddaughter of Marie Antoinette, and by his marriage to her Napoleon believed it would be the salvation of France. A man wiser in the matter than himself had pointed to a Russian marriage, foreseeing renewed hostilities with either Austria or Russia. Napoleon, he said, knew his way to Vienna; he doubted whether he knew the road to St. Petersburg. Napoleon chose to find, as he afterward said, that the marriage was but an abyss strewn with flowers. The marriage led inevitably to the calamitous Russian campaign, and to the breakup of his empire. His ruin began with his marriage to the princess who was to be the mother of his child. All France acclaimed the union with joy, which was eclipsed only by the birth of the heir.—St. James' Gazette.

BIRDS' EGGS.

Two infinitesimal white eggs tax the tiny nest of the lovely humming bird. The catbird in her scrapbasket-like nest lays four to six blue green eggs.

Four to six little white eggs are laid in the domestic phoebe bird's beautiful and finished nest.

Blue white eggs of the bobolink may actually be stumbled over as one walks along the high grass.

The mocking bird, of romantic fame, lays from four to six speckled green eggs in her loosely done nest.

Two white eggs occupy the mourning dove's home, which stands for the poorest sort of bird housekeeping.

One of the best architects in the world is the oriole. Its graceful nest contains four to six whitish eggs marked with black and brown.

Olive gray eggs with brown spots (five of them) occupy the blue jay's bulky nest in a tree crotch high above the ground.

Their Strange Behavior Explained.

A real estate broker was one day walking down the street with a friend. After proceeding a short distance the friend fell back a step and closed in on the broker's right. They proceeded twenty feet, when the broker backed up, sidestepped and regained his former position.

"Excuse me," said the friend as they proceeded a little farther along and he retreated a step and again slipped around to the right side of the real estate agent.

They continued along together a few more paces when the broker, with an "I beg your pardon," executed the same maneuver and regained the right hand position.

"Say, what's the matter?" demanded the friend.

"Can't hear with my right ear," explained the broker.

"Same here," said the friend.

"Shake."

Where to Find It.

Two sons of Erin shared the same bed as well as the same bottle of whisky. Pat waited till he found Mike slept, when he quietly arose and emptied the bottle. Soon after Mike, waking, stole out of bed and, groping about in the dark, was asked by his companion:

"How are yez lookin' fer, Mike?"

"Oh, nothin'," said Mike.

"Well, Mike," says Pat, "ye'll find it over there in the corner in the bottle."—London Answers.

Who Was Lying There.

The Vernacular Verger—In the far corner lies William the Conqueror; behind the organ, where you can't see 'em, are the tooms of Guy Fox, Robin 'Ood and Cardinal Wolsey. Now, does that guidebook as I sees you 'ave in your 'and tell you who is lyin' here, sir?

The Skeptical Tourist—No, but I can guess.—London Mail.

She Was Fed.

Miss—Did you remember to feed the cat every day during my absence? Servant—Every day but one, ma'am. Miss—And didn't the poor thing have anything to eat all day? Servant—Oh, yes, ma'am; she ate the canary.

Penalty of Lolling.

"What's become of your umbrella?"

"I loaned it to Tompkins."

"Why doesn't he return it?"

"The owner caught him with it and demanded it."

STORY OF TWO DUELS.

A Sword Thrust, a Bullet Wound and an Extraordinary Sequel.

When dueling was an actual factor in the social order of this country it had many worthy and notable exponents, including no less distinguished personages than Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson, Alexander Hamilton, Du Witt Clinton, Stephen Decatur and others of the same type, but nowhere on this continent was it so much an established institution as in that peculiarly romantic old city of New Orleans. It was woven into the very fabric of the life of the community, and many a crumbling tombstone in the antiquated cemetery witnessed the fact, though to understand the situation more clearly one should breathe, so to speak, the atmosphere of the period.

M. Augustin, who afterward became a district judge and general of the Louisiana legion, was the victor in several encounters in which the temper of the period caused him to be engaged. One in particular is noteworthy on account of the part it played in an extraordinary freak of fortune. Alexander Grailhe was the offending party, though the insult, or, rather, provocation, for gentlemen seldom insulted, "would in this day be of scant concern. But some cause of action was present, and each was sure that a deadly meeting would certainly follow. They rose together in a carriage with ladies, who, after the duel, commented on their mutual affability during the entire trip, which only serves to show how delicately adjusted was the code of etiquette, especially in the presence of ladies.

They fought at The Oaks, and as soon as the weapons had been crossed and the impressive "Allez, messieurs," pronounced Grailhe, who was high strung and hot blooded—doubtless under the stress of what he regarded as a grievous provocation—lost his temper and furiously charged his antagonist. Augustin, on the contrary, was cool, collected and agile, parrying each savage thrust until by a tempest of (sudden pause), judiciously interpolated into a vicious lunge of Grailhe's, he pierced him through the chest. Grailhe, with one of his lungs perforated, remained for a long time hovering between life and death, and when at last he did come out of his room he was bowed like an octogenarian.

It was now only a question of time for the wounded man, as an internal abscess had formed where it could not be reached—surgery then was not what it is now—and the doctors despaired of saving him. Some time after he had been up and about a quarrel with Colonel Mandeville de Marigny resulted in his challenging that distinguished citizen. This duel was also fought at The Oaks, but as Grailhe was too weak to do himself justice with a sword the weapons chosen were pistols, at fifteen paces, each to have two shots, advance five paces and fire at will. At the first shot, fired simultaneously, the unfortunate man fell forward, pierced by his adversary's bullet, which had entered the exact place of his former and yet unhealed wound. Marigny, with pistol in hand and as placid as a marble statue, advanced to the utmost limit marked out, when Grailhe, who was suffering greatly, exclaimed: "Fire again. You have another shot."

With grave dignity Marigny raised his pistol above his head and fired into the air, saying with rigid politeness, "I never strike a fallen foe."

More dead than alive, the stricken duelist was carried home by his friends and consigned to the care of his physicians; but, instead of sinking rapidly, as was expected, he really began to mend and by the following morning was much improved. The ball had penetrated to the abscess which had threatened his life and made an exit for its poisonous accumulations. Some time afterward he walked out of his room as erect as ever and soon regained his health and stately bearing.—Century Magazine.

Psychology of Gambling.

The fundamental basis of the injury done by gambling is a tendency to overrate the chances of winning. When a man speculates by staking, say, $1 on the chance of winning $100, observes an English writer in Nature, the notion of winning $100 makes a big impression on his mind and means something more real to him than the idea that the odds are 200 to 1 against him, say. He forms a clear mental picture of the prize, and the odds do not present the same picture to his mind. Consequently, he exaggerates his prospects.

Appropriate.

A minister, having given out his "notices," was about to read his hymn when he was reminded of one he had forgotten. Stopping, he made this announcement, apologizing for his forgetfulness. Then, much to the amusement of his audience, he began to line out the hymn as follows: "Lord, what a thoughtless wretch am I."—Judge.

It Wasn't Funny.

"But he's a regular professional funny man."

"I know he is."

"But you referred to him as an 'unconscious humorist.'"

"So he was on the occasion to which I refer. He had tried to be funny with a tough gent from the Fourth ward."

All Dear to Him.
